SATURDAY NIGHT SHOOTING.

Frank Workman Plunks a Man Named Gardner in the Arm.

Mrs. Ragan lives in the West End adjoining the bridge over Beasley. She keeps house—and boards.

Saturday night a man named Gardner, who is by profession a shantyboatman and whose home is in the willows just below Aberdeen, appeared at the Ragan hostelry bearing a big jag and a bad temper.

He soon got into a row and other trouble, and Mr. Workman caressed him for awhile with his fists, finally punctuating his earnestness by shooting him in the arm.

The wound is slight, however, and Judge Wadsworth will listen to explanations this morning from both sides.

A RANK FAKE.

A Woman Playing the Poverty Act Proves to Be An Impostor.

Saturday afternoon one of the rankest fakes we have ever met in calico dropped into town.

She had on about enough rags to hide her nakedness, a chew of tobacco in her mouth the size of a baseball, a very pitiful tale of woe and a note which stated she was from Ashland, Boyd county.

She was sent to Mayor Cox, who issued her a "charity" to Cincinnati, which she threw away, saying it was no account.

In about an hour after that she was arrested and placed in Jail. She told the officials that her name was McCoy, that she was married and that she wanted to go to her husband.

About midnight Saturday her husband turned up, the woman was released and the elegant pair left in a covered wagon they had been traveling in presumably for the brother in Boone county.
