WEEKLY REPUBLICAN—1897.
DAILY PUBLIC LEDGER—1899.

A CRITICAL TIME.
When maw is cleanin' house, you bet
"We ain't got much to say;"
The baby that would whine an' fret
Throughout the livelong day
Now does just what maw wants him do—
He's silent as a mouse.
An' all us other youngsters, too,
When maw is cleanin' house.
When maw is cleanin' house, then pop
He wears a solemn frown;
Without his breakfast out he'll hop
An' git his meals down town.
An' late at night we'll hear him swear
Because he's caught a douse
From some old pail left standin' there.
White maw wuz cleanin' house.
When maw is cleanin' house, by gosh,
There's soap suds high an' low,
An' water 'round you counts ker-slash
Most anywhere you go.
The rooms is cold, the meals is bad,
It's one continual soue.
An' we will all be more than glad
When maw's done cleanin' house.

THE MISSIONARY CAUSE

Address By Miss Posey at the First Presbyterian Church

The First Presbyterian Church is certainly to be congratulated on the rare privilege it enjoyed Tuesday afternoon of listening to an address from one so earnest and conversant with her work as Miss Posey.

Owing, perhaps, to the inclemency of the weather the attendance was not very large. We say perhaps, because the spirit of missions is not as enthusiastic in Maysville as it might be, or as it is in some cities.

It seemed very appropriate that Miss Posey should address a band of Kentucky women, as she is a native of our state, having been reared at Henderson, and at the time she received a "call" from the Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions was teaching at Cloverport, Ky. Miss Posey has been an indefatigable worker in the far-away field of China for sixteen years, and has encountered scores of dangers and difficulties in her efforts to teach the Chinese "idea how to shoot." For recuperation she has returned home twice, deeming it necessary for mental and physical reasons to take a furlough every seven years. She remains about one year, and expects to sail for China in the early part of August.

Miss Posey was a pioneer in the work, being the only single lady in Central China for a number of years. The first experience of a Missionary, she informed us, is marked by the keenest sufferings, the bitter criticisms and groundless suspicions so rife in an unregenerated heart to a sensitive soul are like worm-wood and gall. Miss Posey and her assistants have a class of one hundred men and boys. The girls in China are kept at home, in the higher classes to study music and embroidery and in the lower to perform the daily and menial duties of life. We may mention in passing that Chinese wives commit suicide on the slightest provocation, their idea being that the evil spirit which prompts this act will enter their husband's soul and make life miserable for him.

For self-protection, oftener than from any higher motive, the Chinaman must treat his wife courteously.

Miss Posey described Shanghai as a beautiful city—a piece of Occident in an Oriental setting. The native city, 300 miles in circumference, with a population of half a million, was built 249 B. C., and the same manners and customs which prevailed then are practiced now. To their credit, however, be it said, there are certain habits indulged in by the foreign settlements (and those militate against the Missionary) which the chief official boldly asserts, shall not exist in the heathen city.

Miss Posey made several other good points it would be interesting to relate, but we fear that we have already taken advantage of THE LEDGER's liberal offer of space.
