Correspondence

One by one our historic landmarks are passing. Yielding to the merciless encroachment of age and decay, the time honored old Pleasant Hill Meeting-house succumbed to the elements and now lies a heap of ruins. It was built in the early part of the nineteenth century by the Methodists and for that day was a splendid structure. The large logs of which it was composed were of yellow poplar, a timber that was very abundant here at that time. They were gotten out with a whip-saw, which caused the grain of the wood to appear in wavy, satiny folds as age deepened the beautiful natural color. The shingles were of the same material shaved smooth with a drawing knife. There was no ceiling, the space being clear from the floor to the bright yellow shingles. The pulpit was a box-like affair, built high against one end, with several steps leading up to one side of it. The house stood near the end of a large terrace, leaving ample room behind it for a beautifully located burying-ground. It was certainly a happy day for those pioneer Christians when the house was completed and they could meet and worship within its sacred walls. In the course of time the great enemy of happiness and christianity sent discord through political and social differences into this peaceful hamlet and the congregation was divided. One branch withdrew and organized a class at Brownfield Schoolhouse near the present Mt. Hebron in Lewis county. Those remaining, being few in number, united with the class at Stewart's Chapel on Bull creek, thus leaving the house unoccupied but for the short term of school taught in it each year. Later on the land on which the house stood passed into the hands of Captain Ezekiah Jenkins, a member of the Old Baptist Church,—(sometimes called Ironside) at Mt. Gilead. He soon had a class of his own brethren organized in it and for nearly fifty years the peculiar doctrine taught by this people was the only religion taught in the Cabin creek valley. Once a month they held services, but their teaching did not begot spiritual growth, as they were opposed to Sunday-schools and never held a protracted meeting. As time passed on the membership decreased, till either by death or moving away, all were gone and religious services ceased to be held there. After a while a new schoolhouse was built and the old building, with broken windows and decayed roof, was left a picturesque landmark of the long ago. It stood like a silent sentinel guarding the graves of those who in life had been instructed and comforted within its walls. The ruins now present the pathetic picture of having resigned the guardianship to the bushes and vines that have grown into a veritable tangle-wood over this lonely country graveyard.

RECORD OF HARRY ORCHARD'S CRIMES

These are the points in the confession of Harry Orchard which proved him to be the assassin of the century:

He planted and exploded the bomb which blew up the railroad station at Independence, Col., killing thirteen men and mangle six others.

He arranged the mechanism and planted the bomb which slew former Governor Steiensen of Idaho.

He hired a man to poison to death his former associate, Neville, at Goldfields, Nevada.

He laid a bomb in the path of Chief Judge Gebbert of Colorado, and though the Judge is alive an innocent man was blown to bits.

He buried a bomb at the gate to the residence of Judge Goddard of the Supreme Court of Colorado in Denver. Judge Goddard escaped death and the bomb was dug up after the confession.

He plotted the death of Governor Peabody, and the latter was on several occasions within a few moments or a few inches of death. He thinks Mr. Peabody bears a charmed life.

He was the instrument chosen to slay D. H. Moffat, a wealthy Colorado Banker and railroad owner, but the latter unwittingly saved his own life by opportunely sailing for Europe.

He attempted to wreck a train bearing more than two hundred persons returning from a military ball, but for once his heart failed him and he warned the Conductor.
