

No Accounting for Tastes.
New York Sun.

"You had better get rid of that stove-pipe hat; you'll be livelier without it," said a powerfully-built, red-faced young truck-driver the other day, as he nearly drove over a delicate-looking gentleman on Park row. The pedestrian had to skip in a very undignified manner to escape.

"You want your neck wrung very badly," he said, as he gained the sidewalk and looked after the truck.

The driver heard him and pulled up his horse at once.

"Will you wring it?" he asked, in gruff tones.

The gentleman took a few steps to consider the question. Then he said:

"No, I'll leave that job for the hangman; but I'll flatten your nose, if that will suit you."

It appeared that the proposal suited the driver, for in thirty seconds he stood before his fragile-looking man.

"Now flatten my nose," he said defiantly.

It was done before the words were well out of his mouth, and as he lay on his back in the gutter the expression of his blood-bespattered countenance was that of mingled pain and amazement.

"What did you strike that man for?" asked a policeman, hurrying up and seizing the gentleman by the arm.

"Because he asked me to strike him, you know," was the reply, "and as he looked like an honest, good-natured young fellow, I didn't like to disoblige him."

The policeman looked at the truck-man who rose slowly, and, without making any complaint, mounted the seat of his wagon and drove off.

"Well," said the police man impressively, as he walked away, "there's no accounting for tastes."

A Vile Trick on the London Times.

Correspondence Philadelphia Telegraph.

A singular incident disturbed the equanimity of the Times editorial staff on Monday last. The Times boasts of its accuracy and is not often caught napping. In the Monday morning edition of the paper a full report was given of the speech delivered on the preceding Saturday by Sir Vernon Harcourt, and what was the horror of the sub-editor at discovering after half the edition was printed, that a drunken or malicious compositor had interpolated two lines of his own, in addition to the "copy" given him, in the middle of Sir Vernon Harcourt's speech. The interpolation was the vilest and most filthy ribaldry that the imagination of an impure mind could possibly conceive. How on earth the matter escaped the proof-readers and was permitted to be stereotyped is a mystery. When the affair was discovered the Walter presses were at once stopped and the offensive lines deleted, but this was not done before the early newspaper trains had carried off all the country edition, and a good portion of the papers intended for the metropolis had been distributed. As compared with the cheaper London dailies, the Times has not an enormous circulation. I believe now that about 70,000 copies are printed every day. The management was intensely mortified at the unfortunate occurrence, and has spent many hundred of pounds—I may say thousands—in trying to stop the sale of the edition. Those consigned to distant places were stopped by telegraph before they could be distributed, and agents were sent in every direction to buy up any papers in circulation. The first price offered was half a crown per copy, but the price ran up, as some speculators got hold of a quantity, and finally as much as two guineas ($10.50) per copy was paid.

A Worthy Subject.

Philadelphia Press.

When Judge Cox asked the prisoner if he had anything to say why sentence of death should not be passed, Guiteau replied: "I ask your Honor to postpone the sentence as long as possible." There was a realizing sense of his peril and a lawyer's knowledge of the value of delay. A man who is shrewd enough to take advantage of every point of his case at every stage is just sane enough to hang. The hangman never had a worthier subject than he is going to deal with on June 30, 1882.

BATCHELDER'S Ventilated Egg Case.

Patented February 15, 1881.

Indispensable to Merchants Shippers and Producers.

THE CHEAPEST AND THE BEST.

THE ONLY PRACTICAL CASE.

The outside frame of this carrier contains five trays, held in place by fasteners at end of case, as seen in cut. These Trays are constructed in reversible halves. The above cut shows one whole tray filled ready to be placed in case, each egg resting in its cardboard socket in such a manner as to be readily counted, candled, or transferred from tray to tray, or case to case, without rehandling.

For cold storage this case will store 60 dozen with racks made to receive the half trays, hence this is the cheapest storage case manufactured, saving largely in space.

The manner of holding the eggs on end prevents oscillation, adding, or breakage, and adds greatly to their freshness when carried long in storage. Size of 30 dozen No. 1 cases 25x12x14, weighs 20 pounds.
