

Boston's Public Speakers.

Emerson was very popular in his day, and, indeed, Boston supplied the public with an unusual number of such speakers. One of these was Theodore Parker, and another was Thomas Starr King, both of whom have gone to the grave—the former occupying one in a foreign land. He died while making the tour of Europe, and is buried at Florence. The stone that marks his place of rest bears the simple inscription, "Theodore Parker," with the date of his birth and death. Oliver Wendell Holmes is another once noted Boston lecturer. It is remarkable that this gifted class of men should have made so small an impression on their hearers. Their influence certainly was light considering their notoriety. Lecture fees in those days were moderate, and Emerson was glad to come to this city and make $50, while Theodore Parker originated the mot concerning fame. "What do you get for such services?" asked a Boston friend. "Fame," was the reply. "And is that all?" exclaimed the friend. "Fame, sir," said the orator, in his consequential manner, "means $50 and my expenses." Emerson and Holmes have been for some time withdrawn from the field, and hence it may be said that the Boston lecturers are now extinct. They were once very fashionable, and each had his specialty, but they conveyed no real information, and society was none the better for their whimsical ideas. Emerson was noted for his clear and musical voice, which, though by no means loud, was very penetrating. His lectures were always read, his eye being fixed on the manuscript, but there was such a fascination in his reading that it seemed that any other mode of delivery would be undesirable. He limited himself to one hour, and it always seemed short. Emerson made his transcendentalism very profitable. I remember hearing him lecture here many years ago, and the next day I met him in Wall street. He was at one time the heaviest taxpayer in Concord, and it is probable that he continued the same thrift until his death. In this respect he has distanced the other Boston lecturers, as Holmes is supposed to be in rather narrow circumstances, and Theodore Parker was poor until he married a fortune. I well remember Emerson's lecture in the old Mercantile Library Hall, where his audience was necessarily small by reason of the limited size of the building. His voice charmed me more than his matter. Well, our old lecturers, who gave the platform its distinction, have almost entirely passed away. The list includes Chapin and Dr. Holland, both of whom were very popular. Chapin made more money than any other of his profession, as his fee was $100, and he never lacked for engagements. Holland also made this specialty very profitable, his fee being $75. It is said that the multiplicity of his engagements of late years created a pressure which hastened his death. Anna Dickinson, too, is out of the lecture field, after having won sufficient fame to lead her into a sad mistake. As a lecturer she was a success, and hence it is doubly painful for her to find that her new effort is a failure. It may be hoped that Anna may yet retrieve her error. She is one of the noblest of her sex, and her high-toned ambition commands our admiration, though it may not command success.—New York Correspondence Cincinnati Gazette.

AS A TRAIN over the Georgia Railroad, on which were a number of Northerners, stopped at a small station beyond Atlanta, the other day, a citizen entered one of the coaches, presented a fine bouquet to a lady, and said: "Madam, you see that man leaning against the door-post, over there?" "Yes, sir." "If you will lean out of the window and bow to him you will win my eternal gratitude." Somewhat confused and surprised, she obeyed the request. The man at the door straightened up as if shot, pulled off his hat with both hands, and bowed almost to the ground in reply. "Madam, accept not only my thanks," said the man on the car, "but of this whole section of Georgia. That man is Colonel Goodsell, and this is the first time he has had his hands out of his pockets for over seven months! Thanks—thanks—you have saved his life." Detroit Free Press.

Kendall's Spavin Cure.

The Most Successful Remedy ever discovered, as it is certain it effects and does not blister. READ PROOF BELOW.

From Rev. P. N. GRANGER.

Presiding Elder of the St. Albans District.
ST. ALBANS, VT., Jan., 20, 1880.
DR. B. J. KENDALL & Co., Gents:—In reply to your letter I will say that my experience with Kendall's Spavin Cure has been very satisfactory indeed. Three or four years ago I procured a bottle of your agent, and with it, cured a horse of lameness caused by a spavin. Last season my horse became very lame and I turned him out for a few weeks when he became better, but when I put him on the road he grew worse, when I discovered that a ring-bone was forming. I procured a bottle of Kendall's Spavin Cure and with less than a bottle cured him so that he is not lame, neither can the bunch be found. Respectfully yours,
P. N. GRANGER.

Perseverance Will Tell.

STROUGHTON, MASS., March 16, 1880.
B. J. KENDALL & Co., Gents:—In justice to you and myself, I think I ought to let you know that I have removed two bone spavins with Kendall's Spavin Cure, one very large one, don't know how long the spavin had been there. I have owned the horse eight months. It took me four months to take the large one off and two for the small one. I have used ten bottles. The horse is entirely well, not at all stiff, and no bunch to be seen or felt. This is a wonderful medicine. It is a new thing here, but if it does for all what it has done for me it will be very great.
Respectfully yours, CHAS. E. PARKER.
KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE is sure in its effects, mild in its action as it does not blister, yet it is penetrating and powerful to reach a very deep seated pain or to remove any bony growth or other enlargement, such as spavins, splints, curbs, callous, sprains, swellings, any lameness and all enlargements of the joints or limbs, or rheumatism in man and for any purpose for which a liniment is used for man or beast. It is now known to be the best liniment for man ever used, acting mild and yet certain in its effects.
Send address for illustrated Circular which we think gives positive proof of its virtues. No remedy has ever met with such unqualified success to our knowledge, for beast as well as man.
Price $1. per bottle, or six bottles for $5. ALL DRUGGISTS have it or can get it for you or it will be sent to any address on receipt of price by the proprietors, DR. B. J. KENDALL & CO. Enosburgh Falls, Vermont. 127d.
