Not Later Than Nov. 17th—Tobacco Is To Be On Sale Nov. 24th—
Many Large Orders Are Now On File In Office.

The executive committee of the Burley Tobacco Society which has been in session her the past two days, adjourned Wednesday night. At the meeting it was decided to fix the prices on the different grades of the 1907 crop not later than November 17th, and that this tobacco be put on sale November 24th.

In view of this action, it is very important that all types be sent in at once so that everyone's tobacco may participate in the opening sales. The society now has several large orders on file that are expected to consume the balance of the 1906 crop and a large part of the 1907 crop.

GOOD PRICES BEING PAID FOR TURKEYS

Local Poultry Dealers Are Now Paying 13 Cents Per Pound.

The farmers, for the first time in a number of years, will come in good on their turkey crop this year, if they are good fat plump birds. The local poultry dealers are now paying 13 cents per pound on foot which is the best price that has been paid in a number of years. And in the past few days in some of the adjoining towns there has been several consignments sold at as good a price as 15 cents per pound.

The official poultry report from New York says that there is a full crop in the Northern section of Kentucky and that the early hatched birds are being rapidly marketed but the late hatched ones will not be fit to dress for the Thanksgiving market.

There are not many ducks and an average quantity of geese. A good many of the turkeys are poor and thin which is probably due to the recent drought and the scarcity of corn and other grains that turkeys feed on.

The thin turkeys will all have to be kept for the late market as the poultry men will not receive them at any price.

Tooney Bros. received between 1,200 and 1,500 turkeys Wednesday for the Thanksgiving market.

COUNTRY COMMISSION TO VISIT LEXINGTON

Investigation of Rural Life to Include Farm Roads and Farm Environment.

President Roosevelt's Country Life Commission, now on its way through the Southern States to ascertain farm conditions and report to the Chief executive of the Nation, will arrive in Lexington Saturday morning at 5:35 o'clock over the Queen & Crescent from Knoxville and spend the day there. The commission will hold its meeting or conference in Grange Hall in the new agricultural building at State University at 10 o'clock and will there endeavor by means of questions asked to get at actual conditions as to farm living in the Blue Grass and Central Kentucky.

Everybody interested is invited to attend this meeting. There will be no speeches. The number of good roads will be asked, the number of miles of bad roads and how our roads are constructed, whether the Government model is strictly followed or whether the roads are inferior to the model. What kind of macadam the counties use.

The commission will inquire into the manner of farm living as regards tenants' quarters—whether they are good or bad; are farmers' houses equipped in a sanitary manner; are the interurban roads supplying the best service at the least cost to the farmer in the transportation of his field products and in the transportation of himself and family to and from town; are towns near enough to each other are more settlements needed; are there a sufficient number of school houses and are these school houses of the proper kind.

"RAILROAD JACK" IS VISITING IN CITY

Philosopher of the Simple Life is Passing Through Winchester.

Harry Cooper, the only and original "Railroad Jack," arrived in the city from Detroit, Mich., Thursday morning. He is on his way South and his first important stop after he leaves here is Atlanta, Ga. His home is at Detroit but he spends his winters in the South and always makes Winchester a call when passing through.

He is an itinerant lecturer and eccentric pedestrian. He can give off hand a synopsis of the lives of 1500 prominent men and women in the world's history and can tell the keys in which nearly four hundred of the popular hymns are written as well as giving the tenor, alto, soprano and bass notes beginning those hymns.

He travels in first class style, but sleeps in the open air, is a strict vegetarian and only eats twice a day. He has only slept in a bed twenty times in ten years and never remembers of being sick.

He lectures in schools and on the streets. He has odd notions about his manner of make-up. When lecturing he prefers to wear the raiment of a working man, but often after a lecture he will dress up in full evening costume. He also appears on the street in a bicycle uniform and others.

In all probability he will give a lecture at the City School Thursday afternoon and probably on the street Thursday night, though he says the nights are getting too cool now for him to work on the streets. He never lectures on the streets of a city without the permission of the proper officials and he has in a book which he carries, the permits of every official where he has been. Under all circumstances this philosopher of the simple life poses as the very embodiment of an optimistic temperament.

HENRY WATTERSON'S SON MEETS TERRIBLE DEATH

VICTIM'S BROTHER WILL HELP STATE

Accidentally Falls From Nineteenth Story of a New York Skyscraper.

Helgelein Reaches Laporte to Testify Against Lamphere.

Laporte, Ind., Nov. 12.—For the purpose of rendering assistance to the authorities in their efforts to unravel the mystery of the Guinness farm murders, A. K. Helgelein, brother of Andrew Helgelein, believed to be the last victim of Mrs. Guinness, arrived in Laporte from Aberdeen, S. D. He will be one of the chief witnesses for the state. Through him Prosecutor Smith will introduce evidence received by him from Mrs. Guinness during the time that Helgelein was endeavoring to find some trace of his brother.

Mrs. Guinness claimed the brother, after visiting her, had gone to Norway on a trip. At the time she wrote, the state alleges, his dismembered body lay in her private cemetery, where she had buried it, after securing the $3,000 which he had drawn from an Aberdeen bank through a Laporte bank. The letters contain references to threats by Lamphere against her and her children, and of Lamphere's jealousy because Andrew Helgelein had been a guest at her home. She refers to Lamphere as "that crazy Lamphere" and "that jealous Lamphere."

With ten jurors tentatively accepted by both the state and the defense, court adjourned.

New York, Nov. 12.—Harvey W. Watterson, a lawyer, and youngest son of Henry Watterson, editor of the Louisville Courier-Journal, plunged to his death from the nineteenth floor of his office building at 37 Wall street. His body shot downward for 110 feet and landed on the roof of a ten-story building adjoining. Almost every bone was broken and the head crushed, and death was practically instantaneous.

While there were no eye-witnesses to the tragedy, evidently it was entirely accidental. Mr. Watterson's hat and overcoat were on his closed desk. Presumably he had attempted to lower the window and, either stumbling over the radiator, which was in front of the low sill, or losing his footing in some manner unknown, pitched head forward and down to death on the roof below. Mr. Watterson was 30 years old and married. He was a junior member of the law firm of Wing, Russell & Watterson.

After having discussed a case with a clerk in the office, Mr. Watterson remarked that he was going home, and passed from the library through the office of F. R. Bagg, the managing clerk, into his private office, the door of which closed and locked automatically as he entered. Bagg was the last person to see the young lawyer alive. A few minutes later the superintendent of the building rushed in and informed Thomas E. Wing, senior member of the firm, that he believed Mr. Watterson had fallen from the window, and looked down from the window. The mangled form was seen lying on the roof below.

The body was removed to the Watterson home after the coroner had declared that the death of Mr. Watterson was due entirely to accident. A peculiar feature of the case was that Mr. Watterson's watch and cigar case in one pocket and a pipe in another pocket were not damaged by the fall. Mrs. Watterson was prostrated when informed of her husband's tragic death.

Mr. Wing said that Watterson had been a member of the firm about three years, two years after he was graduated from Columbia university law school. He was sure, he said, that death was accidental, since Watterson had no financial or domestic troubles. The firm's business was in good condition, Mr. Wing said, and Watterson had been very successful.

Mr. Watterson was born and reared in Louisville, Ky. When about 21 years old he came to New York and entered the Columbia university law school. During the time he was a student there he taught in a night school.

How Father Received the News.

Louisville, Ky., Nov. 12.—The news of the tragic death of Harvey W. Watterson, first communicated to the friends of Henry Watterson, the editor of the Courier-Journal, created a profound impression in Louisville, and there was immediately formed a pathetic little conspiracy having for its purpose the breaking of the news to the veteran editor as gently as possible. Telephone communication with his country home 14 miles from the city, was immediately stopped, and the friends deputed to Mrs. Benjamin Ridgely, widow of the consul general to Mexico, the difficult task. Mrs. Ridgely, suddenly beraved a few weeks ago of the husband who had been Mr. Watterson's protégé and intimate friend, accomplished her mission, and the editor is at home benumbed by grief, while hundreds of telegrams from men of national prominence already are pouring in offering condolence and sympathy.

Hot Springs, Va., Nov. 12.—President-elect Taft and Mrs. Taft were patrons at the lecture for the benefit of the blind given in the ballroom of the Homestead hotel by Mrs. Walker Fern, widow of the late American minister to Greece and Rumania. Judge Taft had no callers, and he devoted himself to the preparation of his speech to be delivered in Brooklyn.

Three of the large factories are working on South American and Russian orders, and heavy shipment of grain drills and gasoline was made.
