Coon Hunt.

The young people of our town gave a most delightful coon hunt in Sphar's woods, Wednesday night. They were more successful than most of the hunters have been, for they caught three coons. A fine lunch was served, and everybody reports a fine time.

Those who participated were: Dr. and Mrs. Henry Nunellev, Misses Mary Lane, Florrie Smith, Nancy Hodgkin, Martha Rye, Richie Lane, Margaret Brown and Lida Richardson; Messrs. Roy Tucker, John Weathers, Tom Weathers, Harold Wentworth, Bronston McCord, Joe Nunellev, Will Lane, Dr. Isaac Browne and Dr. George Brooks.

Entertains at Bridge.

Mrs. Carrie Buckner entertained the Bridge Club Wednesday afternoon in her most attractive way. The enjoyment of this, the first meeting of the Club, speaks well for the future pleasure of its members. No prizes will be given, and the games will be played for the entertainment alone.

This meeting only added one more star in the crown of Mrs. Buckner for her enviable way of entertaining her host of friends.

The guests participated in the games until a late hour, when an elegant meat course was served.

Among those present were: Messdames Strother Goff, P. B. Winn, Ed Clark, Wylie Poynter, John Bean, Lee Evans, W. H. Garner, Ed Mitchell, Gus Brooks, Steve Davis, John Worth, V. W. Bush, W. A. Beatty and Miss Ethel Garner.

Mrs. Mills will be hostess for the Fortnightly Literary Club on Monday afternoon.

Mrs. Henry Phillips entertains a number of friends, Thursday afternoon.

For Working Girls.

Two movements to help the unfortunate were undertaken by the State King's Daughters' Convention at Frankfort and both are to be maintained by the Daughters of the whole State. A boarding home for working girls is to be established in Louisville, where the girls who work and who have no homes can live amid proper surroundings. The Home for Incapables probably will also be established in Louisville, although this is uncertain.

Our circle here was entitled to send five delegates to the Convention but only one, Miss Fanny Hampton was sent for they thought it would be easier on the entertainment committee and less expensive.

These here have done a great work and have been caring for the poor and needy in our town for several years. They have also been sending things into the mountains to help the poor there.

The people of Frankfort did everything to make the King's Daughters stay in Frankfort a pleasant one. They have a small hospital there, which is a fine thing for any town and of which they are very proud. It was first begun by renting a small house, with one nurse and two servants. Now it is up-to-date. If they need money they have only to insert a notice in the paper and it is given. The people of Frankfort sent their carriages to the Christian church, where the meeting was held, to carry the Daughters out to see this hospital.

Why could not Winchester afford a hospital? We certainly need one.

DEFINITE DATE HAS NOW BEEN ARRANGED

"Merchant of Venice Up-to-Date" to Be Given at Opera House December 14.

The management of the play to be given by local talent for the benefit of the College Athletic Field, has just made definite arrangements with Mr. Dinelli for the production of the "Merchant of Venice Up-to-Date" on the night of Monday, December 14. The entire cast has been working hard and the play is rounding into shape nicely. One change in the cast has been made, Miss May Hisle taking the part of Jessica.

Various additions have been made to the original plan of the piece and the action will be brightened up greatly by several musical selections. The feature of the performance outside of the work of the individual actors will be the great football scene in the fifth act when two teams are seen in a death struggle on the goal line. This will be no fake football game but will be according to regulations and the players will be selected from among the best gridiron artists in the college and the city.

Enthusiasm is at a high pitch over the comedy and prospects are rosy for a house packed to capacity.

EIGHT CONVERSIONS AT FIRST BAPTIST

Among the Number Added Was Judge B. F. French—Large Crowd Present.

Dr. J. W. Porter at the First Baptist church had eight conversions and eight additions Wednesday night. The revival services were again crowded. Mr. Columbus Thompson made a touching address of a few minutes in which he said that in fifty years, he had not seen such a revival in Winchester. Among those who announced his conversion and joined the church was Judge B. F. French.

Dr. Porter's text was, "Ye Would Not Come Unto Me, That Ye Might Have Life." John 5:40. He said in part:

There was a great gulf between man and God, which Christ had bridged with his own body. God wishes us to return to him. Not only does he wish us to return, but he wishes us to return just as we are. Christ saves us in our sins, and then from them. We cannot get rid of our sins before coming to Christ, then his death was the cardinal crime of all the centuries. The prodigal could never get any better in the far country. Our sins may be great, but Christ wishes us to bring them to him. Lady Macbeth could rightly say, "That not all the waters of ocean, or perfumes of Arabia, could whiten or sweeten her hands," but the blood of Christ could have done it.

Wishes us to Come Now.

Christ also, wishes us to come now. There is no promise for the sinner, "tomorrow." Today is God's time. The past, with its black record, and accumulated catalogue of crime, is gone; take it from us, it hurts the eyes and hurts the heart; but the blood of Jesus Christ will blot it out forever. Into the warp and woof of the unknown future, we know not, what may be woven, but today, the almighty throbbing, thrilling moment is ours; ours for God and ours for humanity. There is everything before you that you will ever have to help you decide this question, nor is there anything to gain by delay. Mark Antony, in his oration over the dead Caesar, pointing to the garment worn by the dead man said, "This is the rent that Cassius made." It may be that an angel of God, shall point to the wounds of Christ, and say, "This is the wound made by your besetting sin."

We Might Have Life.

The purpose in our coming is, that we might have life. Life in a dying world, is the dream and hope of mortal man. I need not attempt to demonstrate to you, that this is a dying world. The vacant chair in your own home, attests this fact more eloquently than the tongue of living man. The larger portion of every name that is borne here tonight, has long ago been buried. The people on the coast of Brittany believe, that on certain nights, looking far out to sea, they may catch a glimpse of the spires of a city, long ago sunk beneath the sea. It is true, that we may catch, by faith, the glimpse of the heavenly city afar. While crossing the Canadian Rocky mountains a tourist agent pointed out to our party the spot where a great tragedy was narrowly averted. An engineer or a passenger train, with more than two hundred passengers aboard, saw a wild freight train coming towards him. In a moment he said to his fireman, "Uncouple the engine and jump up hill. He then pulled his throttle wide open, and leaped off. The two mighty monsters of steel, crash into each other—they rear, they grapple like giants in a wrestle of death—with hissing steam and breaking steel, in a death-grapple they are hurled hundreds of feet down the mountain side. But back in the distance, the passenger train and its precious cargo are safe. Christ met death and hell at Golgotha, and after the sun had refused to gaze upon so sad a scene, and the dead had come forth from their caverns of clay, and God himself, hallowed his eyes from the terrible tragedy, Christ conquered and placed death and sin beneath his feet. Now we may truly sing, "Redeemed! Redeemed! Redeemed by the blood of the Lamb!"

"Ye Would Not Come."

Mark you, it is not "Ye cannot come," but "Ye would not come." A stubborn will stands tonight between you and your Saviour. God will break your will, or your heart—which shall it be?

Do not offer any excuse tonight, that you would not offer, if you were going to stand in the presence of Christ tonight. Come, though your coming be as the tottering of a little child, that is just learning to walk. Come your own way, but come to your Christ. I once knew a drunkard, whose wife and children had left him, with the exception of

MISS CLAY IS AGAIN ELECTED PRESIDENT

Lexington Woman Heads the Kentucky Equal Right's Association.

RICHMOND, Ky., Nov. 19.—The second last day's session of the Kentucky Equal Rights Association convened here at 10 o'clock yesterday morning, with a large attendance.

Miss Laura Clay, of Lexington, was unanimously chosen president; Mrs. M. C. Cramer, of Lexington; Mrs. Mary B. Clay, of this city, and Mrs. N. S. McLaughlin, of Covington, were elected vice presidents; Mrs. M. C. Roark, corresponding secretary; Mrs. E. M. Roebuck, of Newport, secretary, and Mrs. I. H. Shepherd, treasurer, all of whom are the incumbents in these respective positions.

The afternoon session was taken up with the report of the national convention at Buffalo by Miss Clay, recommendations on church work and industrial problems affecting women and children, and a discussion on "Peace and Arbitration," led by Miss Laura White, of Ashland.

The evening session was interestingly taken up with an address by C. C. Wallace, as a representative of the Republican party of this county, in which the delegates were addressed as prospective voters, a Democratic representative having addressed them last evening on the same subject.

An address by Rev. Anna H. Shaw concluded one of the most encouraging conventions the Kentucky Equal Rights Association has ever held.

This is also the first time the association has been addressed by both Democratic and Republican speakers as prospective voters.

YELLOW PINE ON BOOM.

Splendid Reports Made By the Trade in the South.

TIFTON, Ga., Nov. 19.—Signs of a returning boom in the yellow pine lumber business were reported by representatives of twenty-six yellow pine manufacturers belonging to the Georgia-Florida Sawmill Association, at a meeting here, Monday.

Their reports showed the mills to be booked to run until the holidays, with a disposition to refuse new business under the expectation of receiving better prices by waiting until the first of the year before booking more orders.

Speakers at the meeting declared that a reduction in the tariff on lumber would close down every mill in the yellow pine belt, and a committee was appointed to appear before the Ways and Means Committee at Washington to oppose such reduction.
