

THE CLIMAX.

FRENCH TIPTON, Wm. G. WHITE.

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 23, 1887.

THE CLIMAX from now until January 1, 1888, for $1.50.

Baker Pasha, the famous English Egyptian soldier is dead.

Yellow fever has nearly disappeared from Tampa, Florida.

The Dutch steamer Scholten was sunk in the English Channel Sunday and 132 lives lost.

Herr Most, the most red-handed anarchist in New York, has been sent to jail for making incendiary speeches.

Forty cars of the Chesapeake & Ohio and Northwestern road, packed with cotton valued at $650,000, and a compress valued at $125,000 were burned at Memphis on Saturday.

Senator Voorhees says of the New York election: "It's glorious, glorious. The result of these elections means the continued ascendancy of the Democratic party for the next twenty-five and perhaps fifty years, and it means the re-nomination of Cleveland and his triumphant election. It also settles Blaine. He will not be a candidate next year, for he is shrewd enough to see that no Republican can be elected."

Stewart, the Wichita, Kansas, drug clerk, who was fined $29,800, and sentenced to jail for seven years for violating the local option law, has been released on the payment of one hundred dollars and costs. We said at the time that the finding of the Court was ridiculous and would never be executed; that friends of Stewart on the jury have fixed the penalty purposely so severe that he would be pardoned, or that in a moment of blind zeal the friends of local option had imposed a penalty beyond the limit allowed by the law. It now transpires that the Attorney General agreed with Stewart that he should go free with the payment of a hundred dollars and a few days in jail, if he would allow the enormous verdict to go against him as a warning to other violators. A real $500 fine with 90 days in jail would have been far more effective.

BRICKKILN MONUMENT. The handsome monument erected by the State of Kentucky to the memory of John W. Breckinridge, valued at $10,000, was unveiled at Lexington on last Wednesday. Senator Blackburn delivered the address. The monument stands on Cheapside, and is seen mounted with a heroic statue that faithfully represents the distinguished Kentuckian.

SUNDAY FIRES. Sunday was most destructive in the way of fires. Barnum's menagerie was burned. Loss, $700,000; insurance, $100,000. William Warfield's magnificent residence near Lexington, with several costly oil paintings and other contents destroyed. Loss, $17,000. Elkton, Ky., lost three hotels and a bank. Loss, $25,000. The entire town of Granby, Mo., was swept away. Galveston, Texas, lost $58,000 in cotton. Pulaski and Wayne counties had 26 square miles of wood on fire. Other and smaller fires too tedious to enumerate.

THE BALDWIN-GREEN TRAGEDY. The disastrous meeting at Lexington, on last Wednesday, between Lewis D. Baldwin, of Nicholasville, and Thomas M. Green, of Maysville, was not unexpected. Nevertheless the tragedy has created a more profound sensation than any occurred in this kind that has befallen Kentucky since the killing of young Henry Clay in Louisville.

The trouble grew out of the August election made in Jessamine county. There were two Democratic candidates for the Legislature—Hon. N. D. Miles, the former member, and Hon. William T. Jones, formerly a resident of Madison county. The contest was heated and the result a muddle. Election day involved Baldwin in a difficulty, as he was a leading Jones supporter. The points of two precincts were not marked, and intense feeling resulted. Indictments were found against several parties, including Baldwin, charging various things.

Thomas M. Green, staff correspondent of the Cincinnati Commercial Gazette, visited Nicholasville, and wrote up the already much talked matter, in which letter he was particularly severe on Baldwin. The letter was answered by Baldwin, and in no mild manner. This led together letters by Green and the two men, personally unknown to each other, became enemies.

Their first meeting was in Lexington, on last Wednesday, about 11 o'clock, and resulted in the almost instant death of Baldwin, and the dangerous wounding of Green. Baldwin acted unwisely, and is believed by his friends to have thrown his life away. It is difficult to learn precisely what transpired. The streets were filled with people who had assembled to be present at the ceremonies of unveiling the Breckinridge monument, and there is no end to the reports in circulation. But the fullest, and one which we consider the most accurate, is given by Sheriff Mosley, of Jessamine county, in a telegram to the Enquirer, and which we hereunder reproduce. The telegram says: Sheriff George B. Mosley, who accompanied Baldwin to Lexington, and was with him when he met Green, gives this account of the tragedy: "In going to the Breckinridge monument, I was with Green to-day, and he had a difficulty, but I saw him, and Baldwin promised to take his advice. As soon as they arrived at Lexington W. W. Baldwin, of Mayville, saw Col. Lewis D. Baldwin, and said: 'Law, Green is here, and I want you and him to fix up your trouble. I have been speaking to Green about it. Don't have any difficulty, to which Baldwin had assented. Baldwin and Mosley then went to the stock sale in front of the Pontif Hotel stable, and Baldwin remarked: 'Come, we did not come to Lexington to buy horses; let us go to the Pontif Hotel, and Baldwin saw Green coming up Main, and said to his companion:

"There comes Green now." "Don't say any thing to him," said Mosley. They met on the crossing, and Baldwin accosted him.

"Your name is Green? My name is Baldwin, and, sir, you owe me an apology."

"Green said: 'What for?'"

"For the shameful way you wrote up my country and me, and demanded an apology."

"Green said slowly, eyeing Baldwin: 'I am going there (pointing to the horse sale), to attend to business, and after that I am going there (pointing to the Breckinridge monument), and I want no trouble.'"

Baldwin, growing greatly excited, said: 'You are a damned scoundrel, and I am ready to settle.'"

Green said: 'I have none for you.' Mosley said: 'Baldwin, come, don't have a difficulty to-day, pulling at his arm.' Baldwin then said: 'You are an infernal scoundrel.'"

Green: 'You may call me what you please, and express your opinion freely, but I want to do with you as you do with me.'"

Baldwin then repeated his epithets in the most violent abuse, and provoked Green to strike at him, but did not hit him, Baldwin dodging the blow and then drawing his pistol, with which he hit Green over the head. Green then stepped back a few feet, and then drawing his pistol, began. Mosley is not sure whose revolver was fired first, but he says that Baldwin had all advantages, but did not take them, having his revolver at Green's forehead threateningly, and lowering it as he was reloading, and Green did not draw his revolver. Baldwin did not want to be a murderer.

This statement, made by our Sheriff, is believed to be the correct version of the deplorable tragedy, and was the only outcome of Baldwin's boldness and rashness.

W. H. Polk, editor of the Lexington Drummer, was shot twice in the hand while trying to separate the combatants, and his account of the trouble agrees substantially with Sheriff Mosley's.

Baldwin was shot three times—once in the shoulder and twice near and above the heart. He died within three minutes, and uttered only the words, 'Oh, my God!' His body was taken into the Phoenix hotel.

Green walked into the hotel, sent for a surgeon, and then went to his room. He was shot in the abdomen, the ball ranging around to the back where it was cut out.

Baldwin's funeral occurred at Nicholasville on Friday, and it is said that three thousand people were present. He was a wonderfully popular man, and numbers of friends from adjoining counties were present.

Lewis D. Baldwin was born in Clark county thirty-seven years ago, and received his education when about 21 years old. He was a merchant for a time, but subsequently was clerk of the Circuit Court for ten years. For three years he has been Deputy Collector of Internal Revenue, and in the prosecution of his business has made numerous trips to Richmond. He married a Miss Brough, and has a wife and six children. One sister is the wife of Senator Rodney Haggard, of Winchester. His father was William Baldwin, a brave follower of John Morgan, who was killed in battle at Green River Bridge while waiting for the arrival of Ex-Governor Clark James Taylor, of Richmond.

William Baldwin, father of deceased, came from Lexington to Richmond forty years ago in the employ of Pat Doyle, a grocer who did business in the little white store next the old Francis house in First street. Several years later he married William Baldwin, and his brother John Baldwin to the mouth of Clear Creek, on Muddy Creek at old Friendship church, with a stock of groceries, and they named the place Doyleville. William married a daughter of Lewis Eads, who was killed in the winter of 1862 by his slaves, one of whom, Clabe, was hanged in Richmond in the summer of 1863, and was the last person hanged in Madison county by due process of law.

A sister of Mrs. William Baldwin married later of Mr. J. H. Powell, of Richmond. A brother married a daughter of Samuel Shearer, Sr., and one of two other brothers live near Doyleville. Sam Baldwin, who lives near Red House, is an uncle, and John E. Baldwin, who lives near Richmond, is a cousin of L. D. Baldwin.

Thomas M. Green is one of the best known newspaper men in Kentucky. He is a fearless writer, and the most difficult man in the State to combat in a newspaper controversy. He made a long and bitter war on Ex-Chief Justice Hall's, charging mutilation of records and other things. He has been a long time in the State to combat in a newspaper controversy. THIN COLUMN. The engineer of the Thin Column has grown serious of late feeling sorry for thanksgiving turkeys, perhaps.

W. S. Adams, of the Flint creek country, says he has crawled out there that will work a hole from the natural gas well in Richmond to the Kentucky river by the first of January, if you will drop them into the well and give them the right of way.

"What is an auroraborealis?" This is the question we asked a gray-haired citizen who resides near Richmond, and here is his answer: "This ruddy flame shot up from neither hell, where the good angels send a season's gift to babies' eyes and give the damned some breath."

Do you want a hand? The subjoined postal card from Clay City, addressed to "Mr. Editor Richmond Madison Co. Ky.," has reached us. We have no time to look for a place, and publish the card that any person in need of a hand or agent, may correspond with the gentleman: "Our editor I send myself as a stranger to drop you a few lines to see if you would do me a favor I ask you as a friend to see if you can get me an employment in your town I would like to have a job in some house that if you of any body that wants an agent for my clear let me know and I will oblige you send me one of your Papers and I will try to get subscribers for you soon WESLEY C. The Magazine of American History

For November is one of the brightest and most richly illustrated issues of the year. Oliver Cromwell's portrait appears as its frontispiece, incident to the romantic story of the first settlement of Shelter Island, in 1652.

The paper is forming on a multitude of hitherto obscure points in early American history, and is delightfully diversified with incidents. Rev. Philip Schaff, D. D., contributes a second paper on the "Relation of Church and State in America," a continuation of his lawyer-like discussion of government's attitude toward religion. A very pleasant winter sketch is by W. A. Rorer, on the "Hamilton Ononda Academy in 1874," the gem of Hamilton College. The fourth article in this superb number is a study by Charles H. Peck of the public life and character of "Aaron Burr," in which he seeks to substitute the natural explanations for the acts and misdeeds of his extraordinary subject. Then follows from G. Brown Goode, of the Smithsonian Institute at Washington, "An Interesting Dialogue in 1874, Whittier," Judge J. T. Farrell, of Washington, contributes "Horace Greeley's Reconciliation with the South," and T. J. Chapman, A. M., writes an interesting paper on the "Religious Movement in 1800." The shorter articles are varied and entertaining. The number concludes with its carefully edited department of Original Documents, Minor Topics, Notes, Queries, Replies, Society, etc., well filled its "Historic and Social Jottings" illustrated, and a dozen or more ably written book reviews. Price, $5.00 a year. Published at 743 Broadway, New York City.

HARPER'S MAGAZINE

For November is a brilliant conclusion to the seventy-fifth volume. Both of the serials—"Narka," by Kathleen O'Meara, and "April Hopes," by W. D. Howells—come to a close, with the artistic triumph of Narka and the wedding of Boston lovers. The last of Mr. Bayard Rustin's "Notes of Southern Life and scenery finds a charming subject in the Bayou region, where Joe Jefferson lives. By thus ending the continued series of novels and articles, the Magazine prepares for a magnificent Holiday Number for December, in which every article and story will be complete. The frontispiece is an engraving from the exquisite painting by F. S. Church, called "A Fairy Tale." The meaning of the picture is interpreted by an anonymous in a sonnet of sublime conception. The opening article by upon one of the charming Meccas of Southern California to which invalids resort—Santa Barbara. The author, Edward Roberts, a resident of that town He depletes in narrative from the attractions of the "American Nice," as he calls it. The Italian vessels of the Santa Barbara Bay and the surrounding qualities of climate, springs, and fruits, are entertainingly set forth. The old Franciscan Mission, hazy with a century's history and replete with curious associations, is one of the important features of the paper, and is fully illustrated, as are the other picturesque subjects.

BEREA.

Mrs. E. B. Eason, of Lincoln, made a flying visit to her parents last week.

Mr. J. T. Roberson has built a fine commodious barn on the rear of his home lot.

Mr. Josiah Burdette is building an extensive addition to his home, the residence of Morgan Burdette.

Mr. Wright, wife of Prof. Wright, is still on the sick list, not having recovered sufficiently to sit up at all. Dr. Pigg is her attending physician.

The Temperance organization, at this place held its annual meeting last Tuesday evening. After the literary exercises and address, the election of officers for the ensuing year occurred.

Mrs. L. M. Dodge was elected President, and Mr. S. F. Hanson Secretary.

Thanksgiving will be observed at the College ( Chapel with appropriate services, but not after the usual stereotyped pattern. Address—historical, patriotic and religious—with related topics will be given by J. F. Browne, L. V. Dodge, B. G. Hunting and others. Appropriate Anthems, Quartettes and pieces for congregational singing will be prepared by Prof. Wright.

News from Owingsville says: Never before in the history of tobacco raising in this part of the country have prices ruled so high or purchasers so eager. Mr. Smoot has just sold a lot of 500 pounds at 20 cents a pound. The $100,000 obtained for this tobacco represents Mr. Smoot's profit for the year, as he had previously sold enough to pay all the purchases. S. B. & H. S. Goodpastor have refused 30 cents for tobacco, but not after the usual stereotyped pattern. Address—historical, patriotic and religious—with related topics will be given by J. F. Browne, L. V. Dodge, B. G. Hunting and others. Appropriate Anthems, Quartettes and pieces for congregational singing will be prepared by Prof. Wright.
