MANAGING CHILDREN.

Why They Should be Managed. An important point in managing children is to always have ready some thing for the little hands to do at those times which come quite often on rainy and other days when, tired of play, they idly gaze through the window or wander aimlessly about, not knowing what to do with themselves.

Children at such times are a great trial to the busy and often nervous people of the house, and are quite likely to be scolded, though such a course is so unwise and unjust that it can lead only to the worst results in the child's future.

Calm and approving words, kindly spoken, are necessary in such cases, and are usually very effective, but words uttered in a sharp, scolding tone must in most cases work an injury to the child's disposition.

It is all the more sad, because the mother should be so easily managed by a very little attention of the mother's part.

How often we hear mothers or older sisters say to some little child who is full of desire to do something, "You know how: 'Do get something to do, how lazy you are; I never saw such a good-for-nothing child. I am sure I don't know what is to become of you," and a great deal more of such talk, which perhaps too much so.

The child at such times is not in fault. It is the mother's duty to see that suitable work is always ready, and she should require the child to do a moderate task for which she should not be afraid to give a due measure of praise after it is done.

It is worthy of note that the work given to a child has a great influence in moulding the mind and taste. A child kept always at knitting stockings or cutting carpet-rags will be very practical, perhaps too much so.

Another mother will have a variety of work, both useful and ornamental. Some parents think it useless to teach boys to sew or knit. It is not, however, for there are many times in a boy's life when such knowledge may be useful.

I have often observed that many college boys could mend their own clothes while they were quite up in their studies. I think the subject should be thoughtfully considered by parents, seeing to it that time should never hang to their children's hands for want of something to do.

A MARVEL OF DELHI.

The Mogul's Peacock Throne and How It Was Destroyed.

Of all the costly wonders that the palace of the Mogul Emperors at Delhi contained, the most wonderful and the most costly was the peacock throne.

It was constructed during the reign of the magnificent Shah Jehan, and was the work of a Frenchman, Austin, of Bordeaux, who had sought refuge at the Mogul's court. It was estimated that the value of the wonderful throne was 6,000,000 pounds sterling, or nearly $30,000,000.

It stood in the center of the beautiful "Hall of Private Audiences," which is still to be seen in the ill-fated state of Delhi, and which thus formed a fitting center for the throne.

The "Archaeology of Delhi," hereof, as quoted by Carr Stephen, gives the following description of the throne: "In this hall was the famous peacock throne, so called from its having the figures of two peacocks standing behind it, their tails being expanded, and the whole so inlaid with sapphires, rubies, emeralds, pearls and other precious stones of appropriate colors as to represent life. The throne itself was six feet long by four feet wide; it stood on six massive feet, which, with the body, were of solid gold inlaid with rubies, emeralds and diamonds. It was surmounted with a canopy of gold supported by twelve pillars, all richly embellished with costly gems, and a fringe of pearls ornamented the border of the canopy. Between the two peacocks stood a figure of a parrot of the ordinary size, said to have been carved out of a single emerald.

On each side of the throne stood an umbrella, and the throne was adorned with a profusion of diamonds, rubies and pearls. They were formed of crimson velvet thickly embroidered and fringed with pearls, the handles, eight feet high, being of gold, studded with diamonds.

Some descriptions of the throne mention that it was a single peacock, but the best authorities credit the two. It has been held that the famous Koh-i-noor (mountain of light) was one of the jewels that ornamented the throne, and as this diamond, which has since come into possession of Victoria, was owned by Shah Jehan, the story may be true. Shah Jehan was the father of the famous Aurangzeb, who in 1658, expelled the empire from him, and cast him into prison. According to some historians it was Aurangzeb who built the peacock's throne, but the weight of authority is in favor of Shah Jehan.

When Delhi was sacked by the Persians under Nadir Shah in 1739, the throne was plundered of its jewels, broken up and carried away. A block of white marble now marks the spot where once stood this famous throne. The beautiful palace which once contained it has been turned into a fort by the English; and hideous barracks disfigure the hall of private audience where once the great Mogul sat in rough splendor. "Six thousand glories mundi!"—Notes and Queries.

Europeans who have been foolish enough, either in youth or age, to tattoo themselves like Fiji Islanders, Patagonians or any other race of pig-sticker savages, may be interested to hear that Dr. Variot, of Paris, has discovered a simple but effective method of removing red or blue pig-sticker devices from the skin.
