Exaggerated Cruelty.

A well known gentleman took horse exercise daily, accompanied by a magnificent bloodhound, until he conceived an enthusiasm for cycling, when he altered the program by leaving the bloodhound at home and taking his companion to the fine distance.

The pair were passing through a village recently when a laboring youth remarked to his "pal":

"If I see your minister O'ud put a stop to this 'ere illegit' business."

"Why?" queried the other.

"Cos it's wot'er he stopped, if only for the sake o' that dog as is a puller in behind these wheels."

"It ain't sport; it's cruelty to animals."

"Exercise!" retorted the other scornfully. "I've call that exercise? You never saw that dog afore 'is master started kickin' did yer?"

"No, I didn't."

"Well," said the youth, "e'er one o' th' finest bloodhounds you ever clapped eyes on, an' wot'er's name? 'Is lady's deeviled away to nowt, while 'is legs is worn clean dry 'n' th' stumps. O! rest, it's cruelty ter hantula!" - London Hylander.

Cut His Money's Worth.

A lady patient was recently presented, and an amusing incident was noted in connection with the case. One of the witnesses called by the police was an individual who did not appear to be overburdened with intelligence. During a smart cross examination defendant's counsel asked him:

"On first going into the room did you pay a shilling fee to the defendant?"

"Yes," was the reply.

"What did she tell you to return for the money?"

"Oh," said the witness, "she told me lots o' things, some on 'em true, some on 'em half true an' some on 'em less."

"Now?" continued the counsel after the laughter had died away, "this is the point I wish to get at. Was there any attempt at imposition? Did you lady impose upon you at all?"

"Oh, dear, no!" was the response. "I knowed it wot'er an' gummus, so there couldn't be no imposition. Besides, I wot'er a lady's skill as I gaw her, to start with!" - London Tri-Hits.

Marriage in Piccadilly.

A peculiar custom, founded on a broad basis of common sense as well as the idea of complete partnership, is that which passes a new bride through a kind of examination in the trade of her husband. It may, of course, have become something of a burlesque, and the bride may purposely show less dexterity than she would. Still, the conviction of the wife as a homemaker is very clearly shown in the performance. If the young wife's husband be a farmer, she will be asked to harness a horse and cart and to harrow a small piece of land. If her choice has fallen on an ironworker, she must hammer a piece of iron; if on a miller, she must measure out wheat from a bushel at the church door; if on a sailor, it is supposed to be her duty to strike the anchor; if on a sailor, she has to clean and mend some netting, and so on with the other occupations. Evidently the keeping of an idle wife is not understood in Piccadilly. - T. P.'s London Weekly.

Whale and Elephant Meat.

There is something unpleasant about the thought of eating whale meat, but it is said that the reality is very palatable. Japan has quite a trade in canned and salted whale meat, and there is to be a campaign to educate the European peoples to like it. Some whaling companies have distributed from their headquarters samples of canned whale meat, and those who have eaten it describe it as tenderer than beef and much like it in taste.

Whale steak seems no queerer than Frankfurt sausage made out of an elephant, which is what some German people have been eating. An enterprising butcher over there, hearing that an unruly elephant in the Ghent zoological gardens was to be killed, engaged the carcass. He sent 3,800 pounds of sausage out of it and sold every pound at good prices.

Friends.

"Dear friends," said the philosopher, "we scarce items in this world. They are too few to be counted."

"What d'ye call a friend?" he was asked.

"A friend," he replied, "is one who would lend you money if you wanted it and to whom you would lend money if you had it." - New York Times.

Mr. Manning's Grudge.

Mrs. Manning-Do you think it is right to let that Greyson fellow keep company with our Martha? Mr. Manning-No, I can't say that it is. Young Greyson is a nice chap, but I've a grudge against his father, and I don't care if the son has to suffer for it. - Exchange.

An Alibi.

Examiner-What is an alibi? Candidate for the Bar-An alibi is committing a crime in one place when you are in another place. If you can be in two other places the alibi is all the stronger or in law. - Puck.

Knew Him.

"Yes, I'm anxious to get my daughter off my hands, I'll admit."

"Then why don't you let her marry me?"

"What good would that do?" - Cleveland Leader.

Who would not have feet set on his neck let him not stop. - Italian Proverb.

Household Hints.

Do not throw away old umbrellas. By removing the cloth cover and cutting it up in strips you can make a number of dainty neckties for your husband. The rib properly twisted and woven together make a very good rat trap, and the stick when carefully polished will do for a cane to present to the new man at Christmas.

To keep freckles from showing get a small paint pot, quart size, and fill with a pink paint carefully matching the tone of your complexion and with a camel's hair brush paint each freckle out.

Young wives cannot be too often reminded that they should always greet their husbands with a smile. It is safe to say that there is nothing in the world that will more deeply irritate him than this, and it should therefore not be forgotten.

If your lamp wicks give out, a very satisfactory substitute can be made of Irish point lace or valenciennes, carefully wound round the wick holder. A knitted necktie will serve the same purpose, but is apt to burn fitfully and give out a pungent odor. - Harper's Weekly.

Judges on Circuit.

It was the genius and foresight of Henry I. that saw the necessity of creating a close connection between the central king's court and the local courts up and down the land. It was Norman and wandering, going where the king went. They were Saxon and stationary; hence to link them together in 1124 a special department of judges was for the first time sent on circuit in the country, of whom it is recorded that they "hanged so many thieves as never was before, being in that little while altogether forty-four men."

"This vigorous administration of justice by royal authority gained for Henry the title of 'the lion of justice' and paved the way for the permanent institution in his grandson's reign. These traveling judges were called justices-in-chief, and continued to journey. Their hand, the justiciar, is still seen in our title the lord chief justice."

Henry II. in 1172 fixed these circuits at six-the home, midland, eastern, western and northern, and those which correspond roughly with those that still exist. - London Standard.

None of That For Them.

They had been married a month, and it was their first experience in seeking country board. After riding ten long miles in a rattling farm cart they arrived at the door of the farmhouse.

"And now, strangers," said the old farmer after he had asked about a score of questions, "I want to tell you right now that down here with us you be supposed to go to bed with the chickens."

The young man whispered to his young wife, and then both climbed back on the farm cart.

"Dog," said the young man, his lips compressed with determination, "drive us back to the station."

The freckled lad grinned and whipped up the horse.

"You ain't seem to like the place?" he chuckled.

"No," said the young man. "We have often read about cross-farmhouses. But when it comes to showing us off to the housewife that is going a little too strong. I guess we'll stay in the city." - Chicago News.

What He Could Do.

During the South African war there was a young officer just from Standard who was attached to General Freydel's staff. The young fellow has himself achieved some distinction since then and shall be nameless. At that time he was fresh and vigorous and was always imagining a constant menace of attack by the Boer, whom he invariably pronounced "Bore." This pronunciation General French had it, and he tried to correct, and it gradually came to the young fellow's ears. One day he came to the general to report that he believed he could make out through his fieldglass quite as many as twenty "Bore" hid in the rocks above his camp. "Bore," you see, sounded the general. "Yes, sir, Bore. Can I do anything, sir?" "Yes. Don't do it."

A Serious Question.

"My dear Mr. Fallows," said the doctor, "I will admit that I am not quite decided as to whether or not you are a constitutional disease."

"Fum! That so?" said the patient, with a heavy sigh. "And have I got to go to the expense of appealing to the United States supreme court to find out?" - Philadelphia Ledger.

She Rather Liked It.

"I don't mind Jack's slang," said one of the girls. "He is so clever in the use of it."

"How so?"

"Why, he sent me three dozen photos of famous beauties, with a card on which the only words were, 'You're another!'"

A Changed Girl.

"How is it that Julia is so jolous and quarrelsome? She used to have such a sweet disposition!"

"I know, but the past year she has been singing in a church choir." - Baltimore American.

He Filled the Bill.

Mr. Woolly-Miss is a most fascinating study. Do you know I'd like to sing beautifully. Miss B. (she had heard him)-Oh, you do? I'd like to sing. Mr. Woolly-Oh, you do? I'd like to sing. Miss B. (she had heard him)-Oh, you do? I'd like to sing.

Wise Man.

"I made a big hit with that woman, all right." "What did you say to her?" "Nothing. I just kept still and listened." - Chicago News.

Brussels' Domestic Problem.

A Brussels merchant advertised for a servant. One applicant pleased him. The terms and the outlines were arranged when the girl asked: "Who washes the dishes?" Taken aback, the merchant asked her to repeat her question. The girl said she meant turning a hair. "Madame washes the dishes and I dry them," replied the merchant. "Can you play the piano?" he asked. "No," was the reply. "Then I am afraid you will not do," said the merchant. The girl retired with a dignified air. With a politeness which is described as exquisite, she turned, according to the Times and Country, to the merchant and said: "To-morrow I shall take lessons at the conservatoire, and as soon as I begin to make progress I will call again!" This story is certified as authentic.

Oranges.

Oranges are growing rapidly in favor and are coming to be an all-the-year-round accompaniment of the breakfast table. The extent to which the business is growing is shown by the report that one railroad during April carried out of southern California 3,854 carloads of the fruit, destined for the eastern markets. This represented 28,000,000 oranges, valued at $4,000,000. Florida used to hold the palm for orange culture, and still is a good second to California. But the figures carry their own suggestive force of the importance which citrus fruits hold among the manifold agricultural products of the country. And oranges are mightily healthful food.

An Early Georgia Monster.

In the fore part of August, 1812, a party of hunters found in a mountainous region now known as Habersham county, Ga., a being nearly eight feet high covered with bluish hair and having a human face adorned with immense ears resembling those of an ass. The creature was hoarse heart and on the approach of the men. This monster seems, from all accounts, to have been seen upon several occasions during the next four years. In 1814 a number of adventurers from Virginia, most of them surveyors working up the unexplored portions of Georgia and the Carolinas, formed themselves into a party for the express purpose of capturing the uncanny being if possible. They scoured the hills and valleys for several days and at last turned successful to the starting point.

The many tales told of this extraordinary being seem to have created quite a stir all along the Atlantic coast. A printed circular issued by a land company in 1815 says, "The climate of Georgia is exceedingly mild, the soil productive, and the danger of attack from uncouth beasts which are represented as being half beast and half man are fairly tales not worthy of consideration." - Exchange.

Made It Quite Clear.

The engineers of a party in the field were continually annoyed by the curiosity of the farmer folk in the country round. Each and every day their progress was blocked by some inquiring soul who would have liked to spend the forenoon acquiring answers to questions of why and whither and how far and what for, relates the New York Sun. At last a serious faced young man took an interested but unbecomingly one-sided and explained matters.

"Now," said he, "I'm telling this to you, and I don't want to go any further. We have discovered that the earth is a parabolic hevel, and the moon and planets do not orbit it, but are held by a force of fourteen inches. The place where the gap comes has been located in that field just ahead of us. We don't want to be disturbed, but we are getting ready to blow up the spot and make an incision before beginning the operation of joining the two."

The engineers finished their labors in peace and solitude.

The Shilling Bequest.

The wealthy auctioneer who reduced the inheritance of a daughter to an annuity of £101 because she had become a Socialist reminds one of the old fashioned "cutting off with a shilling." Why a shilling rather than a penny? Blackstone explains. The Romans used to set aside wills as deficient in natural duty if they disinherited or totally passed by any child of the testator. But when the law was accepted as evidence that the testator had not lost his reason or his memory, as the law otherwise assumed he had; hence the grounds for nullifying a will. The son could not disinherit his child without a shilling, although the English law knows no presumption of insanity or forfeiture in such a case. Of shirking and hisson Tom and of other fathers and sons the story is told: "Father-'ll cut you off with a shilling son-'ll have it now, dad." - St. James' Gazette.

Appealed to His Pride.

It was the most obstinate mule in the lot and refused to enter the car of a train held up at a little wayside station. Threats, cajolery and blows were alike useless. The mule refused to budge, and the stout of his ears told those of the passengers who were weary of attack by the beast that where he was he intended to stay. Then the aged African who was trying to load him in said in honest tones:

"Wharf, yo' behave dis way befo' all dese strange people? Why, yo' fool mule, don't yo' know dat dese people will jes' believe dat yo' never done imbedded befo' in all yo' life?"

The mule, who had just his aggressive slant, and the least vent sedately up the inclined plank with the air of a man entering a drawing room car for the first time and determined not to betray the fact. - Exchange.

To Lady Correspondents.

Our young lady correspondents will confer a favor with me by writing on only one side of the paper. We mean, of course, by this correspondence intended for the paper. As to the other, not intended for publication, we don't care if they write on all four sides and even across it. -sylvania (Pa.) Telephone.

Probably on the Team.

"Such ignorance is inexcusable," exclaimed Aunt Hypatia. "My nephew Percival has been going to college nearly three years and when I asked him this morning whether he knew anything about Homer he said: 'Sure! A homer is a bit that's good for four bases.'" - Chicago Tribune.

Out of Date Now.

"Tommy, you have written this sentence, 'The pen is mightier than the sword,' and it is incorrect. How should it be changed?"

"I've ought to be changed to typewriter, ma'am." - Chicago Tribune.

Willing to Try.

Harold-Could you learn to love me? Amelia-No, but I'll try awfully hard. Papa has promised to send me abroad if my health breaks down from overstudy, you know. - London Scripps.

Men are the sport of circumstances when the circumstances seem the sport of men. - Byron.

THE ZENITH OF STOVE PERFECTION

RELIGIOUS THOUGHT.

Gains Gleaned From the Teachings of All Denominations.

If heaven is ever won, it must be won by martyrdom. - Rev. D. J. Barroll, Reformed, New York.

True Patriot.

The man who has his faith in God and in his country is the true patriot. - Rev. Hugh T. Kerr, Presbyterian, Chicago.

Benefit From Hard Work.

Hard work teaches independence, begets courage, fosters self reliance and inspires self support. - Rev. W. W. Bustard, Baptist, Boston.

Smiles Arg Better.

A delightful countenance has often shamed a man out of a position. Learn to smile your way through trouble. - Rev. J. E. Price, Methodist, New York.

Doing God's Will.

Man is capable of doing the will of God, which is simply saying man will be redeemed. That is why Christ died; otherwise the cross is the most stupid and senseless folly of the age. - Rev. L. O. Rosten, Rev. Presbyterian, Brooklyn.

How G's Throat's Passion.

Every man has to some extent a manager in embryo in his nature, and his constant care should be to suppress and throttle the angry beast of passion by the cultivation of his laborer nature. - Rev. S. H. C. Burgin, Methodist, San Antonio, Tex.

The Glad Life.

The surrendered life is the glad life, not the one which seeks to be ministered unto, but the one which seeks to minister to another. It is the life that carries the sunlight into the burdened places that is the glad life. - Rev. L. B. Wilson, Methodist, Pawtucket, R. I.

Aim of Human Life.

Merely living is not the aim of human life, but living so as to contribute to the highest well being of humanity. We are not brought into the world to exhaust our energies on getting enough to eat, but for a higher and nobler end. - Rev. J. H. Mallores, Congregationalist, Los Angeles, Cal.

Church Attendance.

Churchgoing is a habit that needs more and more to be insisted upon. Nothing, as I believe, is more seemly and human than that a part of at least one day in the week should be devoted to the culture of the soul and in a place set apart for that purpose. - Rev. Thomas Saiter Holbert, Universalist, St. Paul.

To Serve God.

The great cosmic forces, which lift despairing people out of their servitude to the commonplace things of life by making life worth living, have the divinely bestowed gifts which enable man not only to see the infinite values of life, but the presence of God in his world. We are called to serve God by serving man. - Rev. Dr. J. B. Clayton, Baptist, Washington.

Lofty Aims.

It is only when we have lofty aims that we gain anything worth while. There are those who tell us to be sane and practical, to aim at the things near at hand, but the divine law runs counter to this sane philosophy of the world and gives us to understand that if we aim at the distant we will also secure that which is high. - Rev. Dr. Charles Bayard Mitchell, Methodist Episcopal, Chicago.

Coming of God's Kingdom.

The Kingdom of God will not come on the earth until the churches of Christendom are united. Is there not some common ground upon which Catholic and Protestant, Presbyterian and Methodist, Episcopalian and Baptist may unite and present a solid front to the enemy? The forces of evil are united. Why should the churches not be? - Rev. M. H. Leichter, Methodist, St. Louis.

Spiritual Awakening.

The world is passing through a great spiritual awakening these days. We begin to comprehend more keenly the responsibility of this spiritual awakening to the brotherhood of mankind. That is why we send our prayers and our missionaries into foreign lands, into the farthest corners of the earth. We realize that the men are all our brethren, and we believe those men have a right to know the glory of the Lord. - Right Rev. Ethelbert Talbot, Episcopal Bishop, Central Pennsylvania.

A Well Directed Life.

The length of life refers not to duration, but to direction. Life may be as long as Methuselah's and as worthless. It may be as short as Christ's and almost as sublime. Length of days is not essential to an ideal life. Life's length refers to attitude rather than attainment, to life as a career rather than as a conduct. It is what we mean when we speak of choosing one's work in life. One may have a career and a directed energy without length of years. Men died immortal at twenty years. At seventeen Mozart was a court musician, and at nineteen George Washington was a major. But one might live on in a timeless life like the Wandering Jew and be nothing at all. A shiftless, doleful, worthless old man. The length of life is made up of deliberate directing power, the choice of a career, and the reach of the hand through time. It is just this power to choose and to direct his career which makes a man a man. He has power to choose to direct, to guide, to select. All other life is drift. Man has power to drive, to direct. The birds drift with the season. Man opposes the drift and builds his home among the snow and ice. The eagle follows the trail of the herd and loses themselves in the long, luculent grass of the valley, but man leaves the trail and climbs for himself the mountains of vision. - Rev. Hugh T. Kerr, Presbyterian, Chicago.
