Cicero of the Mountains.

Fountain Fox Bobbitt, of Crab Orchard, sent the following characteristic communication to the Danville Advertiser. Allow a short space in your fair-play columns till I can tell the people of the Eighth Congressional District that I have received a most elegant canvas by Congressional trossouan, made and presented by admiring friends in Florida, and I shall commence speaking in May and shall speak until the evenings get too short to hold one of my long speeches. Had the primary been called to be held the other side of August, to have given all a chance to be heard, I should have submitted to it, but I could only win by being heard at every county seat in the District, and that is utterly impossible now, as I shall run till I get tired or "drop dead in my tracks." In the days of Andrew J. James, Hon. W. B. Moore, Hon. Silas W. Williams, there was a great drought in the legal profession, and the lawyers were steering with much difficulty between the Scylla of Starvation and the Charybdis of Nudity, and one day an old countryman came in with $25.00 in five-dollar bills in his hand, and holding them out to each, said: "Mr. Williams how long will you speak for these five-dollar bills?" And when he came to the quaint, humorous Billy Moore, and asked him how long he would speak for that amount of money, he threw up his hands and said: "Till I drop dead in my tracks!" I am a candidate now, while Spring is robbing herself in green and decking herself with flowers, and when Summer come with her fervent heat and more gorgeous flowers and rippling berries, I shall still be in the Congressional black-berry patch; and when November comes with its mournful winds sighing through the leafless trees, I shall still be in the arena; and after the snowy ballads shall cover me with defeat, then kind old Winter can spread her snowy blanket over me, and the next term, Phoenix-like, I shall rise again for another race, until I go where Congressional honors are dim, or perchance such honors will not keep off the heat. Fountain Fox Bobbitt.

Prison Reform.

The first prison reform measure to become statute law is the indeterminate sentence bill which has been signed by the Governor and will become operative on June 15. Under the provisions of this law, all persons convicted of a felony after that date will be found guilty by the jury and the presiding judge will pronounce the sentence to the penitentiary for the period covered from the minimum to the maximum time as fixed by the statutes for the crime. The time at which the prisoner is entitled to be paroled will depend on his good conduct while in prison, but not before he or she has served the minimum sentence. Prison reform advocates say that if the Legislature did nothing else, these bills would stand to its everlasting credit.

One Conductor who was Cured.

Mr. Wilford Adams is his name, and he writes about it.—"Some time ago I was confined to my bed with chronic rheumatism. I used two bottles of Foley's Kidney Remedy with good effect and the third bottle put me on my feet and I resumed work as usual on the Lexington, Ky., Street Railway. It gave me more relief than any medicine I had ever used, and it will do all you claim in cases of rheumatism." Foley's Kidney Remedy cures rheumatism by eliminating the uric acid from the blood. Talked To Death.

The oldest monument in Indiana is to be found in Pritchett cemetery, Monroe county. It bears this remarkable inscription: "Alice, First and Last Wife of Thomas Phelps. Talked To Death by Prisons." Philip's wife was unlearned in rural housekeeping, and officious women neighbors, who soon recognized her lack of training in the art of managing a country household called on her in swarms and fairly overwhelmed her with their unsolicited ideas and suggestions. She became a victim of nervous prostration, lost her health and died.
