The Imperial Double Disc Harrow

The forward sections cut the ground and throw it outward. The rear sections work it again and throw it back to its original position. The ground is leveled and pulverized and left in perfect condition for seeding. Once over the field with an Imperial Double Disc does as much work as twice over with a Single Disc and does it more thoroughly. The time and expense of discing is reduced one-half. An ordinary Disc Harrow of six or seven foot cut is generally used with three horses. An Imperial Double Disc of the same width of cut requires only four. The saving of horse power is accomplished: First, by the form of the machine. The double action of the two harrows, one attached to and immediately following the other, requires much less than the power of two separate harrows. Second, by the shape of the blades. The scalloped blades, though better pulverizers than solid blades, have less bearing surface against the surface they move and consequently have less draft.

LATONIA OPENS MEMORIAL DAY

Spring Meeting to Consist of Twenty-four Racing Days.

DERBY WILL BE RUN JUNE 8

Indications Point to Greatest Season of Racing Ever Seen in the West, as the Best Horses in Training at the Present Time Are Entered in the Memorial Handicap and Other Events That Will Follow—Special Rates Arranged for Opening and Derby Days and on Saturdays by Railroads.

The spring meeting of the Latonia Jockey club will begin on May 30, with the running of the $2,000 Memorial handicap is the feature. Twenty-three days more racing will follow and the meeting will close on June 26. The greatest Derby ever run in the west will take place on Saturday June 8.

Latonia is one of the garden spots of the country and the race course has always been famed for its beautiful surroundings. It lies in the Licking valley, nestled among majestic Kentucky hills and the scenic view is most picturesque.

Since the advent of John Hachmeister, who is in complete charge, the Latonia track, which was built 23 years ago, has been brought to the standard of an up-to-date racing plant. Thirty thousand dollars were spent last year on the track, and when the opening day rolls around Latonia can claim to be the best appointed race course in the country. It can be easily reached from Cincinnati by Covington trolley cars, which go direct to the grandstand. The L. & N. also has an splendid train service to the course from the Fourth and Smith street depot. There is also a splendid roadway through Covington and then via the main highway, which makes it a pleasant journey with carriage or motor.

Owing to the big interest in the coming races at Latonia, the L. & N. road has arranged for a special rate on the opening day and on Derby day from some of the principal cities of Kentucky, and the C. N. O. & T. P. railway has done the same thing. The L. & N. also has a special rate on the round trip from Louisville to Latonia every Saturday during the meeting return tickets being good until Monday morning.

The indications point to the greatest season of racing ever seen in the west. The Memorial handicap is sure to be a great race, and the Derby will be a struggle between the giants of the three-year-old division.

Best Horses Entered.

In the Memorial handicap are Meridan, winner of the Kentucky Derby of 1911, and one of the best horses in training at the present time. There is also Adam Express, who has won the great Meridan at Louisville, Fasbion Plate, Granite, Round the World and about 65 others. The three great three-year-olds, Worth, Sprite and The Manager, are also on the list, and one or two of these will go to the post if the weight assigned is looked upon with favor.

The Derby is the best looking one that ever Latonia presented. In that race there will be a struggle for turf supremacy the like of which has not been seen. Here is Worth, winner of the Kentucky Derby a few weeks ago. He belongs to H. C. Hahnbeck, an eastern millionaire. There is The Manager, belonging to Tom O'Dowell, who is every inch the true type of the Kentucky gentleman. There is Sprite, owned by H. K. Knapp, an other eastern millionaire and one of the pillars of the Eastern Jockey club. It can be seen that if the race resolves itself to a struggle between the Kentucky horse against the pet of the eastern millionaires, there will surely be a race. The owners of these three clinkers all believe that their own is best, and the struggle will be a bitter one. The three men who will hardly have the race to themselves, as there are a large number of good colts eligible, and at a difference in the weight might do the unexpected.

Besides these two stakes there are four others which will be run on Saturday, with the exception of the Trophy stake, which will be decided on the closing day. The betting will be done through the pari-mutuels, which have been found the fairest of all betting systems, and the bet at the track will remove much of the incentive for dishonesty.

John C. Weber's prize band of America will hold a concert daily before and during the races. Smallest Bank Ever Issued. One Bank of England note for one penny was issued by mistake. It got into circulation, and was a source of great annoyance to many persons when making up accounts. Search was made by the bank, and at length it discovered the holder of the note, who returned it to them for a fancy price. This is the smallest amount for which an English note has ever been issued, for of course notes under $3 are never drawn up unless by mistake.—Answers.

SICKLY CHILD

Made Well By Vinol—Letters from a Grateful Mother. New Haven, Conn.—My little girl, ever since her birth, was frail and sickly and nothing seemed to do her any good until we tried your cod liver and iron tonic, Vinol. As soon as she commenced to take it, I noticed an improvement in her health and appearance. She has now taken three bottles of Vinol, and from the good it has done her I can say it will do all you claim for it in building up and strengthening frail and delicate children. (Name furnished on request.) Another mother of Chicago, Ill., writes: "I can not say too much in praise of Vinol for delicate, ailing children."

We ask every mother of a frail, sickly or ailing child in this vicinity to try Vinol on our agreement to return their money if it does not do all we claim.

PROPHET IS 15 YEARS OLD

Hindu Regarded by European Theosophists as Precursor of "the Master."

Paris—Theosophists of Europe have their vision directed toward Paris, for at Paris has arrived a new Hindu prophet who is regarded by many Theosophists as the precursor of the ultimate Master who is to give to the world its long-experienced moral transformation. He is a mere boy, only 15 years of age, and he comes from Adyar, India. At four years he wrote a book called "At the Feet of the Master," which has been translated into many languages, and which is said by Theosophists to be inspired by a high consciousness of human needs. To them the prophet, who is called both Krishnamurti and Aleyone, confirms by his presence the declarations of Mrs. Annie Besant in her address at the Sorbonne last year that a profound change was coming in the life of humanity, and that it was to enter upon a new phase to be signified by the coming of the Master, who was to establish a new religion.

The prophet presided at a meeting of Theosophists. He plans to pass about six months at the University of Oxford, to catch the pulse of western culture, for he believes that in the new era there will come a union of western culture and of eastern wisdom. He predicts for the future the coming of a new continent, the Pacific Ocean like the one called Atlantis, which, according to classical tradition, once existed in the Atlantic ocean. The prophet and his friends intend to visit the islands whose coming in the North Pacific was accompanied by seismic disturbances, are the nucleus of the new continent he has in mind. This physical change, he believes, will signalize a revolution in religion.

NOTED ACTRESS KILLS SELF

Hedi Hordina Longed for a Theater of Her Own and Lost Her Fortune.

Vienna—One of the prettiest, most popular comedienne of the variety stage, Hedi Hordina, twenty-five years old, blew out her brains with a revolver in her elegantly furnished apartments in the Cerningasse a few days ago because of financial losses in a vaudeville enterprise.

A few hours before she committed suicide she met friends in a cafe and was as gay and entertaining as usual. At midnight she went home, and in a letter to her mother, who is a nurse, requesting that the child be buried without waking it. Repeatedly she kissed the sleeping child, softly, then put around its neck a cord which was attached to the key of her safe.

After this she went to bed and the maid noticed that she took with her a small mirror. When found dead next morning the lamp in her room was burning, the mirror and a revolver had fallen from her hands. She had pressed the weapon to her right temple.

When only sixteen her talents were discovered in Berlin. She was paid the highest salaries ever earned by a comedienne in Germany. While performing there a wealthy Turk fell in love with her and took her to Egypt. Two years ago she returned to Berlin with $25,000 which her wealthy admirer had given her. Four months ago she came to Vienna. Here she was not satisfied with being a queen of the variety stage. She determined to own a vaudeville theater, and in the Monopole Variety lost half her fortune, her partner, who managed the Tabarin theater, disappearing with the rest of her money. This caused her to kill herself.

IN JAIL TO SEE HANGING

Two Men Have Themselves Arrested, But the Sheriff Fells Their Plans.

Chambersburg, Pa.—In order that they might witness the hanging of William Reed, which will take place in the electric chair here, Dennis Crilly of Roadside and John Dunn of Hagerstown, Md., got themselves arrested for drunkenness, refused to pay fines, and were committed to prison.

"But after we landed in jail," said Crilly, "we found that the prisoners couldn't see the execution. But we didn't give up and got after the sheriff. He told there was no use to talk, as he wouldn't permit us to witness the hanging. We begged hard, but it was no good. That settled it for me. I sent for father and he came and paid fines and costs for both of us, and we were released."

Advice En Route

(Copyright, 1912, by Associated Literary Press.)

Rattling over the frogs and switches, the "special" picked its way through the yard, while the engineer's hand grasped the throttle nervously. The president of the road, Philip Newman, sat in the rear car, and he had demanded a record run down to the next division. Once past the tangle of tracks, there was a clear road and a good roadbed all the way to Tuwora. Thompson usually took out the east and west flyer. He was a new engineer on the road and he wanted to show the "Old Man" what he could do.

Back in his private car, Newman was going through the package of mail handed him as he had stepped aboard. It seemed to Newman that since his secretary had quit, the mail had been twice as heavy as formerly. For perhaps half an hour he worked the mail, then he threw it down on the table in disgust, and went out on the rear platform to smoke a cigar in the crisp winter sunshine. As he stepped through the door, a dark bundle huddled beside the steps caught his eye and he scowled.

He stooped to grasp the man's collar, but before he could do so the man had sprung up and was facing him defiantly.

"Yes, I'm stealing a ride," he admitted before Newman had spoken. "Like you, I am going over the road without a ticket. You can't blame the train hands, they were careful enough, but when they were clear of the yards they had to stay up front or pass through your car, and I knew that they wouldn't do that, so I hopped on board because I want to get away from here."

"Come inside," ordered Newman gruffly as he saw that the man's thin coat and threadbare trousers offered little protection from the nipping air. He was rather amused at the idea of a tramp stealing a ride on his own car.

The stranger followed without the least embarrassment and accepted with easy courtesy the stiff drink that Newman prescribed as an antidote for the cold.

"If I can wash my hands somewhere," the tramp suggested when the warmth had penetrated his half-frozen body, "I'll work my passage. I used to be a pretty good hand at the typewriter in the old days. If you have any routine stuff that an outsider can see, I'll clear that away for you. I know how it is when the mail gets piling up."

He moved toward the closed typewriter desk in a corner of the saloon and raised the cover. He nodded as he saw the machine was in good condition, and then followed the porter to the wash room whence he emerged with clean hands and face and well-brushed hair. Newman stared at the transformation.

"I'm not a tramp," was the easy explanation. "I am merely out of a job and without a reference to get another berth. I was unwise in falling in love with my boss' daughter. It was a small town, and he could keep me from getting another place there, so I had to leave."

As he spoke he moved toward the machine again and took up one of the letters in the basket. His fingers fairly flew over the keys and presently he passed a sheet over to Newman. It was terse and comprehensive, and Newman nodded. The president reached for the basket and removed a few of the more important letters, then indicated the rest.

"Do those," he ordered, "and you will be able to make New York in a day coach instead of a box car."

The letters were out of the way and signed before the train whistled for Tuwora, and Newman turned to his self-appointed helper.

"Want to go on from the division point or stay on and be my secretary?" he asked.

"I'll stay," was the quiet response. "The girl lives in Harmon, and that's only 60 miles from your headquarters. I'll marry her yet."

He indicated the more important ones he had withheld until he had studied his man, and while the latter's nimble fingers resumed their work, he smoked and reflected. Here was a man who would not give up and yet he himself had lost heart in his own love affair. He wanted Alister Leighton for his wife, and he had been frightened off by the rivalry of young men, though he was little past forty.

"What is your name?" he demanded.

"Paul Sidney," was the quiet response. "I have been working for Seth Slater in Harmon."

Newman drew some bills from his pocketbook.

"There is a half hour stop here," he said. "It is a division point and there are some tangies I must straighten out. Slip up and get a suit that will make you presentable. No, it is an advance on salary," he added, as Paul made a memorandum of the sum. "That is payment for advice," and as the surprised stenographer turned away he added to himself, "and you will be married before I am. I guess I can make a fight, too."
