Experimental

An experiment in hauling children to rural schools has been inaugurated in this county. The Board of Education has bought a wagonette and carry the children of the Runion Grove school to the high school at Union City. This is experimental. The school house at Runion Grove was destroyed by fire, and the children of that school will be carried to the Union City High School. This experiment has been tried in other states and has worked to the satisfaction of the patrons. In fact in some states the experiment of carrying the children from the city out to the country has been tried out and found to be satisfactory. Ample grounds can be secured in the country at low prices and the children are relieved from the hemmed up surroundings of the city and are given fresh air each day.

The method of teaching has been revolutionized in the last few years, but we cannot say that it has altogether resulted in benefit to the child.

The new wagon will be used also by the board of education in visiting the rural schools.

COUNTY BOARD

Of Education Visits The Rural Schools.

County Superintendent Noland and M. A. Moody of Kingston, Dr. H. C. Price, Cottonburg, J. C. West of Doyleville, W. R. Hayden of White Hall and Fayette Vaughn of Berea, members of the school board, accompanied by Hon. O. P. Jackson, Dr. Martin of the State School at Lexington and Prof. Waterbury, of the Union City High School, visited some of the smaller schools between here and Waco, and then visited the Waco High School, and from there they went to the Union City High School, thence back to the city.

Dr. Martin was the spokesman of the occasion, and made interesting addresses at each of the places visited. This party visited the school of Miss Marian Noland near Speedwell, and Dr. Martin was loud in his praises of this school, saying that it is one of the best conducted schools that he had visited in Kentucky. This is highly complimentary to Miss Noland, who ranks as one of the best teachers of the county. The school board found that she had not adhered to the old beaten paths of instructions in rural schools, but found that she had gone far beyond that, and was instructing the children in domestic science, agriculture and needle craft, in all of which branches the pupils showed great interest and marked aptitude.

Dr. Crabbe Thanks Us.

Dr. J. G. Crabbe has written the Madisonian one of his characteristic letters which we give below:

Editor of Madisonian: The Farmers' Chautauquas in Madison county were a great success. The work will be far-reaching. I can only thank you for your splendid service in helping to advertise the meetings. Command me when I can serve you at any time. These are mere words, but they are cordial and sincere.

Respectfully,
J. G. CRABBE.

The Madisonian is extremely glad that it was able to render any assistance to this great work, and our columns are always open for anything that will benefit the people.

The Grand Lodge of Odd Fellows was in session at Paducah last week. About 700 delegates and probably 300 other Odd Fellows were in attendance.

On Wednesday morning the Bridge Club met with Miss Helen Bennett and reorganized for the coming year. The first meeting will be with Mrs. Lewis Neale.

The following merry party of girls were entertained at the Albambra on Thursday evening by Miss Gladys Perry:
Misses Mary C. and Julia White, Callie Miller Shackelford, Marion Keene, Jamie Caperton, Mary D. Pickels, Jane D. Stockton and Mrs. Warren Jackson.

A very delightful gathering of the teachers of the Christian Church was with Mrs. J. W. Zaring on Tuesday evening at eight o'clock. Following the business session and a talk by Mrs. S. D. Parrish on "The Bible in the Sunday School" a tempting course was served.

Mrs. Waller Bennett gave a pretty six o'clock dinner on Saturday, the guests of honor being Misses Sallie Rhodes McEwing and Martha Rhodes Carter of Pittsburg and Lexington. Besides the hostess and guests of honor, there were present, Misses Marion Keene and Jamie Caperton and Messrs. Robert, Paul and Sam Parkes Burnam and William Wallace.
