15,000 SHOUT "AYE" LEAGUE VOTE

NO RESERVATIONS WANTED BY MINNESOTA PEOPLE. THEY SAY.

MAYOR ASKS BALLOT

Minneapolis and St. Paul Give President Warmest Greetings—Quarter of a Million Turn Out and Cheer.

On Board President Wilson's Special Train.—As he came into the open spaces of the great Northwest from the more crowded cities of the Midland, President Wilson brought with him the memory of the most splendid tribute that he and his ideas of the League of Nations had received since the covenant was first discussed.

Minnesota placed herself squarely on record for the League as the President proposes it, without change, and so Mr. Wilson was a very happy man as his train sped into North Dakota and toward Montana.

It was at St. Paul that the citizenry spoke with an open and positive voice. In the big Auditorium of that city 15,000 men and women—these latter just enfranchised—greeted him with cheers and then fell into an impressive silence as he began to talk.

Audience Sympathetic.

After his usual arguments in favor of the League, the President apparently realizing that this was a sympathetic audience beyond the ordinary, said: "Know what you want, say it and get it. Tell me that you do not want what I am urging and I will go home, but tell me as your faces tell me, that you do want what I want, and I will be heartened for the rest of my journey and I will say to the folks all the way from here to the Pacific, 'Minnesota is up on her tip toes and behind you.'"

"Let's all get into the great team which is to redeem the destinies of mankind." There was a burst of cheers and a blaze of flags from the immense assemblage and from then on there could be no doubt as to how this biggest crowd of the tour stood. But it was given a chance to express itself more definitely than that.

Audience Votes For League.

As the President concluded his address, Mayor Larry Hodgson, who was a reporter before his fellow citizens made him their executive, sprang to the front of the platform and exclaimed: "Are we with the President? Let us tell him so. How many of you in this gathering of 15,000 are for the League of Nations as it is proposed, without reservation. Answer aye." There was a roar that was actually deafening—an "aye" that was heard far beyond the Auditorium walls.

"Those who want the treaty ratified but with reservations, answer 'No,'" the Mayor said.

There was a reply that was a whisper in comparison to the first. Not five hundred among the vast throng gave voice to the negative, it seemed.

A tremendous cheer was raised as Mr. Wilson departed from the hall, and the crowd, hastening outdoors, followed him down the city streets to his train, making a racket that never ceased.

League Would End Wars.

Earlier in the day the twin city of Minneapolis expressed itself in the same fashion, though not quite so vociferous. In the Armory at Minneapolis the President spoke to 12,000, and told them just what the league was and what it would accomplish. It would end war and secret treaties, bring about disarmament, replace the "balance of power" militarily with a "balance of power" morally, liberate oppressed nations and help the workers.

"You have heard critics tell what the league was not. Did you ever hear before, as I have just told you, what it really is?"

"No," shouted the crowd. "Are we to go in with the other nations as friends or stay out as suspected rivals?"

"Go in," chorused thousands. "Are we to be ostriches with our heads buried in the sand or eagles?" the President demanded.

"Eagles," chorused the enthused Minnesotans.

Of the 700,000 population of the twin cities more than 250,000, it was estimated, turned out to greet the President and cheer him on his way. It was the warmest reception he had yet been given.

MISS NOLAND DOES FINE WORK IN MERCER

Miss Miriam Noland, of Richmond, did some fine work as instructor of the teachers' institute in Mercer county. The Harrodsburg Herald said of her: "The instructor for the Institute is Miss Miriam Noland, of Richmond Normal School, critic of the Model Rural School. She is an able and convincing speaker and holds the attention of her hearers on whatever subject she talks, and she is giving the teachers some very worth while instruction in their profession. As Miss Noland is proficient in Music and an able vocalist, music is being made one of the prominent features of the meeting."

Death of Mrs. Thompson Ramsey

Mrs. Thompson Ramsey, widow of the late Thompson Ramsey, and one of Boyle county's best known citizens, died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Allen Kenney, on Maple avenue, in Danville Monday at 6 o'clock, after a long illness of a complication of diseases. She was 79 years old. About three years ago Mrs. Ramsey accidentally fell and fractured her hip and had been an invalid ever since. She suffered much, but never complained of her suffering and retained her cheerful disposition till the last.

Mrs. Ramsey was born and reared in Madison county, and spent the early part of her married life at Paint Lick and Richmond. Mr. and Mrs. Ramsey went to Danville about 20 years ago and lived there the remainder of their lives, making many friends. Both were highly esteemed by all who knew them. Mr. Ramsey died about a year ago. Mrs. Ramsey was a devout and life-long member of the Christian church, kind and benevolent, and leaves hosts of friends who will miss her. Deceased is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Allen Kenney, of Danville, and Miss Ida Ramsey, of Huntington, W. Va., and one sister, Mrs. J. W. Armstrong, of Richmond.

Says Booze Is Being Sold

J. Sherman Porter, of the State-wide prohibition Federation, asserted at Lexington this week that the federation has information that saloons in Lexington, Louisville, Newport and Covington are selling whiskey without molestation. He said Collector of Internal Revenue Elwood Hamilton, at Louisville, and District Attorney Thomas D. Slatery, at Covington, have also received such reports.

Refuses 60c For Tobacco Crop

J. M. Ellis, of the Ellsberry neighborhood in Mason county, is one that has an exceptionally fine looking crop of tobacco in that section, and a tobacco speculator offered him 60 cents a pound for it as it stands in the field, but he refused to sell. Tobacco grown by him last year netted him 72 cents a pound on the loose leaf market and he says he expects more for his tobacco this season.
