CHERRY WANTS FOUR-YEAR NORMAL COURSE

President of Western Normal Says Too Many Incompetent Teachers Are Turned Out

(By Associated Press) Louisville, Ky., April 23.—A plea for the extension of the course of study in normal schools from the present two-year teacher training program to a full four-year course, was made here by Dr. H. H. Cherry, president of the Western Kentucky State Normal School, in an address before the Kentucky Educational Association. He declared that educational thinkers are fast accepting the position that just as much scholarship and superior training is demanded for successful teaching in the elementary grades as in the secondary schools.

Raising the standard of normal schools, he said, would require a gradual evolution of several years. Dr. Cherry spoke on "Educational Leadership."

A "distressing number" of incompetent young teachers are answering the call for trained educational leadership, Dr. Cherry told his hearers. They seem to be more interested in getting an education through quick superficial reviews, thereby getting a certificate that will enable them to secure a position paying $75 or $100 a month when "they are in having democracy's vision of service and the teacher's preparation and conviction." The rush to secure certificates before the new law raising professional standards goes into effect, he said, is unprecedented. Most of these young teachers, he asserted, will not continue their education beyond acquiring a two or four year certificate and will leave the profession when their certificates expire.

Telling of a county superintendent who recently told him that he had 75 schools and 125 applications, Dr. Cherry said that "I believe there is more danger in having too many teachers in Western Kentucky than there is in not having enough. We are certain to have a surplus of teachers with the minimum qualifications and we are equally certain to have a big shortage of instructors for those positions that demand a higher preparation," a teacher-eliminating campaign as well as a teacher recruiting campaign is necessary, he said, adding that the way should be made easy for the competent teacher to remain in the profession and easy for the incompetent to get out.

The summer schools to be conducted for training teachers this year will not be "crum" schools, he said, but will be centers of "professional inspiration and academic advancement."

One of the greatest needs, according to the speaker, is for a just salary schedule with the maximum as much as 100 per cent above the minimum. Unjust and undemocratic salary schedules have driven much promising material out of the profession, he said.

Some of the schools of Kentucky, according to Dr. Cherry, are "already dust and ashes in the hands of dead teachers." In some instances consolidations have been followed by reaction and disappointment because of incompetent leadership. Progressive legislation and courses of study have been made inefficient because of lack of efficient teachers. He declared that it might be in the interest of education in the state to temporarily stop school consolidations, to refuse to build another high school and temporarily close the school houses until competent teachers can be obtained.

"If the teaching profession fails, he said, every educational effort will fail. It is extremely dangerous to push school improvement too far ahead of efficient school leadership. He had better continue the school in the old dilapidated school house for a few years longer than to erect the wrong kind of a building. There are school houses in Kentucky not a month old that are now behind present day educational progress. We had better let the community sleep a little longer unless we are in position to aid it when we wake it up."

There are courses of study, he said, "that are dead and buried three feet under the ground and

LOCAL OFFICERS BREAK UP STILL

Four Barrels of Beer and Moonshine Found at Still in the Dreyfus Section of County

Deputy Sheriff's Sant Bush and W. A. Johnson accompanied Revenue Officer Winfrey on a trip down in the Dreyfus section Friday afternoon and raided a still which they had heard about and completely demolished it before leaving. Mr. Bush stated they left here Friday just after dinner and had very little trouble in locating the still, but it was dark before they got back with their prisoner Joe Pittman, who claims no ownership in the still, and says that the still is not on the enclosure of his land. Mr. Pittman went before Commissioner Warfield Bennett and gave bond for $400 for his appearance in federal court here next week.

Four barrels containing beer were found in the still, but the officers say that one of these barrels was filled with still slop. It seems that the worm had been removed from the still a short while before the officers made their appearance, but the furnace, kettle and other evidence around the officers to the belief that business had been quite active.

In searching around the premises two quarts of moonshine was found in a little cabin near the still, buried in the ground, and was well covered with old sacks and other rubbish to prevent detection, but the officers were too wise for this, and the whisky was secured. The beer was poured out of the ground, the barrels were burned, and kettle smashed, and when the officers finished the job there was little to tell that a still ever existed on the place.

LEXINGTON TRACK IN ITS 93RD YEAR

Spring Meeting of Famous Old Kentucky Association Opens at Blue Grass Capital

(By Associated Press) Lexington, Ky., April 23.—The 93rd year of the Kentucky Association race track here is scheduled to open here this afternoon with a program of seven races. The most important of the events is the Ben Ali Handicap for which 59 nominations were made before the entries closed.

For more than 100 years horse racing has been one of the chief sports of the Bluegrass region. Organized racing in Lexington has been in existence for 124 years. The Association track now owned by the Kentucky Jockey Club, which operates tracks in Louisville and Latonia, was built in 1828. Two years previously the Kentucky Association was formed. The track was built on land owned by John Postlewaite, then owner of Postlewaite's Inn, which since has become the Phoenix Hotel.

Although the present track is 93 years old, it had a predecessor that was built in 1797 near the Georgetown pike in what is now Forest Hills. The rules governing this track called for a meeting to start on the second Wednesday of November. The races were real long distance affairs. The first day, four-mile heats were run. On the second day, the races were three mile heats and on the third day two mile.

The old organization was succeeded in 1899 by the Lexington Jockey Club which remained in charge of racing until 1823, when it died. From that time until 1826 there was no organized racing here, the Kentucky Association being organized in the latter years.

The present organization has had many famous men as its officers. Henry Clay was active in it for years. John C. Breckinridge was its president while he was vice president of the United States. Others who have been active in its management were Senator James B. Beck, J. C. S. Blackburn, Major H. C. McDowell, Capt. T. J. Bush and many others. Former United States Senator Johnson N. Camden now is president of the organization with Col. Matt J. Winn, as vice president and general manager, and Sherman Goodpaster is secretary and treasurer.

Important events to be contested during the ten days meeting set to open today are the Ben Ali Handicap, on the opening day; The Ashland Oaks, April 27; Hianta Stakes, April 28; Blue Grass Stakes, April 30; Idle Hour Stakes, May 3, and the Caulder Handicap on May 4, the closing day.

The opening event, the Ben Ali Handicap, is for three-year-olds and up, at a mile and a sixteenth with a $3,000 purse added to the nomination and entry fees. In addition the winner will receive a cup donated by L. L. Haggin. A number of noted stables have made nominations including E. R. Bradley, Commodore J. K. L. Ross, E. F. Simms, Thomas C. McDowell, and Bud Fisher, the cartoonist. W. O. Stoner has nominated General Haig, the winner of the event last year.

The Ladies Love Thorobreds

R. E. Dundon, writing in the Louisville Times, says: The feminist invasion has overrun the thoroughbred racehorse field. If you don't believe it pay a visit to Lexington and you will discover that the two principal nurseries of equine supremacy are in sole charge of the gentler sex. You also will find that a woman has been commissioned to paint the portrait of Man o' War, world's champion running horse. Mrs. W. C. Lucas, of Versailles, is now engaged in painting the portrait of Man o' War. She did Eternal for Edward F. Simms, his owner. Mrs. Lucas is one of the best animal painters in the country. Man o' War seems to know that he is the object of such admiration, for he willingly poses for the artist's brush.

NORMAL NEW TWIRLER STOPS UNION TO WALK

Eastern Wins From Barbourville College By 8 to 2—Several Classy Games Scheduled

Union College, of Barbourville stopped off here Friday for a game with Eastern Normal but was turned back by a score of 8 to 2. Three new men were tried out by Eastern, Smith as catcher, Ballou, as pitcher, and Nicholas at second. Smith proved to be a classy backstop and Ballou's work could hardly be improved upon. Both men, however went through the game without a hit. Nicholas played only one inning, getting no fielding chances and fanning out.

Ballou, Eastern's new twirler, pitched only six innings, allowing only one hit and striking out 14 men. Lackey allowed the same number in the last three innings and fanned three men. Ballou was a bit wild at first, but soon settled down to a mid-summer pace.

The Normalites tapped the old horsehide for a hit ten times. Joe White led Eastern in hitting with two singles and a double. Combs made a triple in the seventh that would have been a home run had it not hit a tree. He also made a single. Normal bunched hits for four runs in the second inning.

In the second inning Combs led off with a single between first and second. He took second on a wild pitch. Lackey then walked. Both runners were advanced on a passed ball. Rice grounded to Trooper. Combs scoring and Lackey taking third. Maimous then doubled to right, scoring Lackey. He took third on a passed ball and scored on Dunaway's hit over short. Dunaway advanced to second when Trooper fumbled Ballou's grounder. Gray struck out. White then doubled between center and left field, Dunaway scoring and Ballou taking third. Smith struck out retiring the side.

One of Normal's biggest games is to be played Monday afternoon with Kentucky Wesleyan College of Winchester. On Friday and Saturday, Sue Bennett School from London will be here for two games, and a schedule is being arranged with Georgetown College and Transylvania University and possibly with the University of Louisville and Western State Normal.

Ballou or Lackey will do the pitching Monday against Kentucky Wesleyan. Smith will be on the receiving end if Ballou pitches, but if Lackey pitches, Fox will likely do the heavy work. Friday's score:
