VAUGHN TELLS HOW TO ERADICATE WEEDS

(By Associated Press)
Lexington, Ky., May 31.—One hundred and twenty-five varieties of weed seed would be found by a careful examination of field seed sold in Kentucky during a year, according to Prof. Vaughn, of the botany department of the Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station. Of these, he says, sour dock might well be called the worst, with rib grass, yellow dock, plantain, chickenweed, peppergrass, cheat, witch grass, dodder and Canada thistle joining to make up the ten varieties found most frequently. Sour dock is some times called sheep sorrel or red sorrel.

Prof. Vaughn's statement regarding weeds was made in reply to a question put to him by a newspaper man who had noted the rankness of weeds in fields which had been plowed and allowed to stand for several months. When plowed most of the fields showed no sign of weeds, but in a few months was covered with them. Many, he said, are perennials and fragments of root remaining in the soil result in a growth as soon as the weather and proper season comes around.

The varieties of weeds that were found by Prof. Vaughn in a series of miscellaneous samples examined at the station follow:

Sour dock, buckhorn, curled dock, sedge, plantain, chickweed, pepper grass, catch fly, shepherd's purse, cheat, cinquefoil, slender rush, green foot, speedwell, lamb's quarters, yarrow, trefail, pigeon grass, black-eyed susan, dodder, pigweed, paspalum, wild mustard, wild carrot, smart weed, may weed, crab grass, bracted plantain, heal all, ragweed, chicory, spurge, barnyard grass, vervain, russian thistle, butter cup, dandelion, bitter dock, evening primrose, corn camomile, nightshade, hare's ear, panicum, cranesbill, whitetop, morningglory, Canada thistle, three seeded mercury, kidney vetch, corn cockle, bird-foot trefail, nettle, oxalic, annual sweet clover, spiny sida, ox tongue, hedge mustard, madder, canary grass, mallow, bull thistle, catnip, wild buckwheat, mint, sunflower, johnson grass, manna grass, moth mullen, lady's thumb, horse nettle, button weed, beak grass, knot weed, penny cress, Pennsylvania persicaria, wild lettuce, hemlock, false flax, Russian pigweed, star thistle, sand rocket, cress, centurea, sulla, marsh elder, atesol, uack grass, wild onion, ax seed, goats rue, pimpinell, gum plant, tumbling mustard, small crab grass, corn growmell, pennycroyal, dragon head, burdock, apple of Peru, hoarhound, black bindweed, coronella, jimson weed and wild oats.

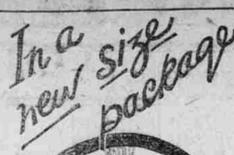

Speaking of the characteristics of the most common weeds and how to get rid of them, Prof. Vaughn said:

"Sour dock might well be called the worst weed. It is a perennial and is abundantly propagated by its running rootstocks as well as by seeds. It thrives on slightly sandy, acid soils and often will crowd out useful crops. The best way of controlling it seems to be by liming, fertilizing or manuring the land so that field crops will grow with sufficient vigor to smother the sour dock. The seeds are found most frequently in clovers.

"Rib grass, a perennial, also thrives on light sandy soils. The seeds are found mostly in clovers and alfalfa. When only a few plants occur in a field they may be removed by hand digging, but when a considerable quantity of plants is found it is best to plow and cultivate until they are destroyed. The thickened rootstocks of this weed must thoroughly be removed in all efforts of digging and cultivation.

"Yellow dock is a perennial and is a bad pest about yards and farm outbuildings. The seeds are common in clover and alfalfa seeds; the plants harbor both the melon louse and the corn root louse. Yearly pulling and deep grubbing are required to destroy them and this must be done before the seed mature.

"Plantain, a perennial, is a serious pest in manured land seeded to clovers. It is also found about yards and waste places. Continuous cultivation until the plants disappear is the best remedy.

"Chickweed, an annual, blooms almost the entire year and ripens seeds so early that it is difficult to clean out. It is a host of the melon louse. The best control is a winter crop such as rye or hairy vetch.

"Cheat is a winter annual and is most troublesome in wheat fields; the seeds fall to the ground where they may remain and maintain their vitality for several years, coming up when conditions are favorable. When fields are infested in this way they should be cultivated continuously for several seasons.

"Witch grass is an annual which must be prevented by maturing seeds by cutting and removal or burning. It is not a serious pest, but the seeds are found very frequently in field seeds.

"The dodders are annual which are found very often in clover and alfalfa fields. They are parasitic, growing from seeds, but soon losing all connection with the ground and living on the host plants, about which they twine their tiny straw-colored stems. Small isolated patches should be burned. Badly infested fields should be plowed up and some cultivated crop grown. In no case should seeds be saved from fields containing dodder.

"Canada thistle is a perennial that is hard to eradicate. It is propagated both by seeds and its rootstocks. While it is a very serious pest, its noxious character has perhaps been overrated. Repeated cutting with a hoe and application of salt, coal oil of sulphuric acid to cut the stems in the ground is the cheapest and most effective remedy."

Owl Whips Bob-Cat

Hickman, Ky., June 1.—Setting a steel trap to catch the marauder killing his chickens. Rigger Hall, caught a nearly grown bob-cat. The cat was placed in a small zoo here in a cage with a large owl. The bob-cat immediately attacked the owl but was given a whipping and both peacefully remain in the same cage the cat in perfect submission. When a small rabbit was put in the cage, the cat immediately killed it, but gave it up when the owl came over for it. This cat is almost twice the size of a house cat.
