LOUISVILLE EXPANDING.

Louisville is growing rapidly in wealth, business enterprise and in population. When the late Mayor Tyler was in office he favored embracing all of Jefferson county to the city boundaries of Louisville, and this will probably have to be done before many years roll around.

FUTURE SEWER PLANS.

The General Council which will be elected in November will have an important duty to perform in the matter of building sewers. It looks like Mayor Grainger's plan to sell the city's stock in the Gas Company and to use the money for sewer building has fallen through.

ARMY CANTENEN AGAIN.

The abolition of the canteen in the army, which was brought about through influences outside the army, is again being discussed with a view of having the canteen restored by act of Congress.

article in the current Outlook in which he treats of the subject from the standpoint of one in the ranks. He says the men regarded the canteen as a social club rather than a saloon, and the picture he draws of the canteen as it existed under the former regulations of the army can not be objectionable except to those who are opposed to drink in any and every form.

Corporal Pritchett contends that much of the desertion and drunkenness now prevailing in the army in the United States and in the Philippines may be traced to the abolition of the canteen. The men having no place to spend their time go outside the post, where they engage in diversions which are harmful to them, and the result is the guard-house and afterward desertion.

In view of the information presented by the officers of the army and the privates in regard to the canteen it seems strange that steps are not taken to restore the comforts of the canteen to the army.

Prof. Robert Ellis Thompson, who is not a Catholic, in a signed article in the Irish World, severely condemns the French Government for withdrawing support from every kind of religious organization in France through the abolition of the Concordat. He points out that Napoleon, who was a great statesman, was acting from pure considerations of policy, and not as a Christian, when he entered into the agreement with the Pope in 1801.

The Pope's encyclical to the Italian Bishops has been translated and printed in this country. It is a long document, dealing with questions purely local to Italy. The Pope suspends the edict issued by Popes Pius IX. and Leo XIII. forbidding Catholics from participating in elections in Italy, and more especially the old-time States of the church. The Pope permits and encourages the Catholic laity to take part in elections, but forbids participation of priests in electoral contests.

William J. Balfe, of New York, in reply to the statement made by a correspondent of an Eastern paper that "Ireland's chosen representatives" voted for the act of union between England and Ireland, points out that at the time the act was passed four-fifths of the people, including practically all the native Irish, voted against the act.

a Parliamentary representative. The Parliament only represented the Protestant settlers or colonists, and was composed exclusively of them. It is well to tell the whole truth while relating history, and Mr. Balfe has done so in this instance.

When we consider that Pope Gregory XVI. died June 1, 1846, nearly sixty years ago, it would seem impossible that a Bishop appointed by him could be still alive and at work. Most Rev. Daniel F. Murphy, Archbishop of Hobart, Australia, is the last of the prelates of Gregory's creation and is ninety-five years of age.

Sergeant William F. Riley, of the Philippine scouts, has received the first of the newly designed medals recently ordered struck by Congress for great personal bravery. Riley is only nineteen years of age, but on April 10, in the Philippines, his command was ambushed and he showed great personal bravery in assisting his companion scouts. The medal was given to Riley at Fort Thomas, in presence of the troops. The young man is a native of Somerville, Mass., and of Irish parentage.

Ireland will lose twenty-two representatives in Parliament under the Government's proposals for the redistribution of members according to population. Under the proposed plan there will be one member for every 65,000 of the population, and all constituencies now having less than that number will be abolished. England will gain seventeen seats, Scotland four seats and Wales one. Ireland, of course, will get the worst of it, but it may turn out for the better, after all.

The Catholic Union and Times, of Buffalo, speaking editorially says: "On its eighth anniversary the Kentucky Irish American, of Louisville, issued a most creditable souvenir number. Historically it is valuable, typographically fully up to the standard of our best Catholic weeklies. We congratulate our sprightly and vigorous contemporary." This is one of a number of congratulations recently received and encourages the editor to make still greater efforts.

The new President of Notre Dame University, the Rev. Father Cavanaugh, who succeeds President Andrew Morrissey, D. D., is but thirty-one years of age and has been connected with the college since he was sixteen years of age. Father Cavanaugh was born in Leontonia, Ohio. For several years Father Cavanaugh has been one of the assistant editors of the Ave Maria, the magazine published at Notre Dame. Father Morrissey will go abroad in the hope of regaining his health.

Now is the time when parents are considering where they will send their children to school next September. Presidents of colleges and academies will find the Kentucky Irish American a good medium in which to advertise their terms and conditions. Quite a number of the pupils in the parochial schools in Louisville will want to go to college this fall and their parents will soon want to make their arrangements.

Mayor Dunne, of Chicago, is still working on the project of municipal ownership of the street railway lines, and has appointed Coleman T. DuPont, of Detroit, formerly of Louisville, an expert, to make an examination of one of the street car lines, with a view of purchasing it. The owners of the line have set a price and are willing to assist the Mayor in trying the experiment of municipal ownership.

In electing Robert W. Brown Grand Exalted Ruler of the Elks of the United States the order made an excellent selection. Mr. Brown is a native of the order during the past few years and deserved the honor. In Louisville, where he is so well and favorably known, his selection was received with particular favor by all classes.

Some one started an American bar over in London, but it turned out to be a failure. The English barmaids could not learn to mix drinks, except high balls, and the bars that tried to produce cocktails and other American drinks made a dismal failure and had to give it up. After all, the Kentucky plan is about as good as any—drink your licker straight.

Spring Hill College, of Mobile, Ala., has just celebrated the seventy-fifth anniversary of its organization. It is one of the oldest colleges in the South and for over fifty years has been managed by the Jesuits.

PROMISING BOYS.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Sheehan, of 2046 Preston street, have good reason to be proud of their three handsome sons, William A., Mark and Hilary Sheehan, aged respectively twelve, ten and six years. They are all boys, American boys, Irish-American boys. Their father, now in the service of the United States Government as a gauger, is a native of Ireland, but came to America when quite a youth, and spent part of his best days as a soldier in the Federal army. As dearly as he loves them he would gladly spare them all should the dread occasion call them to preserve the rights of the American Union. Willie, the oldest boy, was recently confirmed at St. Philip Neri's church, and shortly before received a letter from President Roosevelt in return for his letter of congratulation.

MEMORIAM.

O how his faithful hand we miss From all the gentle ministries Of home and love.

On July 23, one year ago, there passed from among us quietly, piously, a loyal, royal Irishman, the kindest of husbands and fathers, the truest of friends, our brother everything good, James Ross. So quickly the summons came that friends stood aghast to see on his door the pathetic words, "Dead, James Ross." The hearts of neighbors went out in full sympathy to the lonely one of his household in their hour of sorrow. Full of noble deeds, his life, though short in years, was not wasted. Piety and his sweet reflection, charity, shone in his daily life and was his recompense in the hour that comes to every mortal. A brother Hibernian, one of the true fold, a son full of devotion to an aged mother, a brother, husband, father, in every respect an admirable and lovable character, he is missed in the lodge, at the reunion, in the home where dwell his loved wife and little ones. In the quiet evening hour the thoughts of his household turn to him whom they have lost and in faith and hope wait for that hour of reunion when, hand in hand, they will walk the gardens of Paradise together and gather the flowers that grow by its sweet flowing waters.
