IS IT RIGHT For an Editor to Recommend Patent Medicines.

From Sylvan Valley News, Brevard, N. C. It may be a question whether the editor of a newspaper has the right to publicly recommend and of the various proprietary medicines which flood the market, yet as a preventive of suffering we feel it a duty to say a good word for Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy.

We have known and used this medicine in our family for twenty years and have always found it reliable. In many cases a dose of this remedy would save hours of suffering while a physician is awaited. We do not believe in depending implicitly on any medicine for a cure, but we do believe that if a bottle of Chamberlain's Diarrhoea Remedy were kept on hand and administered at the inception of an attack much suffering might be avoided and in very many cases the presence of a physician would not be required. At least this has been our experience during the past twenty years. For Sale by R. E. McRoberts druggist 1m Question Answered. Yes, August Flower still has the largest sale of any medicine in the civilized world. Your mothers' and grandmothers' never thought of using anything else for indigestion or Biliousness. Doctors were scarce, and they seldom heard of Appendicitis, Nervous Prostration or Heart failure, etc. They used August Flower to clean out the system and stop fermentation of undigested food, regulate the action of the liver, stimulate the nervous and organic action of the system and that is all they took when feeling dull and bad with headaches and of her aches. You only need a few doses of Green's August Flower, in liquid form to make you satisfied there is nothing serious the matter with you. For sale by C. C. & J. E. Stormes.

LAWTON BRANDED HIS CATS. The Conscientious Farmer Complied with Every Requirement of the Live Stock Census. The troubles incident to the taking of the live stock census of the United States have claimed "Farmer" George Lawton, the veteran Western Union telegrapher, as their latest victim, says the Denver News. Not that Mr. Lawton is not entirely conscientious in his endeavors to fulfill the government requirements, but rather that the federal authorities will not give him enough time. It so happens that "Farmer" Lawton is possessed of two live stock establishments—a stock farm in Missouri and a cat ranch at his residence in South Denver. Consequently, when Secretary Charles F. Martin, who has charge of the western portion of the census, forwarded him blanks in which to state his possessions in the way of live stock, Mr. Lawton was greatly perplexed as to how he should answer. He finally decided on the cat ranch, as being purely local, arguing that Mr. Martin and the federal authorities would have more interest in the felines than the far-away live stock. The telegrapher's troubles commenced from the time he first studied the census blanks. "Branded or not branded," read one question, "and if not, why not?" Mr. Lawton referred to his family and intimates that he had never heard of branded cats. "How many died during 1899," read another query. Mr. Lawton indignantly demanded through the mails of Secretary Martin whether a cat who had been robbed of four of its nine lives should be registered as dead or living. Mr. Martin cogitated and resolved to visit the cat ranch to examine thoroughly into the matter. It was the other afternoon when he wended his way southward and came upon the pleasing spectacle of the head of the feline incubating establishment at play among his stock. Clad in "chaps," blue shirt and wide-brimmed sombrero, Mr. Lawton looked the up-to-date catman in the midst of his domain, rather than the agricultural factor with which personality his associates have always delighted to consider him. Mr. Lawton had deftly roped the rear leg of a gray Tommie as Mr. Martin approached, and with the assistance of a colored gentleman had deftly inserted the head of the animal in a capacious boot, when he espied the census man. "Hello, Martin," said he, cheerily. "Come right in and watch the process." "What are you doing?" inquired Mr. Martin, with interest. "Branding 'em, of course," returned the telegrapher-cat rancher, contemptuously. "Well, I've come to tell you that the federal authorities at Washington are tired waiting for your reports," said Mr. Martin, with firm intonation. "Well, I'm going through as fast as anyone could," answered Mr. Lawton, as he deftly grabbed a branding iron from the fire and imprinted it firmly on the cat's off hindquarters, despite the yowling that arose. "Great scheme, this," continued the desecrator of Egypt's ancient sacred animals, as he roped another. "I'm complying with all government regulations, depend on that." In view of such perseverance Mr. Martin could not well find fault, and he returned to his office somewhat crestfallen, but energetic enough to forward a minute report of Mr. Lawton's activity to Washington in order to allay the anger of the powers of the interior department.
