T. J. Ballard, the Druggist.

The only Book Store in the City.

Christmas Don'ts.

Don't talk love to the clerks during the holiday rush.

Don't delay making your Christmas purchases until Christmas eve, and expect to find the clerks idly waiting for you.

Don't "call up" the merchant when you know he is busy and ask him to run across the street and tell some one to come to the 'phone.

Don't stand around and talk to the clerks after you have made your purchases. He has others to wait on, and customers coming in and seeing you there will think him busy and leave.

Don't smoke while in the stores, as many of the merchants carry fire-works, and there is much danger of fire.

Don't go to Lexington or Louisville for holiday goods, when your home merchants have lines just as good and just as cheap. Louisville and Lexington merchants don't pay the taxes that light your city, build your streets and educate your children.

Don't pay social calls to the merchants and their clerks when you know they are busy.

You'd Be Foolish

To buy Whiskey that you know nothing of, when you can buy such a brand as

S. O. Hackley

at the same price. We are the only people in Anderson county who sell this famous brand. Let us fill your Christmas orders.

R. A. Scarse & Co.

Don't ask the merchant to deliver small articles that you can, with no inconvenience, carry home.

Don't expect the merchants to make you valuable presents because you have spent fifty cents with them for goods upon which there is a profit of three cents.

Don't drive up in front of a store and ask that the clerk bring their stock of holiday goods outside for you to select from. The proprietor is paying rent on a house in which to do business.

Possibly, you have been fooled by "MISS FITS," and don't care to meet her. Well, she is not related to HELLER.

The Lawrenceburg Club entertained, last Friday evening, at their club rooms, in honor of Misses Mary Hedden, of Shelbyville, and Katie Reitchenberg, of Harrodsburg. There were present about twenty-five couples, and the evening was most enjoyably spent in dancing, card-playing, etc.

Use Bond's Cream Flour.

The old Arkansas Traveler story, to the effect that when it was not raining no roof was needed, and when it was raining it could not be put on, somewhat reminds us of the crossings on Main and Woodford streets. When the weather was good, they were not needed, and now, that we are badly need of them, the weather is too bad to fix them. There are but two crossings on Woodford street, while there should be at least ten. The crossings on North Main street are in very bad condition, and need immediate repair. The City is not only out of debt, but has in the treasury nearly three thousand dollars, and would it not be well to spend a small part of it in making these much-needed repairs?

Our Oysters are no cheaper than others. They are fresher and better; that's all. Warren Bros.

A Model Distillery.

Mr. John Dowling will soon have completed and ready for operation his new distillery, built where for years stood the old J. M. Walker house. The plant has been built new from the ground up, and new warehouses, offices, etc., take the places of the old ones. Mr. Dowling has had years of experience in the distilling business, having at present in operation two other large houses. He fully understands all the details connected with the erection of a structure of this kind, and and the little but great conveniences are not overlooked by him. Owing to the delay in the shipment of the machinery for the new plant, Mr. Dowling tells us that he will be unable to start before the first of February, when he will run full capacity, mashing one hundred bushels a day.
