A Pumpkin Racket.

Goodman & Klein, the clothing merchants, have a handsome chisel dresser, which they propose to give away to some one of their customers on Dec. 25. They have adopted this novel plan of doing it vice: A pumpkin which they have placed in their show window is to be cut open on that day and the person guessing the nearest to the number of seed contained in the pumpkin will get the piece of furniture. All you have to do is to visit their store, purchase $2 worth of goods and a ticket is given you on which you write your name and guess. These tickets are all deposited in a box securely sealed and kept until the date above given, when the seed in the pumpkin will be counted and if your number is the nearest, you will be entitled to the dresser. The dresser is worth $22.50.

Mrs. Nathan Bewley, of Louisville, came down Saturday to attend the Stith-Bewley nuptials.

W. J. Stith, Jr., came down from Louisville Saturday to be present at the marriage of his sister.

Rev. Geiger, of Brandenburg, will preach at the Baptist church next Saturday and Sunday at 11 o'clock.

Mrs. Ed. Bennett, of Summerseat, returned last week from a visit of several weeks to her sister, Mrs. Calloway, of Smithfield.

While carrying water to extinguish the flames on his barn which caught fire last week, Mr. Chas. H. Drury fell and broke his leg, the limb was set by Dr. J. M. Walker and at present is healing as rapidly as could be expected.

Stith-Bewley—A quiet and beautiful marriage was that of Miss Ida May Stith to Mr. Wm. Bewley, Jr., which was solemnized at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Stith, at 3 o'clock Sunday afternoon, November 1st, in the presence of the relatives of the contracting parties. The bride wore a stylish and becoming costume of green broadcloth with toque and gloves to match. The bride's maids, Misses Claudia and Mary Stith also wore green cloth costumes; the groom and ushers, Messrs. Ernest Henderson and Allan Hendrick, wore the usual suit of black. The bride is the second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Stith, and is quite a favorite in the community; the groom is a prosperous young business man of Meade county, a member of the firm of H. C. Woodson & Co., Brandenburg. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Mr. Cundiff of the M. E. church, in a brief but solemn and appropriate manner, after which the couple left for Brandenburg, their future home. We extend to Mr. and Mrs. Bewley our best wishes.

In a runaway accident which occurred near town last week, Miss Cora Bandy, daughter of Mr. Thos. Bandy, was thrown from a buggy, she was carried to the residence of Mr. W. J. Piggott near which the accident occurred, where Drs. R. W. Foote and J. M. Walker attended her, and upon examination found that her leg was broken; the limb was at once set and the young lady rested as comfortably as could be expected during the night. The next morning at the earnest request of the sufferer she was placed upon a litter and carried with great care to her home about four miles from town. She reached there with comparatively little pain and rested quietly until 10 o'clock Thursday night, when she awoke in excruciating agony, and before the physician could reach her bedside expired. A post mortem examination revealed the fact that her death resulted from internal injuries. Miss Bandy was soon to have become the bride of a promising young farmer of Meade county. The community at large and numerous friends and admirers mourn with the bereaved family, her untimely death.

Roll of Honor, Bewleyville school for the month ending Oct. 23.

The Louisville Market.

The tobacco market has shown some improvement over the previous two weeks. While it is the sound sweet tobacco that meets with greatest favor, the flunked, nondescript sorts are slightly firmer and get a few bids more than they would have gotten ten days or two weeks ago. Common trash and lugs, when sound and especially when possessing some color character, have been especially strong at quotations, and sell nearer outside quotations. Fine tobacco has as usual, been in strong demand and brought out active competition. The highest price reached this week was $34.50.

Several new hogheads have been sold this week. The opinion seems to be growing that the new crop will not be of so desirable a quality as has been expected. The samples thus far offered indicate that it has cured up dry, brittle and chaffy. It lacks substance and body. Perhaps later shipments may show up better.

A MINE ACCIDENT.

A "Squeeze" at Basket which Gives Sixty Miners a Fright.

THE TOWN SINKS TWO FEET.

An accident at the Basket mines on the "Texas" railroad twenty miles below Owensboro, has thrown a number of men out of employment and caused a large loss to the coal company. The accident is described as a "squeeze" or "slip" in miners' lore, being, in fact, a sinking of the earth above the entries and rooms of a large section of the mine, completely closing them up. The Basket mine, which was opened two years ago last June, is 140 feet below the earth's surface, the shaft being sunk through thirty feet of soil and clay and then 110 feet of solid rock before the four foot vein of coal was reached.

Late Thursday evening a negro named Tobe Tapp was loading a car of coal in one of the remote rooms. The car was almost full, but he stopped to pick up a few lumps more to put on it, and as he raised up to his astonishment found the top of the mine was resting on his load. The slate on the sides of the room was also cracking, popping and falling, and terror stricken the negro dashed out into another room, in which he struck his head against a prop, cutting a big gash, which bled so profusely that he was a sight to behold by the time he reached the mine entrance and gave the alarm. Warning was passed along at once to all the miners, but some of the men did not need it, for they had already observed the signs of danger.

One man was driving a loaded coal car through an entry, when the top of the mine settled down on his car and his mule was brought to a stop. He quickly unhitched the mule and got out with it in a hurry.

The sinking was not sudden, but slow and gradual, and thus all had time to escape. As the great mass of stone came down from above the clay bottom was squeezed upward, meeting the depression at least half way. Two entries eight feet wide, one of them 250 feet and the other 125 feet long, with twenty-seven rooms, are now as completely closed as if they had never existed. Buried in them are twenty-five or thirty coal cars and eight or nine hundred dollars worth of miner's tools, which were left behind in the flight.

The most singular result of the accident was the sinking of the earth upon the surface. Friday morning a crack was noticed in the dust in a roadway immediately over the mine. It was indistinct at first, but gradually grew until it became wide enough to slip a man's hand in. The surface of the earth gradually sank all day Friday and Saturday until it had gone down two and a half feet. The main track of the Texas railroad had settled this much at 3 o'clock yesterday evening for a distance of nearly 100 feet. The depression was observable for an acre and a half around, though it was not so marked as within the distance above named.

The railroad company commenced at once hauling dirt and cinders to fill up the sink in its roadway and raise its track to its former level, and the mine owners put in a night and day force to drive new entries and open rooms in other directions.

The cause of the accident is attributed to taking out too great a quantity of coal and leaving the mine with insufficient pillars for support. The loss of cars and tools will be inconsequential as compared to the loss of time at the busy season now at hand, when coal is in great demand.

The mine is owned by C. L. Nall, C. E. Rarick, Henry Berry and Lee Baskett.—Owensboro Messenger.
