This severe cold weather keeps us all at home by the fire. Nearly every one has a cold they call "lagrippe". This, with the whooping cough, is another incentive to remain indoors.
The Missionary Institute at Irvington Feb. 21 and 22 makes no change the day of meeting for our W.F.M.S., as it appeared in a recent issue of the News. All the members are invited to take dinner with Mrs. Thos. J. Jolly, Friday, Feb. 1 and in the afternoon beginning at 2 o'clock, we will hold the last meeting for the year. Let us all pay up and send a full amount to the Con. Treasurer and be on Honor Roll.
Golden Rod.

THE COLDEST DAY.
Monday was the coldest day of the season, the thermometer registering six degrees below zero early in the morning and zero at noon. A thermometer at Tobinsport registered twelve degrees below.
The most severe cold wave of the winter swept the country. Twenty persons were frozen to death from exposure. In the west the blizzard brought death to thousands of cattle and sheep.

K. P. SUPPER FEB. 22
The local K. P. lodge will give a supper in Oeize's Hall, on February 22, to celebrate the anniversary of Pythianism. The supper will be for members of the lodge and their friends and families. The Jackson string band of Hawesville will furnish music for the occasion.

ANOTHER PICNIC.
Nobe Pate, Jubo Hook and W. B. Pate will give a big picnic on July 4 at the same old grounds near Hardinsburg.

The Soul of the Tailor.
The soul of the craftsman can express itself more fully and clearly in tailoring than in any other trade. If the tailor's thoughts are poetic, he can issue pastorals in colors that are charmingly suggestive of hillside or meadow, foliage or waving grain. He can make his overcoats speak of bleak December, his dress suits of frolic and festivities, his frock coats of dignity and wealth, his cutaways of self content and his sacks of strenuousness, and he can make his waistcoats jingle like limericks, his trousers sing of sunshine or of rain and mud, his spring suits chortle of hope and joy and his summer suits prattle of flowers. If he is an artist, he can make overcoat, undercoat, waistcoat or trousers seem a sensuous haze, a reverie in color, a riot of action or a vigorous portrayal of conflicting emotions in a declamatory field of desolation, and if he is a musician he can impart to his sartorial creations an expression that suggests the bleating of a lamb, the clashing of cymbals, the rattat of a drum, the ragtime movement of a cakewalk, the wail of despair, the shout of triumph, the roar of a lion or the bray of an ass.
—Sartorial Art Journal.

The Poison of Dishonesty.
It is astonishing how men will play with the poison of dishonesty, which is so insidious at first, which intoxicates and stimulates one, but paralyzes and kills later. If every youth were only taught that to be successful a man must be greater than his occupation, that his character must not be for sale at any price, that he will always be rich so long as he retains it and just in proportion to its strength and integrity, and weak and unhappy and a failure, no matter how much money he may have, just in proportion to the weakness of his character; if he only started out with the conviction that only one real failure is possible, and that is the loss of self respect, the barter of one's character, either for pleasure or for money; if the youth were only taught that he cannot afford to deceive even a little bit in the quality of goods he is selling or in the quality of the service he is giving, what a revolution would come to our civilization!—Success.

Took Away Her Opportunity.
"What's the matter with your wife?" "Oh, I've just acknowledged that I made a fool of myself in lending Hammersley $25, and she's mad because there's no chance to go on arguing about it."—Chicago Record-Herald.

NATURE A KIND MOTHER.
Curious Methods by Which She Mends Annual Injuries.

How many weak and timid creatures there are in the world, with neither teeth and claws for their protection, armor for their defense nor speed with which to escape their enemies! One can hardly understand why they have not all been killed and eaten up long ago. Nature is, however, kinder to these poor animals than she seems, for if she has left them defenseless against attack she has given them a marvelous power of recovery from injuries.
When a tiny lizard has to scamper for his life in search of a crack in the rock he often has "so close a call" that his pursuer snaps off his tail just as he wishes into safety. A loss like this would kill most larger animals, but not the little lizard. He simply waits round quietly until a new tail grows and then is as well off as before, except that the new tail has a flexible rod of cartilage where the old one had a backbone.
If an earthworm happens to be retreating to his hole when a robin is out looking for breakfast there is apt to be a lively tug of war between the eater and the breakfast. Not infrequently the bird gets the tail end of the worm, while the other half crawls away into safety. Not even a lizard could survive such treatment as this, but the earthworm is in ability to recover from injuries almost as much superior to the lizard as the lizard is to us. He grows a new half body to replace the one which has been devoured and seems to mind his loss no more than a boy mends his hair cut.
There are besides some small-like water worms which quite undo the earthworm in bearing up against misfortune. If one of these chances to lose his entire head, in a week or so, sometimes in only four or five days, he grows a new one, brain, eyes and all, and is as well off as ever. Even if a hungry fish gets two bites at him, so that he loses both head and tail, the worm can patch himself out with new members and go about his business as before. They have even been known to get divided into two pieces about equal in size and each piece grow a new half body, so that there were two entire worms in place of one.
After this it will easily be guessed that if the head end of the worm happens to be split halfway down he will grow two new sides and become Y shaped with two heads, or if the tail end is split new sides grow and a two tailed worm is made. Sometimes one or two new heads develop close behind the old one in the angle of the Y. Indeed the little creature seems to have a sort of mania for making new heads and tails wherever he finds a chance. If, therefore, the worm after receiving several wounds manages to escape with his life, from the cuts which happen to open forward little heads grow out and from those opening backward little tails, no doubt greatly to his embarrassment.
But what of the cut off heads and tails? Do they make new bodies and become whole animals again? Not usually. The severed head seems to become confused, so that it does not know what to do. If it lives, it is most apt to produce another head like itself and change into two heads placed neck to neck so that they look in opposite directions. So, too, the severed tail, equally foolish, doubles itself and becomes two useless tails growing end to end.
But isn't this really quite impossible? A head or a tail or even a half body cannot get food. If it cannot eat, it cannot grow, and that is all there is about it. Well, it is true that a fragment cannot eat. But still it can make the new part out of its own tissue. So the animal keeps getting smaller as it becomes more nearly complete until when the new part is finished the whole body may be no more than the tenth part of its proper size. The reconstructed animals are therefore forced to begin life over again like young worms. In time, however, they grow up to full size. When a head end makes a new head instead of a tail or a tail makes a new tail instead of a head the little creatures must necessarily waste away and die.—St. Nicholas.

Some Animal Oddities.
In fishes and tadpoles there is a peculiar lateral line running down each side of the body, which probably acts as a kind of ear, sensitive to movements of the water and warning them of enemies at hand.
Many deep sea fishes have phosphorescent organs on their flanks, which emit a dim, blue light and resemble eyes in structure. Some creatures that have no proper head possess eyes. Thus the starfish has a somewhat complicated eye at the end of each of its five arms, which appears as a bright red or orange spot.
Insects of the grasshopper tribe, which make musical sounds, are provided with ears in their legs or on the sides of their bodies. The curious little possum shrimp, which swims in large shoals, has a pair of ears in its tail. In their early stages our May flies have organs of hearing on either side of the abdomen.

SKATING ON RIVER.
Skating on the river at this point last Friday and Saturday was the best in years and was enjoyed by many local skaters. Though the river had been frozen for two weeks skating was not good because of snow and the roughness of the ice. The rain of last Wednesday melted the snow and it frozen Thursday night, making the surface ice as smooth as any skater could desire.

AD. BROUGHT DOG.
Prof. J. P. King advertised in the want column of the News for a "strayed or stolen" dog, "valued only because he was children's pet." The dog was twelve miles out in the country but the ad. located him and got him back.

Don't forget the old man with the fish on his back.
For nearly thirty years he has been traveling around the world, and is still traveling, bringing health and comfort wherever he goes.
To the consumptive he brings the strength and flesh he so much needs.
To all weak and sickly children he gives rich and strengthening food.
To thin and pale persons he gives new firm flesh and rich red blood.
Children who first saw the old man with the fish are now grown up and have children of their own.
He stands for Scott's Emulsion of pure cod liver oil—a delightful food and a natural tonic for children, for old folks and for all who need flesh and strength.
