

THE BUTCHER'S BILL.

Science and System Would Serve to Reduce It.

A family of four can live easily on less than $2 a week for meat and fish, and here is a memorandum from a family of five, one of whom did not eat meat to any extent, and three of whom took lunches in their places of work or restaurants, being absent from home at noon, with supper as the only hearty family meal together.

Sunday—Pot roast of lamb.
Monday—Lamb chops.
Tuesday—Cold boiled ham.
Wednesday—Lamb broth and cold roast lamb.
Thursday—Baked fish.
Friday—A nice little stew made from the left over lamb and seasoned with marjoram, using the gravy, scraps of roast and boiled lamb and potatoes boiled and warmed in the gravy.
Saturday—Beans.

A fore quarter cost 70 cents and was cut for a pot roast and chops, and the skin, with a little more of meat, was reserved for broth, in which rice was plentifully cooked.

The cost for that week was: Fore quarter of lamb, 70 cents; fish for baking, 30 cents; cold boiled ham, about 25 cents; total for fish and meat for the week, $1.25.

Of course had there been hearty and growing children and had all taken noon meal at home there would have been a very much larger amount needed, and possibly $2 would have been a sensible and really economical amount of expense for meats and fish for a family of five, while others would really need still more.

Because of lunches taken at work or bought at restaurants probably $4 sufficed for that one week for this family.

As a whole, such a menu seems really economical and sensible and one which preserves health and vigor far better than lavish gluttony or ill advised extravagance in purchases of meats.

Seasonable Table Linen.

The finest damask, shining like satin, has largely supplanted the lace pieces that for awhile were exclusively popular.

So great is the craze for beautiful damask that even monograms are held to detract from the beauty of its design and are not allowed.

Thus one set of centerpieces and tumbler and plate doilies is simply of damask bordered with hand embroidered scallops.

The all over tablecloth at luncheon is hopelessly old fashioned, the polished wood must show somewhere.

The patterns of these damasks are many and novel. Some are of the period of Louis Quinze—ribbons and baskets of flowers, stripes and spots and flower clusters and single blossoms—all very dainty and attractive.

This by no means bars out entirely lace and embroidered sets. They are here also and as beautiful as ever, linen and lace, linen, lace and embroidery and lace alone.

UP TO THE WOMEN TOO.

Improvement of Country Roads Should Be of Interest to Mothers.

That the movement for the improvement of roads now being pushed by the government throughout the country affects the women as vitally as it affects the men was the assertion of Logan Waller Page, director of the United States office of public roads, in the course of his address to the Mothers' Congress held in Washington recently.

The women, Director Page pointed out, are the mothers of the nation, and it is to their interest to see that country roads are improved for the benefit of their own health and happiness and the health and happiness of their children.

WICKER TABLE FOR FORCH.

Seasonable Furniture for the Outdoor Sitting Room.

Novelties for the summer porch are again being brought to our attention, for ere long those who are fortunate enough to possess attractive ones will be on the lookout for anything that can add to their beauty or convenience. There are nowadays so many uses for the outdoor sitting room—for that is what most porches are—that the variety of furniture suitable for them is very great. Tables for flowers, tables for reading, tables for writing, tables for sewing, tables for afternoon tea, are all shown to us in the shops that cater to the exclusive trade. These are very handsome, the most desirable ones being of wicker, rattan or bamboo. They are stained in any color that suits the taste—dark greens, black, shades of dark blue and sealing wax red as well as yellows and light browns. However, when all is said, the self colored wicker furniture is the most serviceable, for when it grows shabby it may be stained and supplied with new cushions that lend the uninitiated to believe that you have been investing in another set of porch furniture. The table illustrated here is a particularly useful model, for newspapers or magazines may be thrust into the side pockets and so kept from blowing all about the porch, as they are likely to do if merely laid upon a table.

Wonder Balls.

German mothers encourage their little girls to knit by supplying them with a ball of wool called a wonder ball because it contains many little gifts hidden therein by the mother's fingers as she winds the worsted. As the gift at the center of the ball will be found last, that is usually the best and might be a little gold ring or any bit of child's jewelry. At another time the little knitter finds a silver coin and again something for her dolly. A silver thimble gives great delight. The method stimulates perseverance and lessens the drowsy of learning to knit.

TURKISH CREAM CANDY.

Popular Now That Everything Oriental is Fashionable.

Turkish cream candy would seem to be an appropriate sweet treat for wearers of the new barem skirt. Whether or not women care to thus carry out the craze for things oriental, lovers of good candy will find it well worth their while to try this recipe, which is recommended by that authority in matters culinary, the Boston Cooking School Magazine:

Put one cupful and a half of rich sweet cream and three and three-fourth cupfuls of granulated sugar over the fire. Cook, stirring often, until a very soft ball may be formed in cold water or to 238 degrees on the sugar thermometer. Let cool a little, then turn upon a marble or a large platter. When quite cool work back and forth with a wooden paddle until it shows signs of turning to a cream; add one-third of a cupful each of candied fruit and blanched almonds or pistachio nuts and continue to use the paddle until the mixture becomes "set." Let stand ten or fifteen minutes, then break off a small portion and knead until softened and pliable throughout, then press into a mold lined with oiled paper. Continue in this way until the whole mass is pressed into the mold. This quantity will about fill a quart mold. This may be cut at once into slices and the slices in cubes or other shapes, or it may be set aside for future use. The cubes of candy are at their best when coated with chocolate. A pound of chocolate will be needed to dip the quantity of cubes that may be cut from the above recipe. Cut the chocolate into small pieces, melt in a double boiler, beating vigorously meanwhile. The water around the chocolate should be considerably below the boiling point. Dip the cubes one by one into the chocolate and drop upon table oiled cloth. After ten or twelve have been dipped set them (on the cloth) aside in a cool place to harden.

A Carpet Economy.

Did you ever watch with despair the carpet on your stairs wearing out on the step edges? Then you will want to know that next time you must buy a yard more than you really need and turn it under at each end when you are laying it. Then as it grows worn it can be slipped either up or down, and thus the wear will be equalized.

CHESTER PAYNE WRITES HOME

Of The Golden West And Its Glory--Takes Stage Ride To Julian--Lives On a Ranch. Describes Cow Boy Dances.

PRETTY ROMANCE BEGINS.

Dear Mr. Babbage: Enclosed find one dollar for the Breckenridge News one year, and to fulfill the promise I made when I left home, I'll write a line or two for publication to give you an idea what a fine time a tenderfoot has in the wild and woolly west.

Our eastern friends, living in Kentucky and elsewhere, do not realize the benefit and beauty in this land of sunshine and flowers; foremost of all, California, the city of San Diego with its beautiful bay and its most equatable climate of the whole world, neither hot nor cold, no electric storms and never freezes. For example, the newsboys go barefooted the year round, some never owning a pair of shoes.

Now about myself and surroundings. I worked among the lemon and orange groves on the Bay and near the ocean close to San Diego, for fifteen months. I decided I wanted to see the mountains and the much talked of apple orchards, so I took the stage line to a town sixty-five miles north-east of San Diego, called Julian, which is 4000 feet above sea level. Julian is an old mining town with a population of about 200; one blacksmith shop, two groceries, post office, two blind pigs, one hotel and many abandoned gold mines, about 1100 acres of the finest fruit bearing trees, especially apples, none finer grown in California.

The day I arrived in Julian I got a job from a wealthy rancher and cattle man. I was to be a cow-puncher, a full fledged western cowboy; ha, ha! A ter sledge me up he concluded I was an eastern tender-foot and he could soon break me in as a broncho buster; so bright and early the next morning a western broncho was saddled and waiting for me to take my first lesson. I started off, driving before me 90 head of cattle and towards the evening I came to a shanty among some oak trees, which was 10x17 ft; and this was to be my headquarters for the next few months.

Just imagine a new kid thousands of miles away from home among perfect strangers and thinking of my dear old Kentucky home and friends, with no one to talk to within ten miles but my broncho and the cattle. But you know it would be a disgrace to my Kentucky blood for a little thing like this to weaken me and besides I am very particular to not start anything that I can't finish. Well, the first night was full of hair raising happenings and wild dreams of imaginations. As soon as the cattle were quieted down I began to look around for a place to lie down. Thinking when I used to retire in a night gown with friends to say good night, I lay down in my bed of straw and leaves.

No sooner than everything was quiet when the buzz of a grass-hopper and a movement in the straw near my head caused me to jump to my feet with imaginations of rattle-snakes, scorpions, gila monsters and dozens of other things that I can't spell. Upon lighting a lamp I found my cause for alarm was a harmless California horn toad, who was to be my bed-fellow for the night. Again I tried to get a wink and lying half awake and half asleep the rest of the night was spent listening to the various sounds of the Coyotes, mountain lion, Badger, Lynx and etc. After several nights of this torture I began to get used to my surroundings and began to like my wild western life.

The only recreation the ranchers and cow-punchers have from regular farm life is to go to a dance once a month in the nearest towns. On these occasions men and women ride for miles to attend, and one of the most inspiring and beautiful sights is to see twenty or thirty cow-girls and boys galloping to or from a dance along the country road on a moonlight night dressed in high heel boots, sheeps and spurs and the women in khaki and somboreos and short skirts riding astride. The dance begins with a lone fiddler and continues till three in the morning. The party breaks up in time to get back to the ranches to do the morning chores. Our dances here are round dances only.

A little romance comes in about here: One day while eating dinner under a large oak, watching the cattle graze, my fare being canned goods and dry bread, I was wishing for some pie—"like mother used to make"—when I heard hoof beats approaching. Jumping to my feet and preparing myself for Mexican cattle rustlers, I was surprised to see a slender girl astride a fine broncho approaching in a gallop. As she came up she handed me something and we sat down and ate that pie I was wishing for. After several trips of this kind we became better acquainted and had many horse races and other western games. The girl was the only child of my nearest neighbor, who became quite lonely, like myself, and if you are interested, will tell you of our future acquaintance in my next letter.

For the benefit of some of my old pals who are probably burling with the western fever, I will add before I bring this to a close that you had better stay at home. As I've said before, I have really learned to like this, and when I'm all alone listening to the wind blowing through the pines it never brings my heart to my thoughts or when I am in my little bed listening to the roar of the mountain lion and the howling coyotes, sometimes within 100 yds. of my shanty, it never makes cold chills creep up my back, but you should know that these things would be likely to affect others different.

With best wishes to all, I'm yours very truly,
Chester Payne.
