BULL ATTACKS SOLDIER

Man on Scout Duty at Training Camp Has Strange Experience.

J. Y. Maxwell of Elmira, on scout duty at the University of Oregon officers' training camp, brought his knowledge of bayonetting into play the other day without waiting for an instructor to call "enemy" when charged by a bull while crossing a pasture.

The five companies were advancing on a mile front to the rifle range three miles from the university for machine-gun practice at the time of the incident. Maxwell was a scout for Company D. He was taking part in a maneuver in "enemy country." Suddenly he saw the bull coming. He stepped to one side and as the animal rushed at him, struck it across the nose with his gun, breaking the stock of the weapon. The bull did not attack a second time.

TOUGH TO BE FAT

Man Gives Up Pound a Day to Get Into Marines.

A pound of flesh a day for 15 days will be the sacrifice made to his country by Jack Charles Read of San Francisco.

Read attempted to enlist in the United States marines, but was told that he was 15 pounds overweight. He immediately declared that he would remove the 15 pounds of fatty substance within 15 days by taking a special course in dieting and exercises prescribed by his physician and would then reappear at the Marine corps recruiting station.

"Shylock didn't have a thing on the marines," declared Read. "He only wanted one pound of flesh—these fellows want fifteen. Gee, it's tough to be a fat man."
