DEPORTATION OF GAMBRINUS.

In the land of Columbia there was one called Gambrinus. Now Gambrinus was powerful and had many friends. His substance was unnumbered factories called breweries. Vast fleets of schooners filled with the product of the factories, daily passed over the harbor bars. And he had revenue offices called saloons in every village, hamlet and ward, where the people thronged to pay him tribute, and sometimes twice or thrice, daily. But evil days befell Gambrinus, when enemies arose and voted to ostracise him. Then was the proclamation called "Amendment XVIII" nailed to the door of Gambrinus, commanding that he should depart from the realm. Then Gambrinus lifted up his voice and wept sore and cried "something ales me" and sat himself down on a heap of malt. And John Barleycorn hasted and ran to him and felt his pulse by looking into a stein, and cried "Alas, my brother, thou art weak. Only 2.75 per cent of thy strength remaineth." Then John fell dead from horror thereof. Then came Gambrinus' friends, Thirst, Souse and Great Drinker, to comfort him. But though they opened their mouths they could utter no sound, for they were very dry. Then when Gambrinus looked upon their misery his heart was touched, and he commanded Bock, his servant, to carry great bags of sequins to lawyers to enable them to fight the deportation, "Lest these, my friends," said he, "perish miserably in the great drought if I should pack my demijohn and turn my back upon Columbia."—Wall Street Journal.

THANKSGIVING.

I'm thankful to live in a land that is free,
 With chances for all men whoever they be,
 To labor in fields of their own for the spoil
 That comes to the hand that is willing to toil;
 To stand without fear, without favor or grace,
 From masters enthroned in inherited place.
 I'm thankful for hearts with deep sympathy thrilled,
 Who care for the weary, the weak and the chilled;
 For boys and for girls to inherit the land
 With spirits alert, and the will to command—
 Past, present, or future, whatever may befall.
 I've thanks in my heart for the blessings of all!
 —John Kendrick Bangs in Farm and Real Estate Journal.

A MYSTERIOUS CLOCK.

This clock is attracting the attention of every body in and around Hardinsburg, and all visitors to the county seat. It is a wonderful clock. It runs and keeps perfect time. No clock works, no electricity, no magnets, and no air control.
 If you want to learn more about this clock visit the Bank of Hardinsburg & Trust Co., and ask Franklin Beard to give you the key.

DO YOU KNOW That since there are numerous transfers of real estate now being made that it makes the title more uncertain? Do you ever investigate the TITLE closely to know whether it is good or bad. Some fellows filling up blanks, and calling them DEEDS do not know a deed from a mortgage. Consult somebody that does.
