1920 OIL CONSUMPTION MAY BE HALF BILLION BBLs.

Ever-increasing Demand For Gasoline and Oil is Becoming Greater Than Supply.

"Industry's Need of Oil" was the subject of an address by George Otis Smith, Director, United States Geological Survey, Department of the Interior, before the American Iron and Steel Institute on May 28. The following is an abstract of Director Smith's remarks:
The last ten years may be called the petroleum decade. The world has depended upon American oil wells for motive power. Gasolines and oil booms increased popular faith in an inexhaustible supply of petroleum. Domestic production doubled and consumption more than doubled, so that Mexican oil has become an absolutely necessary part of our supply. These ten years mark a transition from oversupply to overdemand.
7 Billion Bbls. In Ground.
The ever-increasing demand for gasoline and fuel oil are the outstanding oil needs, so that the question of priority must soon arise. With an estimate of 7 billion barrels in the ground and the 1920 consumption closely approaching a half billion barrels, this rapid pace can not long be maintained. Benzol and alcohol from the coke ovens promise only enough motor fuel to meet part of the present increase in demand; oil from oil shales will not be labor-cheap like the petroleum now flowing from the wells. Regard for the future forces us both to plan to use less oil and to import more.

Consumption Must Be Restricted.
Some restriction in gasoline consumption must soon come; fuel oil in locomotives and stationary steam plants must give way to the demand for this fuel by the Navy and United States merchant marine, which alone this year require one-third of the output of fuel oil. Oil as a power-saver has unique function and the demand for lubricating oil must continue to increase as the use of machinery increases.
Pioneering for oil in foreign countries by American capital will not only help secure the needed oil but will also furnish markets for American manufacturers, especially of steel products. Planning for the future needs to include more attention to supplies of raw materials to insure the country's industrial life.
