LEG WEAKNESS.

Same Methods of Feeding Will Usually Correct This Trouble.

Weakness of the legs is a trouble appearing in young birds, in cockerels more often than in pullets, and is seen usually between three and five months of age. The larger breeds are more prone to this trouble than the smaller and more active birds.

This weakness is caused by pushing for growth by feeding too much fattening food, says a writer in Inland Poultry Journal, thereby increasing the weight of the body beyond the ability of the legs to support it.

If our birds are getting into this condition, you will notice at first unsteadiness in gait. They move slowly, and the limbs slightly shake. In a week's time they can hardly keep upon their legs and when feeding will sit down so the body is nearly on the ground. Looking the bird over, you will find little to attract your eye except the weakness of the legs. The bird otherwise appears to be healthy. The feathers are bright, the eye clear and the appetite good. As the days pass he loses his desire for food, is picked upon by his brothers, lice multiply upon him, he becomes thin, and the skin grows dry and crackly.

In the very beginning of the leg weakness remove all causes of trouble. Spice, corn and cornmeal, buckwheat and rye should not be fed for weeks to such birds. Have regular times to give the meals and make each bird work for part of his food. If possible, have sick birds by themselves to avoid imposition by the other chicks. A grass run, with shade and cool water, will help cure these causes. If you have time and patience, one-tenth of a grain of quinine given to each bird with leg weakness every morning will help bring up the chick to health again.

Cockerels often are susceptible to leg weakness, especially if allowed to run with hens, causing them to pay too much attention to the hens before their strength is sufficient to warrant it. In such cases confine the cockerels by themselves and give them strengthening food. On a well regulated poultry farm the cockerels and pullets should be separated from each other. Each will do better.

It is always well to examine the bird carefully to determine whether it may not be rheumatism, which is usually accompanied by a swelling of the joints.

Sun Bath Coop For Chicks.

The illustration shows a sun bath coop for chicks which is used with great success in many portions of New England. The box in which the hen is kept overlaps the sun parlor to some extent, the overlapping portion being faced with three inch mesh poultry wire, so that the chicks can get in and out at will, while the old hen is kept confined. An opening from the box proper leads to the sun bath, which is nothing more than a box with a beveled top, to the upper portion of which is hinged a window sash or a hotbed sash. When the weather is cold or rainy the little fellows may enjoy themselves almost as much as though they were outdoors. This entire contrivance may be built at a cost of a few cents if one happens to have an old sash on hand.

"Domineering" Hens.

Some folks like to domineer over timid people. Hens are like human beings in this respect. The cross, bossy hens and their broods will get more than their share of the feed if one is not careful in feeding.

The domineering hens compel the others to keep to the rear.

The hens eat more than they need anyway when allowed to eat with the chicks. A feeding coop that will admit the chicks and exclude the quarrelsome, fussy old hens is almost a necessity.

Treatment For Colds.

When colds first make their appearance accompanied by sneezing and running at the nose fifteen drops of spirits of camphor mixed with sugar and the whole dissolved in a pint of drinking water, allowing the birds no other drink, will usually prove an effective remedy. See that the poultry quarters are well ventilated. Birds will recover from colds more quickly in an open front house than they will in a tightly closed one.

Don't Coddle the Hens.

There is such a thing as being over-particular with your hens. Don't think it a kindness to keep them shut up all the time in a little bit of a pen, feeding them all they can stuff. Let them put to skrimish around for themselves. They will enjoy it and do all the better for it.

"Don'ts" in Rearing Chicks.

The principal things to avoid in rearing little chicks are crowding, too much feed, too much heat and sudden and extreme changes in temperature. Do not try to hatch more chicks than you have brooder room for. For 500 chicks have at least ten brooders.

The "White" Makes the Chick.

The whole of the chick is formed out of the white of the egg. The yolk is never taken in until just before pipping time; then it is drawn in and furnishes food for the chick.

Acorns as Poultry Food.

Acorns are not a valuable foodstuff for poultry, because they are deficient in flesh forming elements, besides which they contain tanno, which hardens muscular tissues and to a certain extent impairs the flavor of flesh and eggs—that is, when poultry have many acorns. Fowls will rarely devour whole acorns. Therefore to induce the birds to devour them it is necessary to kibble them or to grind and add them in limited quantities to the soft food.

Heat the Brooder in Advance.

Always make it a point to warm up the brooder several days before wanted for the newly hatched chicks—a week before if possible. This will give time enough to note how much, if any, outside changes in temperature affect the temperature in the brooder. Too much care cannot be exercised in this particular. Irregularity in the temperature of the brooder is almost certain to work havoc.

Preventive For Indigestion.

The best preventive for indigestion and dysentery both for chicks and laying hens is one-quarter pound sulphate of iron and one-half ounce sulphuric acid dissolved in one gallon of hot water. Place in a stone jar and set away to cool and settle. Add one tablespoonful of this liquid to each quart of drinking water. This is a mild and effectual remedy.

Mating the Birds.

It is best to mate up breeding pens two weeks before you begin to save eggs for hatching. Some breeders mate up their pens in the fall when they put them into the poultry house. Well matured cockerels and pullets may be mated, but it is generally believed that better results follow mating well matured cockerels with yearling or two-year-old hens and yearling or two-year-old cocks with pullets.

Don't Feed Too Soon.

After the chicks are hatched they should not be fed for at least forty-eight hours, and some people do not feed until they are sixty-four hours old. When the chicks are first put into the brooder the temperature of the brooder should not be above 95, where it should be kept for the first few days and then gradually reduced each day until it is down to 75 degrees.

The Turkey Season.

If the weather is warm, the turkeys lay in April, and old hens should be preferred. The main crop of young turkeys, however, comes in May, though in some sections they are hatched sooner.

Spasms St. Vitus' Dance

Many persons who suffered untold agonies from epilepsy, fits, spasms, and St. Vitus' Dance are today well. The strengthening influence of Dr. Miles' Nervine upon the shattered nerves having restored them to perfect health.

"I endured agony that words cannot express from St. Vitus' dance, which followed a very severe spell of rheumatism. I doctored with a physician; but the more I took of his medicine the worse I got. My mother's devotion saved me. After she had become almost heart-broken, as well as physically exhausted from constant care, by the advice of a neighbor she procured a bottle of Dr. Miles' Nervine. From the first dose to the last a continual change for the better was noticeable, and when I had taken eleven bottles I was well, and in robust health."

EDWARD D. BEAM,
North Manchester, Indiana.

"Our little boy Harry, had spasms for three years, and although we doctored with many physicians, he continued to grow worse until he had ten spasms in one week. About that time our attention was called to Dr. Miles' Nervine. We began giving it to him. His improvement seemed slow, but when he had finished the fourth bottle the spasms had disappeared, and have not been seen now for years. We shall always recommend Dr. Miles' Nervine."

are caused by indigestion. If you eat a little too much, or if you are subject to attacks of indigestion, you have no doubt had shortness of breath, rapid heart beats, heartburn or palpitation of the heart. Indigestion causes the stomach to expand—swell, and puff up against the heart. This crowds the heart and interferes with its action, and in the course of time the heart becomes diseased.
