CARELESS WITH SHIP NAMES

Americans Pronounce Them in Most Extraordinary Ways, According to a Critical Traveler.

"Is it not curious that some standard of pronunciation of names is not adopted in New York, particularly in hotels?" asked a traveler the other day.

"One room clerk made it Mewretania. Another called it Mauretany. An information clerk dubbed it Marytany. A porter spoke of the ship as the Mowretania. The head bellboy was authority for Murrytania. The head waiter talked about the Mortlanna, and, I assure you, I have heard at least half a dozen other variations or combinations of these.

"When I was in Paris last summer and had gone to the Gare St. Lazare to take the train for the Olympic at Cherbourg, I asked a man who was obviously an American which steamer a lot of people were going to take who were standing near another gate.

LIKE MUSEUM OF FIREARMS

Weapons Taken From West Virginia Coal Mine Strikers Include Flintlocks of '76.

A motley and interesting collection of firearms has resulted from the disarming of strikers in the coal mine district of West Virginia, where martial law has been declared by Governor Glasscock.

There were old English fowling pieces of beautiful workmanship; Kentucky rifles with barrels six feet long; flintlock muskets that probably did good service in 1776; Sharp's rifles like those that the free soldiers carried into "Bleeding Kansas" in '58; a dozen varieties of carbines—Burnsides, Maynards, Spencers and others such as the troopers of '61-'65 knew how to wield so well, and modern military rifles, effective weapons that are now sold for a few dollars apiece by many department stores as a result of the war department's policy of selling discarded firearms at auction.

How to Carve a Turkey.

Hold the knife and fork in a easy manner with the hand over the handle of the fork, palm down, forefinger extended.

The ends of the drumstick should be trimmed to enable the carver to handle them conveniently.

Place the turkey before the carver with the head to the left.

Insert the fork across the middle of the breastbone. Cut the skin between the breast and thigh. Bend the leg over and cut off close to the body through the joint. Next cut down through the wing joint from top of shoulder. To cut the breast, slant from the front of the breast bone down toward the wing joint.

Draw the fork from the breast and divide the leg and wing.

To get the stuffing, cut the turkey between the body and the breast—Woman's World.

"Spelling Without Drudgery."

Miss Haynes, a Boston school teacher, should have a monument raised to her memory by the boys and girls of the world. She has devised a way of "teaching spelling without drudgery." Her pupils range from five to six years, and she has made each one of them to represent a letter of the alphabet, and the class spends its time in playing a game called "putting the letters together." The consonants are all cousins, and the vowels are either short brothers or long brothers, representing the different pronunciations of the letters. The child who represents double-o wears a green coat because of the pigeons that coo in the green trees. There is a hint from which the whole game may be constructed.

Aerial Shooting.

The English army is getting ready to greet aerial invaders by making its marksmen proficient in the art of shooting at moving targets in midair. The target consists of the model of a flying machine, made about half-size, which is passed rapidly over the heads of the marksmen by a wire. The machine carried a dummy "pilot," and recently this was struck by a bullet at an equivalent distance of 1,000 feet, and another shot struck the machine, but missed the pilot.

GIRL IN THE SHOW WINDOW

Remarkable Thing Seems to Be That Few Women Are Seen Among the Spectators.

"Ever notice what happens every time some enterprising firm puts a real live girl in a show window?" asked the old timer the other day, according to the New York Herald.

"Same thing every time. I don't care what it is she's demonstrating—a new hair dye, a vacuum cleaner, the advantages of pink teeth or a breakfast food—result's the same every time.

"There's a big crowd to see the show, but never a woman near. Human nature, that's all. It's easy to figure on what the men are doing there. If it's a vacuum cleaner they're calculating the week's expenses to see how soon they'll be able to take one home to the other half, and they want to know all about the way the thing works.

"If it's a new breakfast food that the young person is advertising, why they're all waiting outside till they begin to distribute the samples to take home to the same half again. If it's a new hair dye they're wondering whether anybody would notice it if they had to begin to use it, and if it's pink teeth that the girl's showing off—well, find your own reason, but it comes to the same thing. Breakfast food or teeth, vacuum cleaner or hair dye, these men all look as if they are going to know all about it, and they're going inside to ask questions if they can't do it any other way.

"But with the women it's not so easy. Why don't they stay to see the show? Might be for one reason, might be for another. Might be that they'd like to see it more than a little, but they can't. They wouldn't like to push a man out of the way. Or maybe they wouldn't look if they could—the girl in the window's getting all the attention, the hussy—or maybe they just haven't time. What do you think?"

KNOW AND APPLY REMEDIES

Lower Animals Have Instinctive Idea of What to Do in Periods of Affliction.

It is held that the simple remedies of nature generally suffice to cure beasts of their ailments and that they are guided to them by instinct.

A large number of species wash themselves and bathe—elephants, stags, birds, ants, etc. Animals rid themselves of their parasites by using dust, mud, clay, etc. Those suffering from fever restrict their diet, keep quiet, seek darkness and airy places, drink much water and some times plunge into it from time to time. When a dog has lost its appetite it eats that species of grass known as dog's grass. Cats also eat grass, catnip, etc., when sick. Sheep and cows in the same circumstances seek out certain herbs. An animal suffering from chronic rheumatism invariably keeps as much as possible in the sun. The warrior ants maintain regularly organized ambulances.

Cannibals.

Some one has recently written a book about cannibals. It seems that cannibals still are! Enough of them to write a book about! It must be unpleasant to be a cannibal, and still more unpleasant to be eaten by one! And yet they tell us that in large sections of Africa and still larger sections of South America the custom of eating one's friends and relations, not to mention one's enemies, is general. There are certain points of etiquette to be observed, such as not eating one's mother before a certain time after her death, or one's children, except as a religious celebration. But in general the lid is off. Go as far as you like! Eat anybody who will be eaten! Or who won't be!

Instinct.

Where the river winds through grassy meadows, as sure as the south wind brings the rain, sounding his note in the reedy alders, the starting comes back to his nest again. Are these not miracles? Promptly you answer: "Merely the prose of natural fact; nothing but instinct plain and patent, born in the creatures, that bids them act." Well, I have an instinct as fine and valid, surely, as that of the beasts and birds, concerning death and the life immortal, too deep for logic, too vague for words. No trace of beauty can pass or perish, but other beauty is somewhere born; no seed of truth or good be planted, but the yield must grow as the growing corn.—Bliss Carmen.
