Sid. Landon, the character artist, under direction of the Hartford College Lyceum bureau, will be at the opera house Friday evening October 25. This is his second time in Hartford, which shows his popularity as an entertainer.

Miss Anna Patton and Mrs. Arthur Petty are doing the court reporting in circuit court this week, having been appointed in the absence of Mr. Marvin Miller, the official reporter, who could not attend on account of illness of his wife.

Next Saturday night, October 25, Mr. Sid Landon, the character artist, will appear at college hall at the first number in the Hartford College Lyceum course. Mr. Landon is matchless in his line and those who heard him here can testify to his merits as a great entertainer.

A residence belonging to Mr. E. E. Rhoads at Rockport, occupied by Mr. Elijah Williams, city marshal at that place, was burned between ten and twelve o'clock Tuesday night. Origin of the fire unknown. Mr. Williams lost almost all of his household and kitchen goods. It is not known if there was insurance on the house.

The Hartford College Lyceum Course will open here on Friday night Oct. 25, with Mr. Sidney Landon, the famous character artist. Mr. Landon is telling a return engagement in Hartford, and last year his audience was more than satisfied with his entertainment. He will no doubt have a tremendous crowd to hear and see his work this year.

Rev. B. W. Napier, new pastor of the M. E. Church, South, at this place, preached at the court house last Sunday morning and evening. At the morning service he was heard by a large audience, and the people were thoroughly pleased by his sermon. The evening service was not so well attended because of rain, but the sermon was as good as in the morning.

MOTHER FINDS HER CHILDREN

Family Reunited in New York City.

Officers and Crew of La Touraine Receive Medals from France.

New York, October 19.—The arrival today of eleven women saved from the burning Volturno by the freighter Rappahannock was the signal for the widest scene of joy and thanksgiving witnessed since the rescuing fleet began to bring in the cargoes of survivors. The women were transferred at Halifax from the Rappahannock to the liner Florizel, which docked in Brooklyn.

Ten of them were young girls. The eleventh was Mrs. Peia Polack, and the scene at the dock as she met her three children, whom she had given up for lost brought tears to the eyes of the immigrant officers.

Mrs. Pollock was the last woman to leave the Volturno. She was lowered into one of the Rappahannock's boats, believing that her children already were there. When the boat put off from the blazing ship she found that the little ones were left behind, she became hysterical and the boat's crew had all they could do to keep her from jumping overboard. She remained in a hysterical condition during all the journey to New York. Here, for the first time, she learned that the children had been saved by one of the boats from the Kroomland. They met her at the dock with their father, an East Side merchant. The ten girls were taken care of by the Jewish Immigrant Society.

The Volturno was still afloat and on fire on October 14, five days after flames broke out in her forward compartments, according to officers of the steamer St. Louis, which arrived today. The St. Louis passed five miles north of what was left of the Volturno late Tuesday afternoon. The burning vessel had drifted about forty miles from the spot where it first caught fire.

TOURNAINE CREW GETS MEDALS. Havre, October 18.—The officers and crew of the French liner La Touraine, who took part in the rescue of the passengers of the Volturno, were decorated with medals today by the French Government before the departure of the vessel for New York. Gold medals of the first class went to Second Captain Rousselet, Lieutenants Izenc, Lebaron and Royer and Mate Cotre. Gold medals of the second class or silver medals went to twenty-seven seamen and stokers.

Agricultural Extension.

STARTING AN APPLE ORCHARD.—The site for an orchard should not be low or level but it should be located on land that is somewhat rolling so as to provide good air drainage. Care must be taken not to plant the trees on too steep a hillside, because of the difficulties in spraying, tilling and harvesting. Broad, flat bottom lands above a river are often good, because the river "draws" the frost and the land is very easily worked.

The question of exposure is of prime importance in the planting of trees. In general, northern or eastern slopes are more fertile than southern or western slopes. A northern or eastern slope is to be preferred in this region because such exposure aids in holding back the buds in the spring when there is danger of damage by freezing. Where early ripening fruits are wanted it is probably better to plant on land where a southern exposure. If there happens to be a river flowing close by, advantage should be taken of the slope facing it regardless of the way the land lies, unless it is altogether too steep. The river will serve to ward off the frost.

Apples thrive on a great variety of soils but in general they seem to do best on well drained clay loam. Any land that will grow good crops of corn or Irish potatoes is considered fit for an orchard provided the location is such that the land will drain readily. Trees cannot thrive in thin, badly worn soil or where an impervious subsoil is near the surface. Such a soil is likely to hold too much moisture, thereby causing the trees to be stunted and weakly. If it is necessary to plant an orchard in a soil that holds too much moisture, provision should be made for artificial drainage before the trees are planted. Tile is the most satisfactory form of drainage to install, even if the initial cost is a little high. Brush and stone drains are unsatisfactory because they have to be taken up and replaced too often in order to keep them in good working condition.

Soil containing abundant plant food should be selected for the orchard so as to insure a hardy, vigorous growth from the very start. It is poor practice to crop land for several years, thereby exhausting the soil of the plant food, and then plant it to fruit trees expecting them to care for themselves. Kentucky has many orchards started in just this manner and in nearly every case they have failed. It is best to begin building up the soil, one or two years previous to the time of planting, by sowing some leguminous crop and turning it so as to supply plenty of humus and moisture to the trees. Young growing trees demand a large amount of nitrogen and moisture in order to make a thrifty growth and a lit-
