REVIEW OF FASHIONS.

Popular ideas for stylish M. Meacham and Early Fall fashions.
The costumes of the last century and a half furnish the majority of the popular ideas for this season's fashions, and the quaint simplicity of the Empire gowns lends itself so naturally to the soft, dainty fabrics—the old-fashioned figured lawn and dotted muslin, the sheer organdies and heavier French muslins, the Japanese cottons, figured India silks, and old-time printed chal-lies—that the continued and increasing popularity of the almost endless modifications is not surprising.
The full skirt of ungodly breadth falling straight all around is modified for rich fabrics and for the use of matrons by having slight drapery across the front or on the sides; and a deep, gathered flounce of lace or of the fabric is a fashionable finish for the front and sides when there is no drapery and the skirt is scant like those of the gowns worn in the early part of the century.
Even in mounting a skirt of straight breadths to the belt there is opportunity for variety. Some are simply gathered all around; some are gauded; some are shirred to a greater or less depth, either all around, on one or both hips, or across the front only; others have lengthwise tucks in front, from the top to any desired depth, gradually lengthening toward the middle and forming a sort of pointed cultured; and a becoming style for a person with large hips is to run the top, to the depth of about six inches, in lengthwise tucks about an inch wide and the same distance apart, thus reducing it to a width that will fit easily over the hips. For the latter arrangement the foundation skirt with a small pad in the back and a short steel about twelve inches below it is indispensable, as a person with large hips is apt to be very fat in the back, and the tucks accentuate the effect.
The simplest kind of full waist, with one seam down the middle of the back and one under each arm, and extending about four inches below the waist line, is a general favorite for summer toilet, its adaptability rendering it equally appropriate for an independent corsage of lace, silk, or any suitable fabric, to wear with various skirts, or to be made in the same material as the skirt. When used as an independent garment, the portion below the belt is usually worn outside the skirt; when it completes a costume, it is usually tucked underneath the skirt, and a belt or sash of any desired width added, a wide sash or belt imparting the short, waisted Empire effect, and a narrow belt showing the natural length of the waist, either style being equally popular. This style of waist is a trifle softer, and, therefore, is more suitable for strictly summer fabrics, and to be worn by young matrons and unmarried ladies; for thither goods and matronly ladies, a fitted corsage is more usually chosen.
Even on tailor-made suits, the unbecoming and uncomfortable, extremely high collar has given place to one of moderate height, and on many summer costumes is reduced to a mere band, and in some cases is dispensed with altogether, extensive use being also made of the high, pointed collar, and any finish for the neck, and allowing the turned-in edge of the corsage to rest against the throat. So severe a style will hardly become popular, however, for there are few ladies whose chests are not enhanced by the softening effect of lace about the throat.
The favorite lace for the neck is a Diaper lace of fine, lace-edged mull, or plain mull, sewed to the upper edge of a narrow standing collar or band (or to a round, corded neck, if the wearer can boast of a pretty throat), and allowed to fall over the shoulders, the same fringe being continued down the front of the corsage, growing narrower toward the belt. Frills to match are often worn at the wrists, either falling over the hands or turned back.
This is a favorite finish for leg-of-muton and similar styles of sleeves, which are worn very long.
The graceful and altogether charming Marie Antoinette and Charlotte Corday styles are a feature of midsummer toilet, and are made in mull, or white lace, silk muslin, or crepe de Chine, and worn by maids and matrons.
Directoire hats have a long lace scarf attached at the back, and this is puffed forward along the edge of the projecting brim and secured at the other side, thus furnishing a protective and becoming veil. When not so used, the scarf is wound around the throat.—Demorest's Monthly.

HOTEL DEAD-BEATS.

A Night Clerk Gives Away One of Their Clever Little Tricks.
There are some people who certainly take hotel clerks to be fools of the first water, judging from the badly-concealed tricks they play in attempting to "dead-beat" a hotel. The other night at a late hour a dapper-looking young drummer, wearing a bright-colored woolen shirt, flashy tie and shoes of yellow leather, and carrying what is the latest craze among dudes, I believe—a crab-apple case—walked briskly up to the hotel counter and registered his name for a room for the night, paying the money down. He met another young man in the rotunda, but I noticed that they never recognized each other, and were apparently strangers. But, from slating them up, I concluded that they were chums, and were trying to "work" me. The young fellow who registered went up in the elevator. Just as he was starting across the rotunda to enter the elevator the other young man walked across to the stairway and up the steps to the first floor, as if he had already engaged a room and was going up to retire. When the elevator boy came down I asked him if the elevator was stopped on the way up, that a young man came in on the first floor and spoke to the young drummer very cordially, and that they were apparently old friends, and both had gone to the same room. After closer inspection I found that the two young men had retired together, and by looking at the register at that late hour in the morning I happened to know who were out, and who in. I knew, then, that the young drummer and his friend were pretending to be strangers before me in order that one of them only would pay for a night's lodging. They banked on working their scheme this way: The young drummer came in in a hurry, paid for his room and started up in the elevator to retire, as many people naturally do at that late hour.
His friend argued, no doubt, that if he being the night clerk, would think
