SOME FAMOUS BULLS.

A collection of laughable remarks made by the Hon. Mr. Roche in the Irish Parliament. "Why we should put ourselves out of the way to do anything for posterity, for we have posterity done for us." But the sequel is not equally well known. Supposing, from the roar of laughter which greeted this question, that the House had misunderstood him, he explained "that by posterity he did not at all mean our posterity, but those who were to come immediately after them." Upon hearing this explanation "it was impossible," Barrington assures us, "to do any serious business for half an hour." Sir Boyle was an ardent supporter of the Union, and carried on a general seditious by his derisive picture of the happiness which was to ensue from that event.

"Gentlemen," retorted Sir Boyle, who had a lip, "may I throw and tithe and tithe, but my heads at present are hot and will remain till they grow cool again, and so they can't decide right now; but when the day of judgment comes, then the good gentlemen will be satisfied at this most excellent union. Sir, there is no logical degree between nations, and on this occasion I can see no sin or shame in marrying my own sister." Arguing on another occasion in favor of the Union, he said to Mr. Spink, "I would be the best of Mr. Spink," said he, "to give up not only a part, but, if necessary, even the whole of our constitution, to preserve the remainder."

"Bulls" are supposed to be indolgent on the soil of Ireland. But the most typical "bull" makes like Sir Boyle Roche, do not belong to the Irish race. We once heard a witty Irish prelate declare that "bulls" were more common in England than in Ireland, and he added that he had very rarely received an application from an English clergyman for a subscription toward the purchase of a burial ground for his parish, which has grown to the dimensions of a small town with 30,000 inhabitants. "It is deplorable to think," said this clergyman, "of a parish where there are 20,000 people living without Christian burial."

No exhaustive analysis has ever been given of the origin and genesis of "bulls," but we believe they very often come from extreme quickness of apprehension, the mind leaping to its conclusion without passing through the intermediate stages of the process, like the judge who, in passing sentence on a burglar, said: "You ought to be ashamed of yourself, sir, for a strong, sturdy fellow, instead of which you go and break into people's houses." Sir John Barrington himself was no mean hand in the manufacture of "bulls," and he says which, all unconsciously for him, had a double meaning. "I wish to be civil to a gentleman whom he met for the first time, he said to him on parting: "My dear sir, if ever you should find yourself within ten miles of my house, mind you stay there."—Spectator.

MAKING SQUARE HOLES.

One of the most important mechanical inventions of the century. A feat in mechanics has just been accomplished by the production of a machine by which square holes can be drilled in metal. Hitherto it has only been possible to drill round holes; but now square holes, and, in fact, holes of complex geometrical outline, can be drilled as easily as circular holes. The new machine for effecting this object, one of which will only drill either round or square holes, but the other will drill holes of any shape.

The first of these is the Tyler-Oakes drill machine, which in appearance resembles an ordinary drilling machine. It has, however, a spindle of three concentric parts, upon one of which is a set of cams so arranged that each cam, when brought into combination with the spindle, will work, producing in the cutter a hole of a given size, each cam producing a different sized hole. In other words, in cutting a square hole the tool of the cutter describes a square. It is not possible without drawings to make the arrangement clear, but it may be stated generally that the mechanical details, while very ingenious, are very simple, and the results very satisfactory.

The second machine is the Tyler-Ellis drill, which is an outcome of the Tyler-Oakes apparatus. In the Tyler-Ellis machine the spindle moves about the center of a ball joint, and by an improved arrangement of the working parts noise is kept to a minimum. Another point of advantage in the Tyler-Ellis drill is that it cuts clean angles in the square hole, whereas the Tyler-Oakes drill leaves a slight filing of metal in the angles, which has to be cleared out after the hole has been drilled. It is curious to watch the machine forming a four-sided hole in a plate of metal, but it does it in a very practical and effectual manner.

The value of these machines will be found in engineering workshops and shipbuilding yards, where great numbers of square holes are constantly required to be made in various parts of machinery, and would be much more frequently made were the means available for forming them. It is stated that the cost of drilling square holes is no greater than that of round ones, although up to the present time the cost has been as high as 100 per cent. The Tyler-Ellis machine is a very simple and effective machine, and it is believed that it will be found to be as much as a round one. —London Times.

He Picked More Than One.

In the Berlin law courts a person who was caught red-handed has been proceeded against for stealing roses from a pretty decorated grave. The accused produced in court a copy of the inscription on the tablet over the grave, which runs as follows: "Traveler, pause a moment at this spot and pluck a rose in remembrance of what I was." The defendant, on the strength of this, contended that he was acting in accordance with the inscription, and that the deceased, but the judge thought otherwise. The inscription on the tablet stated plainly that the traveler was to pluck a rose. There was no mention in the legend that he should pluck a handful of roses from the bouquet. So the learned judge forthwith pronounced the defendant guilty. —London Daily News.

A Principle of Evolution.

Guest.—See here, waiter, I ordered a young duck and you have brought a tough old hen.

Water.—No, sah, dat war a duck. Dat doct' ogg war incubated by a hen, sah; and when the duck came out he lon' gone 'assumed de proclivities of de son, sah.—Puck.

Some fishermen off the coast of Florida lately saw a couple of devil-fish with thirteen arms, and each arm at least five feet long. Its body was as large as a barrel, and a chap like that would give a small schooner and her crew a lively time to get clear of him.

RELIGIOUS AND EDUCATIONAL.

The Michigan University has twenty-five Japanese students this year. It is estimated that there are 30,000 boys and girls of school age, of whom not two per cent. are able to write or read a sentence.

Salaries of pastors in Germany are very low. It is proposed to give a minimum of 400 marks a year. At present many are as low as 400.

The colored Baptists number 1,130,000; the colored Methodists about 2,500,000; the colored Presbyterians about 2,500,000. The Baptists have 10,000 churches and 7,000 ordained ministers.

"To know the Lord," that is a bold aim for my finite soul, and yet my soul will be satisfied with nothing less. It is not by searching thou canst find out God, it is by following Him.—Dr. Matheson.

In Hawaii schools are established all over the island, the sum allotted to public instruction in 1888 '89 being $200,000 annually. In 1888 there were 180 schools, with 7,770 pupils; of these were 5,230 Hawaiians and 1,237 half castes.

Covetousness of things is always bad; covetousness of qualities is always good. If you see a man has some thing, do not want it unless you have earned it. But if you see a man has a quality that is good, covet it as much as you like, and try to get it.—Christian Union.

It is only to man daring to think of himself nobly, divinely, ay, as the Son of God, that there comes the possibility of putting his human powers to their perfect use. Character and service both flow from this one aim to him who knows himself the Son of God.—Phillips Brooks.

What is the use of aspirations if they are not strong enough to incorporate themselves into character and project themselves in righteous living? That kind of piety which knows and approves the better course, but consistently and steadily follows the worse, will not stand the test of the Master's judgment.—Nashville Christian Advocate.

Episcopal institutions come into possession of large tracts of land from the estate of the late Mrs. Frances Brownell Holland, of Hartford, Conn., which is valued at about $200,000. The principal of this city, receives $30,000; the cathedral church, St. John the Divine, in Washington, $100,000; and the Missionary Society of the Episcopal Church in Connecticut, $10,000.

The proposed school for church musicians at Hartford Seminary, under the direction of Prof. Waldo S. Pratt, is arousing much interest even so far away as England. The course is to occupy three years, and the students are to be in residence thirty weeks in each year. Both men and women will be admitted, and they will be trained as directors of music in churches and Sunday-schools.

A wealthy Greek, Demetrius Tani-Shilipi, has given two million francs for the erection of a Greek church in Paris. Hitherto the one thousand and more Hellenes living in the French capital were compelled to worship in the Russian chapel. The Roumanians, too, have a Greek church in Paris. The Catholics of the Oriental rite two years ago, received permission to worship in the Church St. Julien-le-Pauvre, formerly the old Holy Dion. The Catholic Armenians and Maronites have for a number of years been the possessors of a church and seminary of their own in Paris, which city now has three Greek Orthodox and two Catholic Greek Churches.

WIT AND WISDOM.

—Conviction, were it never so excellent, is worthless till it convert itself into conduct.—Cady.

—If you undertake to hire people to be good, they will quit as soon as the pay stops.—Ham's Horn.

—It is all in the point of view. If a mule could be interviewed, no doubt he would declare the teamster decidedly obstinate.

—Autumn Banter—"You want to come off," said the wind to the maple leaf. "All right; I'm just getting ready," answered the leaf.

—Our eyes are not keen in all directions alike; but it is even one with whom we are brought into contact, he or she, whosoever it be, whom we have any means of helping.—Dean Stanley.

—"Do you expect, my brethren," said the preacher, "to gather life off thistles?" "No," said one of his hearers. "But I have raised some mighty fine pickles in my orange grove."—Harper's Bazar.

—It is said that an honest black man has been discovered in New York. Next thing we know somebody will be down an incorruptible politician, or marry a woman who doesn't talk about her neighbors.—Ham's Horn.

—Never did any soul do good, but it came ready to do the same again with more enjoyment. Never was love, or gratitude, or loyalty practiced but with increasing joy which made the practice still more in love with the fair act.—Shafersbury.

—Grocer—"Don't buy any more barrels of apples from that man, Clerk." "Very well, sir. Why? Doesn't he put the large apples on top and the little ones at the bottom?" "Grocer—"Yes, but he forgets to indicate which is the top, and that's where I've opened the bottoms of barrels to show customers."—America.

Clerk—"Any thing else, madam. I can show you some great bargains in ham-mocks, put down to half price account of the lateness of the season. They are fine goods, double strength, and will come handy next summer, you know." "Experienced Matron—"Oh, the ordinary kind will do for my daughter next summer. She's to be married Christmas."—N. Y. Weekly.

—"The wheel of life is marred round, and we with it, expecting that the motion will some day slacken, and that then life may be ordered good, and real wisdom may be made good. But real wisdom consists in seeing the flying moment, and in pressing upon it the seal of the eternal and the enduring; that is the great course of moral endeavor under which life receives its form, like the block of marble over the hand of the sculptor. The eternal and the enduring here on earth consists in the morally artistic use of time.—Baron Bunsen.

VERY ACCOMMODATING.

After a Hard Run a Tired Man Finds a Friend, Work Having.

I was in the smoking car of a train on the Louisville & Nashville road running from Decatur to Montgomery, Ala. Just as the train started a man came bounding in, breathing hard and evidently pretty well tired out. After sitting down for a couple of minutes he rose and came over to me. We were alone in the car.

"Stranger," he said, as he sat down in half of over the top, "I am glad to see you to pay my fare to Gunterville."

"Very well; here's the change, and you can hand it to the conductor." "Thanks, I see you have an overcoat lying on the seat. Would you have any objection to my slipping it on for five minutes?"

"None at all." "You are very, very kind. Suppose we exchange hats for a minute?" "Certainly."

"Now, lend me your glasses and that book."

"Here they are."

He had just got settled when the conductor came in. The stranger said, "Gunterville," and handed out the fare and the man handed another word to say until the whistle blew for his station. Then he got out of the overcoat, handed over the other effects, and shook hands and said:

"I can't tell how much I thank you. They weren't two minutes behind me. "You were feeling, eh?"

"Can't you prove it?" "Couldn't they take my ownership to a $200 mule team. Good by, old chap. If you ever go into mules and get brought up short, send for me.—Detroit Free Press.

Complimentary.

It was at the county fair. Young Mr. Post had plumped himself down between two pretty girls on a bench in the agricultural hall.

"Well, young ladies," he said, "if I was the committee on awarding the prize to the best specimen of honey I should have to give the blue ribbon to both of you, I'm afraid."

"We are not competing for prizes," answered the blue-eyed maiden on his left. "We're the committee on awarding the ribbon to the prize gourd, and we disagree."

"Yes, I disagree!" "Yes, I disagree!" "You disagree!" "You disagree!" "You disagree!" "You disagree!"

Farmer visiting a bank in New York and seeing the sign "Teller" in front of that official's desk.

Farmer: Say boss where is Fourteenth street?
Teller: Up two blocks.
Farmer: And where is Sixth avenue?
Teller: You may tell me where Park street is.

Teller: What is wrong with you, my man? I can't answer all your questions.

Farmer: Then why the dickens do you put up that sign with "Teller" on it?
—The Jury.

Lost and Found.

Mrs. De Shopper (breathlessly)—Did I leave my purse here? I've lost it somewhere.

Clerk (who had worked an hour showing Mrs. De Shopper goods without being able to sell her any thing)—I will inquire, madam. Cash! Cash! Here a number! Did any of your boys find an empty purse anywhere around here this morning?—N. Y. Weekly.

Novill—Yes, so I've heard.

Stagger—But even says he had to wear a pair of trousers which were cut from an old blanket, and another pair out from the curtain of his tent.

Novill—Poor fellow! I'm deuced glad I'm not an explorer.—Puck.

It Was, Perhaps, Deserved.

Amicus—Why are you so angry at having your poem reproduced in that paper?

Grandmother (seeing Tommy for the first time)—Come here, dear. You look like a little boy. You look like an old-fashioned little boy. You look like the children I used to see in my day. You are good. I hope, does mamma ever punish you?

Tommy (aged seven) Yes, ma'am, a slugger, yer bet yer life.—Munsey's Weekly.

Sound Advice.
