HOUSEHOLD BREVITIES.

—To test nutmegs prick them with a pin. If they are good the oil will instantly spread around the puncture thus made.

—Poverty Soup.—Pare and slice ten large potatoes and six large onions, then take six slices of salt pork fried crisp, and then mix contents together, and boil until tender, then add butter and add dumplings as for any soup.—Boston Budget.

—Escalloped Tomatoes.—Butter a baking-dish, put in a layer of bread crumbs or pounded crackers, then a layer of tomatoes, season with salt, pepper and butter. Continue this until the dish is full, having crumbs for top layer. Put plenty of butter on top and pour boiling water over all. Bake thirty minutes.—N. Y. World.

—Cooking Asparagus.—Wash the asparagus thoroughly, break off heads and put in a dish by themselves; cut the stalks in pieces two or three inches long, splitting the larger ones, put them in boiling water, then cook fifteen minutes, then add the heads and cook until done; drain off nearly all the water, put in salt and butter to taste and let boil, add some new milk and let boil again. Serve white hot.—Orange Judd Farmer.

—Clams and oysters on the half shell are now served on ice plates molded for the purpose. A dolly is laid over the ice and the shells are arranged on star lines. When this is done the course is not placed on the table before the guests are seated, but is brought in at once from the ice where it is kept. The notion originated doubtless in the constant desire of private entertainers to differentiate their feasts from restaurant dining. High-class restaurants press them closely and the endeavor to widen the distance is constant.—N. Y. Times.

—A gentleman who has a marvelous display of roses in the little space behind his town house says that he attributes their wonderful bloom, color and size to the effect of a strange experiment. An establishment for the slaughtering of animals for market being in his neighborhood, he obtained, several times a week, a quantity of blood which he mixed with the earth around the roots of the plants. The result is most satisfactory as far as improving his plants is concerned, but one cannot help rather shuddering at the idea of carotivorous roses; it seems like an unnatural and horrid appetite. Particularly super are his "Jacks," whose deep and vivid red is almost unpleasantly suggestive.—N. Y. Tribune.

—Mayonnaise Dressing.—Beat a raw egg (some use the yolks only) until it is thoroughly smooth; add a teaspoonful of mustard, more rather thicker than usual; when quite smooth add by degrees a half-pint of olive oil, taking care to blend each portion of it with the egg before adding more; this ought to be as smooth as honey and thick enough so that a spoon will stand up in it; dilute with vinegar until it assumes the consistency of thick cream; a little anchovy may be added if desired; lemon juice may be added instead of vinegar, or a few drops may be added with vinegar. This is the smoothest and richest of salad dressings. The oily flavor is entirely lost in combination with the raw egg. This sauce keeps well if bottled and corked with glass stopper and may be made at any time in advance, if only yolks are used.—Boston Herald.

—Strawberry Mousse.—Soak one-fourth of a package of gelatine in one cup of a cupful of cold water. Mash a quart of strawberries with half as much sugar, and let them stand two hours; then rub them through a coarse strainer. Pour one-third of a cupful of boiling water upon the soaked gelatine, and when it has dissolved mix it with the fruit. Set the dish in ice-water and stir until the mixture begins to thicken. Then add gently two quarts of whipped cream. Have ready a three-quart mold packed in ice, and pour the mixture into enough ice to bring the packing up to the cover of the mold. Put the mixture in the mold, cover with white paper, put on the lid, and if not perfectly tight coat the edge with melted suet, to keep out the salt. Pack it over top with ice and salt, and let it stand for four hours. It will then be ready to turn out on a flat dish and serve in smooth slices.—Demorest's.

SICK HEADACHE.

Dietetic Rules for Relieving That Painful Affliction.

Anyone who has ever had a sick headache remembers the experience. Perhaps, if his memory is good, he can also remember the cause of it. He has a recollection about a plum-pudding, a Thanksgiving turkey, a "boiled dinner," or a late supper with ice-cream and cake, or a big piece of mother's mince pie, or some other dietetic abuse or abomination. He went to bed feeling well contented with having satisfied his appetite, but awoke in the morning with a splitting headache, feeling as though he never wanted to eat again, but, as a little girl said, would "like to unswallow himself."

Sick headache is always the result of stomach disturbance. Generally there has been a gross violation of dietetic laws. Too many sweetmeats, dainties, fats or other indigestible things are eaten (any quantity is too much). The sick headache is nature's punishment for the transgression of her laws. That what shall one do who has incurred the penalty, and is suffering for his sins? Doubtless the repentance is genuine for the time being. So we may help him out for this time, exacting a promise that he will sin no more against his much-abused stomach. On this condition, tell him to swallow at once a quart of hot water. If he vomits, well and good; let him swallow another quart. Also take a copious enema to free the bowels, which are generally loaded. He must take no food for twenty-four hours. When the stomach feels empty or bad, fill it up with hot water. A hot fomentation over the stomach, a hot foot-bath, and sponging the head with hot water, are simple measures which generally afford relief. A hot full-bath, if it can be taken, is also useful in many cases.—Good Health.

An Egg Is a Young Fowl.

One should bear in mind that an egg is a young fowl and that it is liable to get sick, have the pleurisy, peritonitis, or something similar, just as readily as a young fowl. When an egg is sick, it will stick to the shell, because the membranes of the egg have become adherent by a sort of inflammatory process. An egg gets sick by germs working their way through the porous shell and there setting up a process of inflammation or decay. So every egg is open to suspicion which is not perfectly fresh, and a stale egg is utterly unfit for food. Some housewives economize by using eggs in cakes and puddings, which they would not consider fit to peck or boil, but they are harmful just the same, however disguised by sweets and spices.—From a Lecture by Dr. J. B. Kellogg, of the Battle Creek Sanitarium.

CHINESE POLITENESS.

To Foreign Eyes It Appears Quite Remarkable.

Chinese etiquette is peculiar. Perhaps all formal politeness is peculiar in the eyes of those who are unaccustomed to it, but Chinese politeness is, if we may say so, regularly peculiar. A Chinese bride called upon a foreign lady, says Rev. A. H. Smith. On entering the room she deliberately turned her back upon her hostess, and made an elaborate obeisance. Of course the foreign lady was amazed and annoyed; but she found out the reason of the strange proceeding afterward. The bride's conduct had conformed to Chinese etiquette.

She had performed her obeisance—her K'o't'—to the north because that is the direction of the emperor's abode. If the foreign lady was so ignorant as to stand on the south side of the room, that was not the bride's concern. She knew if her hostess did not, in what direction to bow her head.

A foreigner was invited to a wedding. Provisions were provided in abundance, but when the feast was well advanced a tray was produced containing only two or three cakes. These were offered first to the foreigner in a somewhat ostentatious manner as being hot. Perhaps he would prefer them in that condition. He declined them with thanks, having already eaten as much as he wished.

He noticed with some surprise that his declination seemed to throw a kind of gloom over the festivities, and that the tray was withdrawn without being offered to anyone else. It was not till afterward that the mystery was explained to him.

It is customary for each guest at a Chinese wedding to contribute a fixed sum toward the expenses of the occasion, and in this particular part of the country such collections are made while the guests are at the table. As it would not suit Chinese ideas of propriety to ask a guest for his offering, the tax is levied under the guise of passing him hot biscuits. In the present instance the polite fiction was understood by everyone except the ill-informed foreigner, whose refusal, he being the guest of honor, rendered it improper for anyone else to make a contribution at that time.

Some time afterward the same gentleman was invited to another wedding in the same family. By that time he was better informed, but the family were not disposed to take any risks. At the proper moment the master of ceremonies remarked with more than Occidental directness: "This is the place for those who have accounts to come in and settle them."—Youth's Companion.

MISCELLANEOUS.

—There is blind, and it is lucky that it is. Otherwise this world would not last more than 300 or 400 years at the outside.

—Burglar (to promising young pick-pocket):—"Say, pal, how are yer doin'?" Pick-pocket—"O, I'm gittin' me hand in."—N. Y. Journal.

—Jenks—"Is weakness weak?" Blenka—"Of course." Jenks—"Then what makes it take so much strength to overcome?"

—"What I can't understand," groaned Tommy, "is that a little stummielike like mine can have such a tremendous big ache."

—Foley—"Have you nice neighbors?" Patterson—"Elegant. Why, they spend the fall and winter in Florida and the spring and summer in Newport."

—"An apartment is so convenient," said Mrs. Trotter, "when you see anyone coming to call that you don't want to see, all you have to do is to walk down stairs while they are coming up in an elevator."—N. Y. Sun.

—"What do you think of your little sister, Osgoodson?" inquired his father. "She may improve upon a more extended acquaintance," replied the little Boston boy, regarding the new infant critically, "but at present she seems abnormally crude and immature."

—Prince Bismarck has one hundred and three decorations. Fourteen are set in diamonds of great value. He belongs to no English order. The late czar of Russia gave him the order of St. Andrew, the most important in Russia. Bismarck's diamond star belonging to the order is worth $50,000.

—The department of Agriculture is about to introduce to the people of the United States a new vegetable food resembling the Irish potato, but longer. It is the root of the calla lily, which grows readily and without much cultivation in swampy land, yielding enormous crops. It is commonly used in Egypt and Japan, and Florida farmers have begun to raise it for market.

—To mark steel tools, just warm them slightly and rub the steel with wax or hard tallow until a film gathers. Then with a needle scratch your name on the wax, cutting through to the steel. A little nitric acid poured on the marking will quickly get out the letters. Wipe acid and wax off with a warm, soft rag, and the letters will be clearly etched.

—The less one sees and knows men, the higher one esteems them; for experience teaches their real value.—Marguerite de Valois.

—For one Orpheus who went to hell to seek his wife, how many widowers who would not even go to Paradise to find theirs.—J. Petit-Saun.
