LOVE'S CHANGE.

Before I loved, this world to me was a vast, strange, and fearful. Hounded by selfish aims and fears, You had for joy, too, to see me; But all is changed, and now I see Beauty where none was wont to be— Beauty of woman and of land, Of noble thought and purpose grand; And, best of all, the tender grace And love-light shining in her face, Her voice, so like a sweet carol, And all her mystic accents.

NOT HIS SWEETHEART.

But Cupid Won the Game at Last.

On a summer morning a young man turned down a Yarmouth row. It was a long, narrow row, and the sun that gleamed at the quay end made its shade even less enviable.

Here a woman with a red face and brandishing a broom in her hand was barring the entrance against a herculean man in a glistening oily frock.

Looking up at her, and seeing for the first time that she was in deep mourning, the young man smiled also. Then a thought appeared to strike him.

"I don't care if it's for eight years. There's nothing to stop me here."

"Oh, I see!" he exclaimed, "you're going to take it, miss. Well, you know where to go. Old Tom Price is the owner, 'an the name of the vessel the Sancy Lass."

Eight weeks later the young man, bronzed and hearty, stood on Yarmouth quay. His sea rig had given place to a decent suit of clothes, and he seemed pondering which way to go.

What mystery was this? He lay back in the sun and tried to solve it, but no solution came, and with the murmur of the sea in his ears he romantically kissed the order. Then he arose and walked back.

On his homeward path he stopped by a morning paper. They were but just in, and the news vendor was something them out. Suddenly he caught his breath. His gaze was riveted on an advertisement that read thus:

tor, with a smile, "in a fishing smack."

"Sea-fishing smack!" gasped the lawyer. "You, George! Is it possible?"

"In a few words the young man told his tale. The old solicitor listened with much interest; then his face grew grave.

"You know, of course, I was the person most trusted by your uncle, besides being his confidential adviser. I was also his friend. Well, as soon as you left I was called in to draw up a fresh will.

"At first, my dear boy, he wavered between leaving his money to his wife for cats and the founding of a colony for reformed pickpockets. These mad projects, however, soon evaporated, and, subject to one condition, he made his property over to me.

"The lawyer led the way, and in the privacy of this apartment they both sat down again.

"The crimson drawing-room opens into the green, which is similarly decorated, and furnished in the richest satin brocade, but the prevailing color, as might be expected, is green, by which it does not by any means mean can be still, but green of a somewhat crude shade.

"The white drawing-room is furnished in crimson and gold damask with white walls decorated in an essentially French style. The walls of the room are hung with numerous portraits of the royal family, while a number of exquisitely worked cabinets and a table inlaid with Florentine mosaic in the form of flowers and fruit are among the principal ornaments.

"My advice," said the old lawyer, "is to go into partnership. And if the wishes of a dry old bit of legal parchment, who had a love dream once, can follow you far, they will repeat good-bye and much happiness.—Philadelphia Press.

Mr. John Augustus O'Shea, in his "Roundabout Recollections," tells a story of Victor Emmanuel, whom he describes as "a squat, recumbent, ugly, so much a degree that his ugliness had the charm of the unique. One day, while on a hunting expedition in the Alps, he met an old woman gathering brambles. She inquired of the stranger whether it was true, as she had heard, that the king was in the neighborhood. If so, was there any chance of seeing him?

"Yes," said his majesty, "he is about. Would you really like to see him?" The old woman declared that few sights would give her more pleasure.

QUEEN VICTORIA'S HOME.

Arrangement of the Apartments at Windsor Castle.

The state dining-room at Windsor castle is, according to the Pall Mall Gazette, a very fine apartment in the Prince of Wales' tower. It was reserved for the queen's use on the jubilee in gold and white, after a very tasteful design chosen by Princess Beatrice.

The three drawing-rooms are connected with the dining-room, by the corridor, and with each other by folding doors, and all the doors are decorated with the same unique Chippendale work.

The crimson drawing-room is next to the dining-room. It is decorated and upholstered in crimson satin brocade, which, together with the richness of the embellishments and the wealth of gliding with which it is adorned, gives this room a very gorgeous appearance.

The white drawing-room is furnished in crimson and gold damask with white walls decorated in an essentially French style. The walls of the room are hung with numerous portraits of the royal family, while a number of exquisitely worked cabinets and a table inlaid with Florentine mosaic in the form of flowers and fruit are among the principal ornaments.

The drawing-rooms were cleaned not long ago and the furniture rearranged, but otherwise they have been left untouched. The hangings and stuffs with which the chairs and sofas are covered might with advantage be altered, for though they are very rich the style is old fashioned, belonging to the early period of her majesty's reign, and shows little or no change of fashion.

These fine rooms are all connected by the grand corridor. It is very handsomely decorated, the ceiling in gold and cream and the walls in sage green and gold. It is hung on one side with pictures, and on the other with portraits of statesmen, including Arthur Wellesley, Duke of Wellington.

In a certain western town, according to Texas Siftings, the clergy of the various religious sects were very tolerant toward each other. On the occasion of the Jewish rabbi's silver wedding, he invited the Protestant clergyman and also the Catholic priest. While the reverend gentlemen were enjoying the good cheer set before them, the Catholic priest said to the rabbi: "I know that you are a very liberal-minded gentleman; but could you bring yourself to eat pork?" "Certainly I could relish some ham, at least on one occasion."

"And that would be?" "At the marriage dinner of your reverence."
