A great deal has been said of Hotel Latham, the Delmonico of Southwest Kentucky, but never has there been a word said or a line written that it did not deserve. It would be hard to exaggerate the superior advantages, the general service and luxuries this hotel affords. There is absolutely nothing lacking to make it a first-class hotel, a hotel of 1895, in every respect.—Madisonville Hustler

W. H. Jernigan & Co., of Pembroke, have opened up another hardware and implement house at Trenton, and if energy and push are among the requisites to great success this firm will build up even a larger business at Trenton than they enjoy at Pembroke. They start up the new business with a view of staying and will carry an elegant line of goods. Trenton already enjoys a fine business patronage in every line, and with her increase in population developing without abatement she offers a larger field for all lines. Jernigan & Co's. business has also grown to such proportions that they find that larger territory is necessary, hence their step. The Cumberland Telephone and Telegraph company, appreciating the enterprise of this immense concern, have agreed to put up an independent line connecting the two houses and work will begin at once. The firm's new house starts in with every assurance of success and will be quite an acquisition to Trenton's large list of business concerns.
