The Christmas number of the Century reflects much of the holiday spirit. The opening article is "Merry Christmas in the Tenements," by Jacob A. Riis, author of "How the Other Half Lives" and other studies of life in the tenement districts of New York. Mr. Riis shows that even in the most poverty-stricken parts of the city gaiety and good-feeling are to be found at the Christmas season. The article has many characteristic illustrations by Jay Hambridge. The artist accompanied the author in his rounds of observation, and together they chose the subjects for illustration. Clarence Cook contributes a sketch of the author of the familiar poem of childhood, "Twas the Night before Christmas," and a portrait is given of the author. Dr. Clement C. Moore. How to Prevent Pneumonia.

At this time of the year a cold is very easily contracted, and if left to run its course without the aid of some reliable cough medicine is liable to result in that dread disease, pneumonia. We know of no better remedy to cure a cough or cold than Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. We have used it quite extensively and it has always given entire satisfaction.—Olajah, Ind. Ter. Chief.

This is the only remedy that is known to be a certain preventive of pneumonia. Among the many thousands who have used it for colds and la grippe, we never yet learned of a single case having resulted in pneumonia. Persons who have weak lungs or have reason to fear an attack of pneumonia, should keep the remedy at hand. The 25 and 50 cent sizes for sale by R. C. Hardwick.

P'S LETTER.

Hunting and Camping in Arkansas Notions.

Nov. 24, 1897.—This morning the sun was up before we were, which is unusual, because we are early risers. We had an arrangement with Howard Robb, our ever faithful friend, whereby we were to cross the lake and take stands, and he would, with his dogs, come across the woods from Arkansas City, driving as he came. Mr. Monroe, our postmaster general, took some of us in his boat up to the railroad bridge and placed us along the road bed to town. The morning was cold, a driving East wind blowing, but with swift, strong strokes he soon landed us. The rest of the men went to Monroe's shack across the lake and were placed on the stands through the woods. Robb's dogs ran off to the rear, before he reached the railroad, and the stands there were useless. At Monroe's they had two dogs—Pall Dick and Monroe's hound. The men had scarcely reached their stands before the dogs had up a number of deer. They carried a doe and fawn to Wash Wills, who was acting as Rice's proxy, who killed the doe at his first fire; then the fawn to Caudle, who fired both barrels and killed it; and another deer still, a nice spike buck, was hurried to Sinclair, who killed him. Still another deer ran near Mr. Parrish's stand, but he did not see it. In less than twenty minutes we had three nice, fat deer, which was a good morning's hunt. All the hunters were now called in and again placed through the woods. Had up some deer, but they ran between Cypress and Chicot lakes and no one had a shot. Sinclair saw a deer a long distance through the woods in front of him. We came to camp, as we crossed the lake in two heavily-loaded boats with the hunters, their guns glistening in the sunlight and reflected in the clear water beneath, and a dozen dogs swimming behind the boats it was an inspiring hunting scene. Mr. and Mrs. Wolfolk spent the greater part of the day in camp. Walter Radford, the carpet knight, did the honors for the "hunt." They came by rail to the bridge across the lake, and then boated to camp. They live twenty miles above at Dermott. Mrs. Wolfolk was Miss Emma Wheeler, a daughter of the late Dr. Wheeler. They had with them their little son, and it is needless to say that we were glad to see them, and gave the best our camp afforded. They tell us that they are going to return in a few days and bring a party of young ladies to remain all night. Holly Moses! in a crisis so imminent as this, what must we do? Cannot the conclave of some church be called to occupy our tent. I know not what others may do, but I am going to roost out in the dark forest on some hidden and lonely stump, and Walter can continue to do the honors of camp. The fishermen, Rice and Glass, came in late, and were in the condition fishermen usually are when unsuccessful. It is an old and true adage, which says fish will not bite when an East wind is blowing. Mr. West and Capt. White have been hunting the lost horse all day and have not found him.

Nov. 25, 1897.—Last night after 9 o'clock Pendleton's two hound pups were running a deer which they had jumped late in the evening. This morning they came in exhausted and almost dead. Rain last night and the day has been wet with occasional sunshine. Hunted the woods West from camp, had some fine chases, but no one has fired a shot.

Frivolous hunt, but this is Thanksgiving day and perhaps it was more consistent with what is due to rest and peace. But why one cannot thank God while riding through the forest listening to the music of the wind sighing through the tree tops and his soul in communion with his God, as well as while eating turkey and wine and dining until he is stupid for three days afterward, is something a child of nature cannot understand. We, too, had a splendid dinner, managed by Mr. Caudle, which I doubt if any table could surpass. A fine saddle of fat venison was the masterpiece, with various other things which go to make a dinner in camp. And are we thankful? We are, for all God's mercies, and especially for our people.

It is exceedingly dark to night. Around the deep woods wraps us, as if in the embrace of the tomb, while above can be only seen a few twinkling stars, shining like the eyes of God's angels speaking of beauty and faithfulness now and hereafter. In the woods not three hundred yards from camp can be heard the screams of a hungry panther longing for his prey. Under such surroundings we go to bed, and let us hope, to sleep.

A Desperate Woman.

Experts in insanity tell us that when anyone goes insane, frequently their whole nature is reversed. They do and say exactly the opposite things to what they would do in their sane minds. A mother whose mind breaks down under extreme nervous tension may turn upon the one object in all the world most precious to her—her baby. The terrible nervous tension under which many women live and suffer because of some weakness or disease of their sex, keeps them on the very verge of insanity. The constant drag and drain upon the complicated and delicate organization affects the whole nervous system and works upon the brain with an almost irresistible madness. Thousands of suffering women have been literally saved from the insane asylum by the timely influence of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It is the one perfect and positive specific for every derangement of woman's special organism. It is a scientific and permanent cure for those severe, chronic, complicated cases which doctors usually consider hopeless. It is the only medicine of its kind devised by an educated and skilled physician.

Mrs. Sarah E. Rains, of Dayton, Cass Co., Mo., in a letter to Dr. Pierce, writes: "It was in the winter of 1890 that my sufferings commenced. It was close to my time of confinement. I took the grip, and that with the labor pains all went to my head. I suffered dreadfully, and when I gave birth to my little boy I kept getting worse. I doctored but nothing did me any good. I had nervous spasms and was delirious—Oh, no tongue can express my sufferings. I was advised by a lady to try your medicine and I did. I got one bottle of the Favorite Prescription, and one of the 'Golden Medical Discovery.' I had taken two-thirds of the medicine when it commenced its work. I began to feel better, and still continued getting better. In a short time I felt like another woman. I gained strength and flesh. I am now forty-one years of age, and I feel as well as your medicine that saved my life."

C. R. Clark, Mgr., THE BOY GROCER

It has become known at Frankfort that three high officials contributed $250 each to a campaign fund sent to Kenton county by the Republicans in the hope of defeating State Senator Goebel for re-election. The Hunter-Doobe element centered their fight on Mr. Goebel, and politics around Frankfort think he will retaliate when the Legislature meets.
