Throwing Shoes After a Bride. The custom of throwing old shoes and rice has prevailed for many years in America, England and Scotland. It came from the Eastern nations, and was originally intended as a sign of relinquishment by the relatives of their authority over the bride.

An old Jewish custom provided that a brother of a childless man had the first privilege of marrying the widow, and until her brother-in-law refused her she could not marry again. Another authority maintains that the throwing of the shoe was a sham assault on the groom, who was supposed to be carrying off the bride.

Important to Mothers.

The manufacturers of Castoria have been compelled to spend hundreds of thousands of dollars to familiarize the public with the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher. This has been necessitated by reason of pirates counterfeiting the Castoria trade-mark. This counterfeiting is a crime not only against the proprietors of Castoria, but against the growing generation. All persons should be careful to see that Castoria bears the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher, if they would guard the health of their children. Parents and mothers, in particular, ought to carefully examine the Castoria advertisements which have been appearing in this paper, and to remember that the wrapper of every bottle of genuine Castoria bears the fac-simile signature of Chas. H. Fletcher, under whose supervision it has been manufactured continuously for over thirty years.—Phila Bulletin.

Ragsdale, Cooper & Co.

The Main street warehouse firm of Ragsdale, Cooper & Co. inserts an advertisement in this issue. The firm will continue without change of name, Mrs. W. E. Ragsdale retaining the interest of her late husband. The firm of Ragsdale, Cooper & Co. was organized in 1888 and the business has grown to large proportions under its excellent management. During the last two or three years Mr. R. E. Cooper has been in entire control of the business, while Mr. Ragsdale was away in search of health. The latter's recent death therefore makes no change in the management. Mr. Cooper has surrounded himself with competent assistants in the various branches of the business and will strive in the future as in the past to maintain the present high standard of his house. His sales will appear regularly in the KENTUCKIAN'S news columns.

QUEER WEDDINGS.

Two Caldwell County Couples Enter into Alliances.

Monday Squire Mayes tied two of the most tangled matrimonial knots we have heard of, says the Princeton Republican. John Hubbard was married to Allie Lamb, the sister of his divorced wife, who was married at the same time to Ed Riley. Riley's wife was also a divorced woman.

All the parties came to town together in a wagon, and after the ceremony Hubbard assisted his new wife to a reserved spring seat in the front of the wagon, and his former wife, new Mrs. Riley, to a seat in the rear end of the vehicle, after which he also helped Riley, who was overcome with "emotion," into the wagon. The much wedded parties then drove to their country residences, where they no doubt enjoyed themselves in a large manner.

GOOD SALES

And Satisfactory Prices Prevailed Throughout This Week.

The sales of tobacco this week were considerably larger than those of last and prices were unchanged. Receipts have been fairly good and will continue to improve, as much of the weed had been prepared for prizing. Nearly all of the '97 stock has been sold and the sales in future will be made up principally of the '98 crop. The loose market is still active.

THE TURKISH MASSACRES.

Some of the Awful Scenes Recently Enacted in Armenia.

You would see only a small knot of people, say 20, perhaps a flourish of wooden clubs in the air, says Chalmers Roberts, in the Atlantic. Then the mob would move on, leaving the body of a dead Armenian behind. This was massacre. Not a sound signified the horrible business afoot. The shops were closed as if for a holiday; people, men and women, evidently all Turks, were quietly moving about the streets. The stillness of it seemed to me the most appalling part. One soon grew hardened to the sight of dead men. One came to expect that venerable Ulemas the ascetic young Softas, on their way from mosque to mosque, would kick the mangled bodies which blocked their paths, and curse them for dogs of Armenian traitors. The pools of blood in the streets, in some places actually dripping and trickling downhill, came in time, after you had stepped over and around a hundred of them, to remind you of some early visit to a slaughter house. Animal blood all seems the same; it was hard to realize that this had run in human veins.

Thursday night the killing continued; so, also, all night long, the rattle of the death carts through the streets carrying the dead to the burying trenches. Not until Friday night did the continual pressure of the ambassadors force the government to issue orders to the soldiers to fire on any mobs seen. Then the massacre came promptly to an end. A visit made on Saturday morning to the Armenian cemetery at Chiehl gave the best idea of the awful extent of the deadly work. Here the American and Belgian ministers estimated that they saw from 1,500 to 2,000 bodies, laid out in long lines, awaiting the completion of the trenches. Many of them had been lying in the hot sun since Wednesday, and were so swollen that their arms and legs were thrust up stark and stiff into the air.

Armenians were killed because the Turks were convinced that they were conspiring against the holy government; and they were permitted to be killed because that same holy government did not dare to add to its well-established unpopularity by interfering with its infuriated subjects. Undoubtedly the priesthood had much to do with inciting the murderers.

PADEREWSKI AS A STUDENT.

Had Won Fame as a Virtuoso, Then Begon All Over Again.

"When Paderewski came to Leschetizky, in Vienna, some ten years ago, it was as a concert performer who had already achieved success in Russia and mastered an extensive repertoire," writes Cleveland Moffett, in the Ladies' Home Journal. "Leschetizky heard him play for awhile and then said: 'You have some very bad faults, but you have talent. You have played too many things, and nothing well enough. Your wrist is hard and stiff. If you come to me you must forget for six months that you have a repertoire; you must play nothing but exercises for technique, six hours a day of exercises, and nothing else.'"

"Paderewski thought the matter over and decided that he had the strength of will for this severe test, and put himself entirely in Leschetizky's hands. All day long for six months this finished concert performer worked away at the mechanics of piano playing, at exercises specially devised for him by Leschetizky, and some devised by himself with reference to peculiarities of his own hands. Every evening he took a lesson at the professor's house, this being a mark of special favor, for with ordinary pupils all lessons end at five in the afternoon, and one lesson in two weeks is the best that even the most proficient may attain. One hour, two hours, three hours, these nightly lessons lasted, for Leschetizky gives no heed to time once his serious interest is aroused. These two men were together constantly; they took long walks; they played hard-fought games of billiards, both being adepts at the game; they talked incessantly, for Leschetizky has a fluent tongue, and what the older man knew of the sounding art he gave freely to the younger man, and that the disciple has given to the world."

Cost of Armed Peace.

The cost of keeping the whole of Europe on a military and naval footing works out at considerable over $212,000,000. The navy and army of Russia costs at present over $51,500,000 annually; Great Britain, without colonies or dependencies, $38,500,000,000; France, $37,000,000,000; and Germany, $26,500,000,000. The revenue of Russia is $179,000,000; France, $137,500,000; Great Britain, $103,000,000, and Germany, $64,250,000, with populations of 124,000,000, 39,500,000, 38,000,000 and 39,500,000 respectively.

USED BY THE NOBILITY.

The Remedy That Makes People Well—Paine's Celery Compound.

In every civilized country rich and poor alike have found restored health and new vigor in Paine's celery compound.

"Hard-working people of ordinary means are to be congratulated," says an English writer in reviewing the scientific work of the last quarter of a century, "upon having so easily within their reach to-day a remedy which the wealthiest and most influential persons must themselves use, if they would get the best that modern medical skill offers. Paine's celery compound proves that the science of medicine has kept pace with the wonderful progress which characterizes the life of the present generation."

The astonishing reputation that this most wonderful of all remedies has acquired is principally due to the word-of-mouth recommendation and endorsement of men and women of the highest business and social standing, as well as of those in humbler but no less important positions who have themselves discovered its merits.

Adeline, Countess Schimmelmann, whose portrait is here given, in a recent letter to the Wells & Richardson Company speaks of friends of hers who have been benefited by Paine's celery compound, and who first advised her to recommend it to her sick friends.

The Countess, as is well known, is a prominent member of the Danish court. Her coming to this country has been much talked of. Her
