A Handful of Sketches

That I can show you will easily convince the most skeptical that I can do the planning if you will tell me the amount you want to spend and send sketches with measure of inside of rooms.

You can plan, and plan well perhaps, but you want some one to put it on paper and prepare your specifications. Perhaps I can add to your idea and together make you a better building for less money. It costs nothing to try.

Are Simple and Easily Constructed Affairs Without Doors or Halls.

A Japanese house consists in the main of a post at each corner and a roof, says the Detroit Free Press. The roof may or may not be covered with heavy channeled purplish tiles—it makes little difference in the long run whether it is or is not, for if it is not tiled the first typhoon that comes along removes it into somebody's garden anything up to a quarter of a mile away, and if it is tiled heavily enough to resist the typhoon so much the worse for the people underneath it when the first genuine earthquake arrives. But the odds are that it will be burned down before either happens, as the Japanese use very cheap lamps and very fiery petroleum and are regular children about fires. Of course something else is done to the four posts and the roof before they become houses in which births, marriages and deaths can take place. But really remarkably little is necessary. Cross beams are naturally added to support the weight of the roof, grooves are made in the cross beams and in the platform raised a foot or two above the ground which constitutes the floor. A Japanese house is all on one floor generally—in fact, one might say it is all on one floor. Between the grooves in the floor and the grooves in the cross beams are run shutters with paper panels to divide the houses into whatever number of rooms the owner may choose, which depends on the number of bedrooms he may require. There are no doors or passages in a typical Japanese house. In it every room acts as a passage into the room beyond it and for the door you slide back the panel that happens to be nearest to you.

For this sliding there are little bronze sunk handles in the wooden frames of the panels. The outside paper shutters do not come quite to the edge of the platform floor, the grooves along the edges are filled at night or in severe weather with wooden shutters, each of which is held in its place by the one that follows it, the last one being secured with a flimsy wooden bolt.

PUBLIC BATHS OF PARIS.

Conservative Dislike of Water Outwardly Applied Hard to Overcome.

A curious little print has come to light through the publication of a report in the French Bulletin Official of the number of people who have profited by public baths to give themselves an elementary wash. It is needless to say that the number is not startlingly large in proportion to the population. The use of the bath makes but slow progress among the French, except in the upper classes, among whom it is an honored institution—in Paris, at least. The provincials are a little behindhand in their love of water outwardly applied, and still speak of a "bain de propreté" or a "bain de sante" as a remedy to be used but sparingly.

French workmen are more apt to adopt habits of personal cleanliness than working women, who are strictly conservative in these matters, and look upon these matters with deep suspicion. Nevertheless they are in one respect more enterprising than the men. Only one man in every thousand, according to the Bulletin Official, takes swimming lessons from the bath keepers, while one woman out of every fifteen does her best to acquire the art. But this only proves, what the philosophic observer of mankind has long suspected, that women are even more anxious than men to be always "in the swim."

Paper Stockings.

Paper gloves and stockings are now being manufactured in Europe. The stockings have been carefully examined by experts and they are loud in their praise of them. Let no one assume, they say, that these stockings, because they are made of paper, will only last a few days, for they will last almost as long as ordinary stockings. The reason is because the paper of which they are made was during the process of manufacture rendered into a substance closely resembling wool, and then woven and otherwise treated as ordinary wool.

ROMANCE OF THE PAPACY.

Secrets of the Vatican That Have Reached Public Knowledge.

As a rule the secrets of the Vatican are well kept and most of the stories that are told apropos of the new pope must be taken with a grain of salt. Now and again, however, something of the romance of the papacy really leaks out, though not through the cardinals. There was, for example, says an exchange, the strange case of Pope Pius IX., pretty well known a generation ago, but now almost forgotten. In his younger days, when he was Count Master Ferrati and a layman he met and fell in love with Miss Foster, daughter of the Irish Protestant bishop of Kilmore, who was living in Italy with her sister, Mme. De Salis. Miss Foster favored the young count, but Mme. De Salis drove the lover away. Afterward she relented, the count returned and the wedding day was fixed. On the appointed day the bride and her friends were at the church, but no bridegroom appeared and Count Mastai Ferrati was never seen again. Years afterward Miss Foster went to see Pope Pius IX. and was astonished to recognize in the pontiff her old flame the count.

The most sensational novelist could not have invented a plot more fascinating than the real story of Pope Leo's predecessor. Mme. De Salis had made an unhappy marriage with an Italian, and her parents, fearing a similar fate for the younger daughter, made her promise to guard Miss Foster against a union with a foreigner, hence her interference to separate the lovers; it was only when her sister pined away that Mme. De Salis relented. The disappearance of the count had quite a flavor of Dumas about it. Unknown to his fiancée he was bound to the Jesuits, and his superiors in the order peremptorily sent him away on a mission to prevent his marriage with an Englishwoman and a Protestant. Letters were intercepted and he was led to believe that she had married another, so he took orders and rapidly rose to be bishop, then cardinal and eventually pope. Then in the height of his grandeur he was brought face to face with the woman he had loved and lost. Nothing more dramatic has ever been staged.

WEALTH THROWN AWAY.

In Waste Baskets of Chicago Great Fortunes Are Concealed.

"In the waste baskets in Chicago," said a business man the other day, according to the Chicago Tribune, "there is wealth enough to make any one man independently rich for life."

"Come again," said the doubting friend.

"Rich for life," went on the other. "You don't see how? Of course you don't. I do.

"Did you ever consider the thousands and thousands of waste baskets that are emptied by the janitors in offices every night? Well, suppose you could get all that paper. Your income every day would be in the hundreds of dollars. That is, if you simply sold the paper to pulp mills.

"But suppose you could add to that tidy income by possessing yourself of the stamps that are dropped into the waste basket by mistake? There would be another fine item in your income.

"Suppose, then, if your conventional mind will permit you, to stray so far afield, that a man could buy all the business secrets that he could find lying in waste baskets. He would have, I assure you, such a lever that he could pry solid gold into his bank account.

"Why, man, there is more money going to waste in the waste baskets in this town every day than many men make in a long life of hard work. I wish I could buy the privilege of taking all the stuff. That's all."

PUBLIC WOMEN

And public Speakers everywhere are very often troubled with a cough or some throat irritation which may lead to graver complications later on. A cough neglected may pave the way for the germs of consumption to enter the weakened system. There is no better preventive against this dread disease nor more certain medicine to cure a cough and at the same time to act as a sustaining tonic to build up the entire system than Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, which purifies and enriches the blood. It increases the activity of the blood-making process, so that the body is abundantly supplied with the red corpuscles of health.

A prominent woman, who is very favorably known as an elocutionist, gives the following testimony:

DR. R. V. PIERCE, Buffalo, N. Y.:

Dear Sir—I had a swollen gland in my neck which the doctor called Goitre. I had an operation performed which destroyed the goitre but left me with a cough and throat trouble. I have taken several bottles of your "Golden Medical Discovery," and find that it has helped me wonderfully. Doctors told me that I had consumption, but I have no trace of that horrible disease to-day, and owe my present health to your valuable medicine.
