Kentucky Press Association In Session at Grayson Springs This Week.

BANQUET TUESDAY EVE.

Members Take Action Favorable to Passage of the Libel Bill.

Grayson Springs, July 25.—The annual meeting of the Kentucky Press Association was called to order in the big ball room of the hotel and the roll was called by Secretary W. Vernon Richardson. Col Noel Gaines, of Frankfort, offered prayer and the address of welcome was delivered by M. E. Arnold, of the Leitchfield Gazette. It was responded to by Mayor Clarence E. Woods, of Richmond. In concluding Mr. Woods paid a beautiful tribute to the late Richard W. Miller, of Richmond. President E. A. Gullion then read his annual report

Jouet Shouse, of the Lexington Herald, spoke on "Features" and asked the support of the Kentucky editors for the Lexington fair.

Mr. Shouse was followed by the Hon. Reed Embry, of Danville, on "The Newspaper Man in Politics." His reference to William Jennings Bryan called forth a storm of cheers. He also paid tributes to Henry Waterson, Col. W. B. Haldeman, the late Richard W. Miller and the late Col. W. C. P. Breckinridge.

President Gullion recommended that hereafter the members of the association should secure pledges from candidates for the general assembly to support measures indorsed by the association; that the constitution be revised; that the state fair and state development convention be supported. He favored the forming of District Publishers' Leagues in the state and recommended that membership in the one be conditional upon membership in the other. He also recommended that the editors make the trip to the Jamestown Exposition and that if any steps were taken toward a state display there the Kentucky press lend hearty endorsement.

The most important matter given attention at the business meeting was the libel bill, which was defeated at the last session of the legislature. At the suggestion of Col. W. B. Haldeman, editor of the Louisville Times, a committee of five was appointed to draw up resolutions to the effect that the members of the association would only support candidates for office favorable to the interests of the newspapers.

A banquet was held last night at which the following toasts were responded to:

"The Salt of the Earth," J. J. Glenn, Glenn's Graphic.

"A Pretty Face," W. B. Brewer, Fairview Review.

"Our Neighbor," Heber Matthews, Hartford Herald.

"What of the Outlook," T. C. Underwood, Hopkinsville New Era.

"Random Shots," Tim Needham, Williamstown Courier.

"The Never Ending End," Chas. M. Meacham, Hopkinsville Kentuckian.

Col. Haldeman made an address in which he spoke in complimentary terms of the association and urged it to continue with its good work. His address was warmly received.

The election of officers will be held tomorrow and it is thought the following will be elected:

President—David Wallace, Warsaw Independent.

Vice President—Lew W. Brown, Harrodsburg Democrat.

Secretary and Treasurer—Vernon Richardson, Danville News.

The association will remain in session here until Friday, when the members will go to Bowling Green, where they will be the guests of that city Friday evening and Saturday.

A QUARTET OF YOUNG PEOPLE

Had a Narrow Escape From Death Last Saturday Night.

IN 15 FEET OF WATER.

Fought Swift Current in Blackest Darkness and Gained Shore.

Lewis, Thomas and Miss Sady, children of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas W. Smith, and Miss Ada Blakeley, while on their way from a picnic last Saturday night came near meeting watery graves.

Mr. Smith lives in Trigg county, near Gracey, and his three children, the oldest of which is about 17 years of age, had obtained their parents' consent to attend a moonlight picnic on the Charles Jarrett farm and were accompanied by Miss Ada Blakeley. They went in buggies and when they reached the W. R. Howell farm they undertook to cross a stream known as "Dry Creek." They were perfectly familiar with the fording place, but the night was intensely dark and they missed the ford and struck the stream where it was narrow and before they knew it were in 15 feet of water. Of course they could not turn around and the current was so swift that both buggies were carried down stream some distance. Louis Smith was the only one that could swim. On reaching the shore he grabbed a grape vine that his hand happened to touch, and before he was out of the water he felt the body of his sister, which had already gone under and was being carried down stream by the strong current, strike him, when he grabbed her and pulled her head above water. Strange as it may seem he made her take hold of the grape vine when he climbed the bank and saved her life. He then went to the rescue of Miss Blakeley who was still standing in the buggy in water almost up to her waist. He got her ashore all right and found that his brother had also succeeded in making the shore.

The next matter to be attended to was the rescue of the two horses, which had gotten across the stream with the buggies. Young Smith went to the nearest house, about a mile away for lanterns. On the way he met a colored man who went to the scene at once and was soon followed by Smith with a couple of lanterns and two other men. The horses, with the greatest difficulty, were forced up the steep banks and after a brief rest and quieting the frightened animals the young pleasure seekers turned their faces homeward. It is useless to say that the young people were deeply thankful for their almost miraculous escape and have learned a lesson in early life that will never be forgotten. They will be more certain of their crossings hereafter and their parents' consent for night drives to picnics in future will not so easily be obtained. Young Smith has lots of nerve and presence of mind, and but for him some of the party would certainly have been drowned. He's a hero, but doesn't really know it.
