Everwear Hosiery

is Always Good News

There's much in starting the day right. There's nothing so irritating to mind and body as hosiery that is patched and darned. Everwear always has a pleasant feeling. It starts you off in the morning with comfort and carries you through the day without reminding you of hosiery torture at every step. This Standard American Hosiery has actually abolished the necessity for darning. Your first box will prove this to your satisfaction.

HOW TO TREAT A FRIEND

He That Gives Friend Unnecessary Uneasiness Is Less Friend Than He Should Be.

Though a friend be but the duplicate of a man's self, yet there may often happen secrets to one that may not be convenient to divulge to the other. If they be such as the disclosure of them to a friend shall not only not benefit him, but shall bring grief upon him, I cannot think it an act of friendship to import them. He that gives his friends uneasiness when he needs not is his enemy, or, at least, is less his friend than he might be. But if in some things he be reserved, I shall suppose it is for his own safety, as well as my case. I will be willing to know as far as he would have me; but I would not draw anything from him which he may not be ready to communicate. If he be one whom I value I ought not to wrong him so much as to wrest that from him that might cause him afterward to repent or fear. If he be not to be valued I will never engage myself so much as to be made conscious of his concealments.

Owen Feltham.

DUKE IS VERSATILE AUTHOR

Franz Ferdinand's Productions Range From Travel to Historical and Scientific Subjects.

The archduke Franz Ferdinand, who is reported to be suffering from melancholia, ranks among the most versatile of royal authors. He made his debut in literature nearly twenty years ago with a volume on his trip around the world. Like the German crown prince, he spent some time in India, and his travel book contains several hearty tributes to the hospitality of British officials. The archduke's next work was a monograph on Radetsky, which has run into several editions, and this was followed by two other works on historical subjects. He has also published two volumes of verse and he is credited with the authorship of a number of articles in technical publications on engineering and kindred subjects, in which he is keenly interested.

BALLAST FOR SALMON.

A fisherwoman who sold salmon at an Episcopal residence was unable to make any sales during a period of stormy weather. When at last she did get an opportunity, she endeavored to make up for lost sales by inserting into the intestines of the salmon she intended selling at the Episcopal household, as many small pebbles as she could. Her fraud was detected by the cook and communicated to his lordship. A few days later he met the fisherwoman at his gate.

"Go away," he said angrily, "I will buy no more salmon from you."

"Why, my lord?" she asked in apparent astonishment.

"You put beach pebbles into the fish salmon you sold me."

"Ah, my lord," she explained, "don't you know that in stormy weather like this, the salmon must take in ballast?"

GOLD BURMESE PAGODA.

At Bingu, on the right bank of the Irrawaddy river, about five miles from Mandalay, in Burma, there stands a peculiar pagoda known as the Wedding Cake pagoda. It was built in the early part of the nineteenth century and is in thoroughly good preservation, only a few of the images inside having been broken. The extreme height to the top of the minaret is 80 feet and the circumference about 600 feet. The pagoda stands back from the river some 300 feet, and is hidden from it by a grove of teak trees. Close to it is the famous Mingan bell.—Wide World.

SHELL TELLS THE AGE.

Oysters grow only during the summer and especially during the long, warm summers at that, and are scarcely big enough for the mouth before the third year. It is easy looking over a bunch of shells to tell how old an oyster is. A summer hump and the winter sink come across the shell every year, but after the seventh or tenth year full growth comes; then, by looking at the sinks between the humps it is hard to tell anything more about Miss Oyster's age. Oysters live to be twenty years old.

WHAT DID HE MEAN?

Mrs. Blenkinsop—Poor man! Perhaps you have seen better days?
Tramp—Yes, indeed, lady. I never tasted such soup as yours before.

RUBBING IT IN ON HORSE

City Salesman Objects to Placing Horseshoes Over the Doors of Garages.

"I do not own a garage," the city salesman said. "I do not even own a machine to put into a garage, consequently I have nothing authoritative to say about their management; but if my voice did carry any weight I would insist that the good-luck horseshoes over garage doors be taken down. In the capacity of inquisitor I have gone into dozens of garages lately and nearly everywhere I have seen a horseshoe above the door. Maybe the proprietors might have found some good-luck emblem more inappropriate, but I doubt it. Cannot the geniuses who turn out improved models of motor cars invent a suitable emblem of their own? After having done their best to exterminate the horse it looks like rubbing it in to use one of his shoes as an amulet. I am not familiar enough with the mechanism of a motor car to make a suggestion, but if I was running a garage I would hang a fire over the door if I could do no better. Anything but borrowing the horseshoe from the horse."

NO BREACH OF PROMISE SUIT

George in No Danger If He Should Take a Notion to Go Back on His Word.

His arm was about her waist, her hand was on his shoulder, and they were walking through the fields, as they were wont to do for nine long years.

"Em," said he, "we've been courtin' a tidy time now."

"Nine year come nex' August bank holiday, George."

"I told you, first start off, as how I shouldn't be in no hurry to git married, Em."

"You didn't tell no lie about it, neither, George," she declared, with a sigh.

"You're talkin' as if you was sorry that I'm a man o' my word, Em," he said reprovingly.

"Well, George," she replied, "now you mention it, I have been thinkin' this last year or two that if you could see your way to go back on your word just this once it wouldn't be amiss."—The Wasp.

GOAT'S COMMENT.

W. E. Telling's little daughter, Gwendolyn, has long wanted a goat. No one of the family knows why the child should have pined upon a goat as a desirable pet, but a wee Angora was found at last, gentle and broken to the requirements of a city home, and now Gwendolyn is supremely happy.

Playing with a neighbor's little boy, who was come to call upon her, she proudly recited the record of her family prosperity. "My father makes a thousand dollars a week," she said.

The little boy, not to be outdone, came back. "My father," he said, "makes a thousand dollars a day!"

And the goat, lying under the table, said "Ba-a-h."—Cleveland Leader.

VALUABLE FIND.

Remarks a Paris correspondent: "The things that are lost and found in Paris would fill a volume. You may pick up a bomb in the street or find a small baby in a bandbox, as did a policeman recently at one of our big shops. A Miss Julia O'Connor found a more agreeable treasure trove in the guise of a coronet of pearls, which she incidentally picked up in the street. She took it at once to the police station and nearly fainted with surprise when she found that her honesty was to be rewarded to the tune of $200, the value of the coronet being 30,000 francs ($6,000)."

A SNAKE'S "LEAP."

Nor, again, Mr. Robinson points out, is it true that a snake ever "leaps" at its foe or prey. Except the cobra, no snake can raise more than a third of its length from the ground, though there are instances in which rattlesnakes, probably unconsciously, have gained an extra leverage from a wall of rock immediately behind them, and so struck further than the ordinary range.—London Spectator.

RESEMBLANCE.

"My doll was full of sawdust," said one little girl.
"Maybe it wasn't sawdust," replied the other. "Maybe it was breakfast food."
