CURATE DID NOT SWEAR OFF

Agreed That Best Lenten Sacrifice Was to Quit Smoking, but Stopped There.

Years ago I spent the eve of Ash Wednesday with a curate of convictions tempered by somewhat liberal interpretations. We were discussing the ideals of lenten abstinence while we reclined luxuriously in deep Morris chairs before a blazing wood fire. The pet indulgence common to us both was tobacco, and we practically agreed that the most trying lenten sacrifice was the forswearing of the weed. As the old clock in the tower of the county court house boomed forth the hour of 12 I took one long, last puff, and on the final stroke consigned my "butt" to the now dying embers.

"Father Joe" gazed mournfully at the stump of his cigarette and with a lingering, doubtful gesture followed suit. I took my departure. The next morning I awoke conscious of a sense of vague, indefinite longing. I wandered down town and looked up my reverend friend in the hope of the solace granted to those who suffer from a common misery. As I entered his apartment a fragrant whiff of pungent Turkish tobacco smoke greeted me. My friend was standing by the fireplace, a cigarette in his mouth. "Hello, Jim," he greeted me cheerfully. I looked at him reproachfully.

"Oh, say, come now," he expostulated. "I know you swore off, but I didn't."—New York Sun.

GAVE LIFE FOR KITTENS.

For four little kittens Miss Louise Friedrich of Los Angeles sacrificed her life the other day. Shrieking "My babies! they are all I have in the world!" she rushed back into the burning apartment house in which she lived, and after throwing a basket containing four white Angora kittens out of a window, she fell back and was burned to death. The kittens landed unhurt in the street. The charred body of their mistress was taken later from the blackened ruins.

AMUSEMENTS

"THE RED MILL."

Extravagant praise is generally suspicious, but in announcing the forthcoming engagement of Martin & Emery Co's. production of "The Red Mill" at Holland's Opera House on Wednesday night, Oct. 18, the management has scarcely done the play justice. It has already demonstrated its worth and lasting quality. It was originally produced at the Knickerbocker Theatre, New York, where it was given continuously for one entire year and played to the largest gross receipts ever known at that theatre; engagement of three months each in Chicago, Boston, Philadelphia followed. "The Red Mill" is by Henry Blossom and Victor Herbert, whose earlier success, "Mlle. Modiste" easily preclaims them the peer of all musical composers.

COMMON MAN BEST GUARD

Actress Harassed by Many Perils Finds Him Most Sympathetic and Respectful.

It is a curious paradox that the calling of an actress thrusts her into peculiar dangers and at the same time operates to prevent her getting protection against those very perils. It is this way. She must necessarily go upon the street, often unescorted, at unseemly hours. If she be accosted, and appeal to the policeman on the beat, she will too frequently find that, through brutal ignorance and bigotry, he will refuse an actress the protection he would immediately afford another woman. It is better to appeal to almost any man than to a policeman.

But, of all protectors, a woman should select the common man. I started out with the idea that the man with the rough face and shabby clothes would be less respectful and courteous than the well-dressed man. In knocking about the country I have had, from time to time, to ask strange men for information, for favors, for help, and sometimes protection. I have found that by all odds the most sympathetic and helpful and respectful men were the rough-looking ones. If, in a dilemma, I had to choose between the two types, even if it were only a question of which would take the more trouble, I should be sure to go to the common man.—From an article in McClure's Magazine.

AIR CAPTAIN OF KOPENICK

Wined, Dined and Staked by Good People of Calais, He Falls to Keep Promise.

Apropos of the great race, an amusing incident occurred at Calais. The town was agog with excitement, and preparations were being pushed forward at white heat for the reception of the competitors in the Circuit European.

Just at this juncture a man clad in full aviation costume walked into the town. He appeared footsore and exhausted and told a moving tale of having been obliged to abandon his aeroplane in a lonely meadow, some miles away, owing to a short supply of petrol.

Calais at once formed itself into a committee and gave the man an ovation. He was wined, dined and photographed in all positions. When at last he mentioned having forgotten to bring his pocketbook away from his aeroplane the committee, with tears in its eyes, hastily took up a collection, which they forced upon him.

He left on a midnight train, promising to fly into town on the morrow in all the glory of restored plumage. Unfortunately, he has never made good, and a chastened committee were forced to divide the expense of a premature reception.—Minneapolis Bellman.

THE WRONG COOK.

A wealthy man has a favorite mare named The Cook, apropos of which the following incident recently occurred:

Owner (to groom, who appears with his arm in a sling and his face covered with sticking plaster and scratches)—Good heavens, Bates! What's the matter?

Bates—It's all on account of your lordship's orders. You says to me last night as "ow "The Cook's" girths was too tight and you gave me orders to loosen 'em, wash'er down, currycomb 'er and put 'er in the loose box. Cook, wot's indoors, overheard you, and, as she don't know the name of the 'osses, tuk it personal and went for me sudden-like—and—er—well, look at me.

GET CLOSE TO NATURE.

Mayor Gaynor of New York has this to say about walking: "Observe nature. When you come to a barnyard go in and see the pigs and fowls and the cows. Climb a fence now and then and go into the fields and look at the crops or the cattle. I know of no place where there is more philosophy than in a barnyard. You can learn much from animals. Within their circle they know much more than we do."
