HERE IS CURE FOR INSOMNIA

Wrap a Wet Bandage Around the Leg to Draw Blood From the Head, Says a Physician.

A curious cure for sleeplessness has recently been reported. A piece of calico, about 18 inches wide and 3 3/4 yards long is rolled up like a bandage, and a third of it wrung out of cold water. The leg is then bandaged with this, the wet parts being carefully covered by several layers of the dry part, as well as by a layer of gutta serena tissue, and a stocking drawn on over the whole.

This causes dilation of the vessels of the leg, thus diminishing the blood in the head and producing sleep. It has been found by Winteritz that the temperature in the ear passage begins to fall a quarter of an hour after the application of the bandage, the decrease amounting to 0.4 degrees C., and the normal not being again reached for from 1 1/2 to two hours afterwards.

The writer has employed this means of producing sleep for a couple of years and finds it especially useful in cases where there is congestion of the brain. Sometimes he has found it necessary to reapply the bandage every three or four hours, as it dried.—Family Doctor.

CODE OF ETIQUETTE

Animals Have a Sort of Rough Moral System.

The Little Dog With Bone Is Often Filled With Courage in Moral Consciousness of the Justice of His Claim.

Every animal lover can tell numerous stories illustrating the devotion of animals to their human protectors. Anecdotes of one animal risking its life to save another are rare, but still sufficiently numerous and authentic to leave no doubt as to the occasional existence of a deep love between animals. But any close observer of nature will know that there exists throughout the brute creation a sort of rough moral system which, in the case of domestic animals, translates itself into what really amounts to a code of etiquette.

The old proverb, "The dog with a bone has many friends," is nothing else than a recognition of canine etiquette, says Tit-Bits. It does not matter how small is the dog with the bone. It may be a Pomeranian surrounded by mastiffs. The mastiffs will still remain friendly. They will hover round the Pomeranian, perhaps whining for a morsel (which is never offered), and eagerly picking up any splinter that may be dropped, when nothing would be easier than to bowl the little dog over and seize the bone.

You will notice, further, that the little dog becomes filled with a new courage, presumably in the moral consciousness of the justice of his claim, and will growl and even snap at a dog he otherwise fears if the latter should come too close.

But the moment a dog drops his bone a new rule of etiquette operates, for it becomes the property of the first dog which cares to pick it up. True, a dispute will sometimes arise as to whether the bone has actually been dropped "within the meaning of the act." But once this is clear the law of the bone will be observed by all save the exceptional "boolligan" dog, met with occasionally, which outrages all the laws of dogdom, even to the biting of his master.

Another rigid social law is that no gentleman dog must ever, in any circumstances, offer violence to a lady dog. It is not the slightest use to plead that "she began it." If a female should so far forget herself, as not infrequently happens, the mere male has no alternative to enduring her snaps save seeking safety in flight.

Of course a dog, being only canine after all, will sometimes, under severe provocation, break this law. But if he is one of a pack it is ten to one that the other males will set upon him and mete out severe punishment for his grave offense.

Moreover, although a dog is entitled to rush suddenly upon a foe and take him unawares, he may not do so if the other is eating or drinking.

Dogs are by no means the only animals that have a distinct sense of property. The squirrel regards his tree much as the dog regards his bone. He has a definite right to it, both as a dwelling and a means of subsistence, and on the rare occasions when another squirrel disputes the right or blunders accidentally on his tree he will fight fiercely in defense of that which the law of the woods allows him to regard as his own. If he wishes to forage afield, he must choose a tree that has not been appropriated by one of his tribe.

Foxes, too, have a clear knowledge of the "difference between mine and thine." Farmers may not have noticed it, perhaps, but this is probably because it only applies to other foxes. Nearly all breeds have their own areas, and refrain from trespassing on those of their neighbors.

Mr. Thompson Seton, the well-known naturalist and hunter, has stated that among a particular breed of foxes, the blue foxes of Alaska, which are monogamous, there exists such a respect for the "marriage tie" that if a female loses her mate she will practically never take another. He tells the story of a hunter who, in all seriousness, remarked: "Until we can break down the high moral standard of these foxes our profits will be greatly curtailed."

What It Meant. He had asked her father for her hand and had been duly accepted. Naturally he was inclined to be jubilant, the girl being pretty and her father reputed rich.

"Oh, well," said the latter, presently, as he carefully inspected the clear Havana the youth handed him, "you needn't be so unduly puffed up over it. You're the sixteenth youngster I've accepted for a son-in-law this year, and I expect two more tomorrow."

"Wh-why, what does this mean?" stammered the youth. "It means," replied the shocking old poppy, "amusement for the girl and cigars for me."—Photo Bits.

Mr. Gladstone. It is singular to remark how persistently the title "Mr." cleaves to the name of Gladstone. Fourteen years have elapsed since he died, but he is still "Mr. Gladstone," as witness Mr. Asquith's Nottingham speech. Is this a proof of still vital personality or a commemoration of his strict refusal of any other title? We talk of Disraeli and of Palmerston, but seldom of Gladstone. It is a curious piece of popular psychology.—Pall Mall Gazette.

BERLIN MUST BEHAVE ITSELF

Strict Regulations as to Conduct Have Been Made, and They Will Be Rigidly Enforced.

The German police are determined that Berlin shall behave itself, that henceforth it shall be an orderly and a desirable place of residence. To this end it is forbidden—our old friend "verboten"—to walk more than three abreast on the pavement, to swing walking sticks or umbrellas, to talk loudly, whistle, sing, or shout, to drop cigar or cigarette ends, paper or fruit on the pavements, and to wear long skirts that produce dust. Nothing has been said so far about squeaking boots, or loud-ticking watches, but probably the German police have their eagle eye upon these evils and they will be abated in due course. Now, the fun of the whole thing is the fact that these rules will be enforced. No German law ever drops into desuetude. These rules will have as much force in fifty years' time as they have today unless they shall be categorically repealed, and they will be applied without discrimination or favor.—San Francisco Argonaut.

UNTOUCHED BY FATHER TIME

Mohammedans of the Thracian Plain Live Almost Exactly the Same Life as Their Ancestors.

The Turkish and other Mohammedan villagers from the Thracian plains are retracing backward the steps of their ancestors of five centuries ago, and leaving Europe to return to Asia. And the weird part of it is that in costume, conveyances and manner of life there has been practically no change in these five hundred years. The wheels of their long, narrow carts have spokes in them now, where they used to be solid wheels, and perhaps the rush matting that protects the family from the weather may be a little better woven. But the oxen or buffaloes that leisurely drag the household along, and the barefooted wife or the sandaled husband with the goad who pulls these lumbering animals by a string, and the primitive mode of life on their plodding journey, all belong to a bygone age.

BRUTAL FRANKNESS.

"My face is my fortune," said the girl.

"In that case I would advise you to go through voluntary bankruptcy," responded the man, "and then take up the intellectual pose."

EXCEPTION.

"Don't you think people have a right to talk when a man pays constant attention to a married woman?"

"Not if it happens to be his wife unless it is from surprise."

NO SUCH LUCK.

"Swans sing, don't they, before they die?"

"Yes, and how nice it would be for the community if some people would only reverse the rule and die before they sing."

HER TENDENCY.

"Our boarding house mistress would make herself extremely popular with the patrons of a railroad."

"Why so?"

"She is always cutting down the fare."

FRIGHTENED INTO ADMISSION.

"Huh! How about that diary you started on New Year's day, Fan?"

PARADOXICAL POSITION.

"What's the matter with Jaggs-by?"

"He's in deep water about landing that job."

MURMURING.

"Murmur at nothing," said the optimist.

"I do," answered the pessimist.—Detroit News.

ITS NATURE.

"Do you think the coal road got off easily?"

"Well, after all, it was a minor matter."

AT SCHOOL

"Is there any reason, Willie, why you cannot pronounce 'core' properly? Suppose I divide this apple among you. If you had the part that holds the seeds what would you call it?"

"Aw! I'd call it a shame."

REAL REASON.

"I wonder why that rich young widow seemed to really mourn her elderly husband?"

"She didn't mourn him. She was mourning because she doesn't look well in black."

LESSON FROM THE PAST.

Alexander the Great had conquered Persia. "I'm going to use this country," he said, "for a doormat!"

Here we perceive the origin of the Persian rug.

HIS SPECIALTY.

"Scribblerus was quite incensed before he devoted himself to scientific subjects and you said he was a flash writer."

"So he is; he writes about meters."

DAD WAS "WISE."

Girl (anxiously)—Well, what did papa say?

Impecunious Lover—He said he'd be delighted to have me for a son-in-law, only he couldn't afford it.

IN THE SMALL HOURS.

He—Do not provoke me with angry reproaches, woman, or I may use strong words.

She—You've got the right kind of breath to use them with.

WHAT FEBRUARY?

Duer—Say, old chap, let me have a fiver, will you? I'll let you have it back before the end February.

Dunn—February of what year?

INHERITED.

Pa—Son, you talk too much.

Son—Well, pa, am I to blame for your marrying into a talkative family?

HIS PRACTICE.

"Did you see where a dentist is going west to get a shore in a $7,000,000 gold mine?"

"That shows the advantage of keeping on practicing at a pull."

THE USUAL WAY.

"Are you still keeping your good resolutions?"

"Yes; I'm keeping them quiet."
