CARING FOR YEARLING COLT

There Should Be Gradual Change in Spring From Grain to Grass—Furnish Some Shelter.

In the spring, when all the work horses must be put to work, it is often a problem just what to do with the yearling colt. It goes without saying that they are, in most cases, sadly neglected. If there are a few green spots showing in the pasture they are turned in there to make their living, and all the attention they receive is an occasional handful of salt.

This change from their ration of grain and hay to one of grass is pretty likely to cause a considerable setback to the young horse. There should always be a gradual change from grain to grass, leaving the grain off entirely by the time the grass has reached its best.

The young stock always become uneasy when the grass begins to look green and the spring days begin to warm up mother earth. They should be turned out only for an hour or two at first, and as they become more accustomed to the grass they can be kept out longer.

During this time their grain and hay ration should be cut down some, if they get enough grass to keep them interested while they are out. In this way their digestive organs will gradually become accustomed to the grass, and there will be no disorders of the intestines when they are turned on the grass to stay. If the colts are handled in this manner for a week or two it will be safe to turn them out.

The colts should have some kind of shelter for the first few nights they are in the pasture. They have been used to the barn all winter, and it will be just a little trying on them to remain out in the open on cool, dewy nights. If there is no shelter in the pasture they should be driven to the barn at night for the first two or three weeks after being turned out.

BROKEN WIND IS INCURABLE

Any Treatment Given Can Only Be Palliative—Every Dealer Has His Specific for Trouble.

(By W. R. GILBERT.)
 Broken wind is the old-fashioned name given to the chronic lung complaint, associated with difficult breathing in which, in marked cases, the act of expiration is performed by a double effort, inspiration being little, if at all, removed from normal.

We have only to look at a horse's flank to see this double effort and abdominal breathing, and press his throat with the fingers and thumb—in other words to cough him in order to see if he is broken winded or not.

The cough is characteristic, spasmodic at first, but as the disease advances becomes single, short and suppressed.

Broken-Winded Horse.

pressed. The trouble is incurable, and the treatment, therefore, can only be palliative.

The difficulty in breathing increases when the stomach and bowels are congested with food and water. Both are to be given only in small quantities at a time. Green food and cut grass should be fed at intervals.

The food should always be dampened with water. Dusty or burned hay is to be avoided, as are also chopped straw and overripe rye grass.

It is a good plan to mix a quarter of a pint of linseed oil with each feed. As regards medicinal agents, their action on broken wind can only be temporary.

Every dealer has his specific for this disease. Some give the animal a pound of lard, or any sort of food fat made into balls, while others give a quantity of leaden shot. A subcutaneous injection of morphia many resort to.

These things do no permanent good, but as the palliative treatment, if carefully carried out, is of great benefit to the poor animal, it may be looked upon as the only treatment for a broken-winded horse.

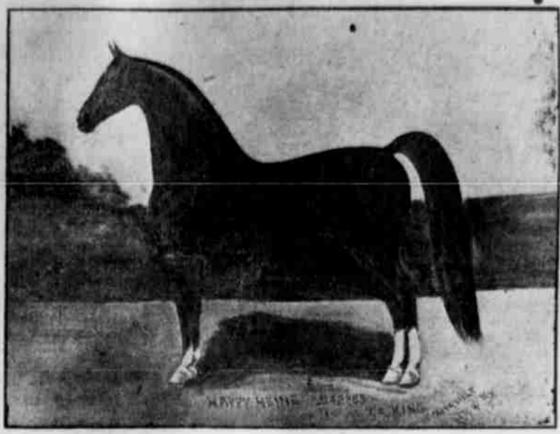

Sayings for the Sheepowner.
 Good lambs are money makers. Speculation and uncertainty of tariff tinkering have been the bane of the sheep industry.

Keep dogs and strangers out of sight of the flock.
 Lambs will make a great growth on clover and alfalfa hay and corn.

The ability of the ewe to properly nourish her lamb is one of the most important considerations in selecting breeding stock.

Hogs Quickly Degenerate.
 Purebred hogs receiving scant care quickly degenerate and are about as worthless as the genuine scrub.
