BEST TIME TO PRUNE TREES

Delay Work Until Danger of Winter Killing is Past—Sometimes Desirable to Prune in Summer.

Questions are often asked about the desirability of early winter pruning of orchard trees. Some people have a notion that early pruning causes more watersprouts and heavy growth than will be the case if the pruning is delayed until late winter. Others are fearful of cutting limbs after the sap begins to flow or after buds have started.

The horticultural department at the Ohio College of Agriculture states that as a general rule winter pruning promotes wood growth, while summer pruning checks growth of trees. It makes no difference, then, at what time during the dormant season the pruning is done, the effect on tree growth will be the same. However, there is a certain advantage in delaying the pruning until late winter. There is always danger of a certain amount of winter killing of twigs and smaller limbs. Pruning after this danger is over will obviate any necessity of pruning twice. Then, too, where wounds are made early in the winter the freezing and thawing is apt to check wood growth and to dry the tissues so that a prompt healing is hindered and sometimes prevented.

In case trees are making too vigorous a growth, it is sometimes desirable to prune them in summer. However, summer pruning, to be effective, must take place just after the terminal buds have completed their growth. This is usually during the latter part of June. Later pruning simply starts new wood growth and defeats the pruner's objects.

These general principles of pruning apply to all fruit trees of all classes and ages.

CARING FOR THE PLUM TREE

More Injury Caused by Trimming Them Than From Any Other Cause—Keep the Saws Out.

Keep saw and trimming shears out of your plum tree, says a writer. Just cut off the dead limb and if some limb so interferes with another one that it must be cut off, then do it. I have injured more trees by trimming them in the earlier days of my plum raising than from any other cause.

Spray the trees just before the buds open with lime sulphur one to ten, thin after the fruit has set with lime sulphur, one to forty, adding three pounds arsenate of lead to the barrel, which will be beneficial to destroy the brown rot. This spraying may be repeated every ten days, but must not be used within four or five weeks of ripening of the fruit.

Cut down or dig up old trees when they have lost their vigor and set out new ones. Dig a hole as big as a bushel basket at least in which to set the tree. Put some good rich loam in the hole, and a half-peck of wood ashes turned in after the small roots are covered will be found beneficial.

STONY SOILS FOR ORCHARDS

Often Recommended as Desirable for Fruit—Soil Must Be Brought to Productive State.

A stony loam is often recommended as desirable fruit soil, but stones are advantageous only in that they may help a soil that is too heavy or clayey or too impervious, by making it some what more pervious to water. The fact that a soil is stony does not necessarily imply that it is productive.

If apples are to be grown with profit, and competition is keen, the soil must be productive or at least capable of being brought to a productive state and so maintained.

Much of the current belief that "stony" soils possess some peculiar advantage for orchard fruits has undoubtedly arisen from the success of Mrs. Powell Almost Dead.

Dry Ridge, Ky.—"I could hardly walk across the room," says Mrs. Lodia Powell, of Dry Ridge, "before I tried Cardui. I was so poorly, I was almost dead. Now I can walk four miles and do my work with much more ease. I praise Cardui for my wonderful cure." Cardui is successful in benefiting sick women, because it is composed of ingredients, that act specifically on the womanly constitution, relieving headache, lachache, irregularity, misery and distress. Only a good medicine could show such continual increase in popularity as Cardui has, for the past 50 years. Try Cardui, the woman's tonic.—Advertisement.

Lord Morley's Audience of Six.
 T. P. O'Connor recalls how Lord Morley was announced on one occasion to address a meeting in a hall in Manchester which could comfortably seat 1,000 persons. "Just six men turned up, and some of these had traveled a long distance. There were some moments of grace given by the chairman, but the six men remained six, and it was decided to adjourn the meeting. But the faithful six were invited into the anteroom to have a private chat with the deserted lecturer; and, accepting the invitation, they got more than full value for their money, and more than full compensation for their disappointment."—Westminster Gazette.

Letter Writers' Busy Day.
 Sunday is a big letter writing day in this village. Druggists in the apartment house section say they sell more postage stamps on Sunday than the six other days combined, according to the Pittsburgh Dispatch. Women are the principal buyers. "It is an annoyance, this stamp business," said a clerk, "but we have to accommodate those who ask for stamps. If we didn't we would lose trade." Just then a woman entered with a letter in her hand. "Will you please let me have a stamp?" she smiled. The clerk laid one on the counter and took the money. "I wish," said she, "that you would weigh this letter. Maybe it takes more than 2 cents. He weighed it. "Only 2 cents, madam," he said; then, taking the stamp up from the counter where she had left it lying, he added politely, "Allow me to put it on for you," and did. "You are so nice," said she, "that I am going to begin to buy my post cards here, too."

Reasonable Explanation.
 Perhaps the idea that two can live as cheaply as one originated in the mind of a young fellow who boarded with his father-in-law.
