

FROM THE FAR SOUTH

Mr. Twyman Talks Entertainingly of His Travels.

Visit to Fitzgerald, the "Colony Town" of Georgia.

Mr. John A. Twyman, who returned Friday from the South, has been absent since the 27th day of December. A greater portion of this time he spent at Lake City, Florida. The latter part of Mr. Twyman's stay was passed with his son Dr. John H. Twyman, who is now practicing dentistry at Fitzgerald, Georgia.

Dr. Twyman was born, reared and educated in this city and has many friends here who will learn with pleasure that he is prospering in his new home. He moved to Fitzgerald from Lake City about one year ago and is delighted with his present location.

Mr. Twyman relates many interesting facts concerning the town of Fitzgerald. It is known as the "colony town." Four years ago its present site was a part of a great forest. It now has four thousand people, two railroads, numerous churches and schools, and a prosperous, progressive population. Fitzgerald was settled principally by old Federal soldiers from the north, the vast majority of whom are pensioners. Many Southern people joined with them and worked with them in harmony. Their interests are common and no sentiment of discord or hint of sectionalism ever disturbs the tenor of their way. A proof of their loyalty to a common flag is found in the fact that the city sent two companies with the Georgia volunteers. All of the streets in one direction are named for the great generals of the confederacy, and those running at right angles for the leaders of the union side.

Mr. G. W. Gardner, formerly a citizen of Hopkinsville, is now a resident of Fitzgerald where he has invested largely in real estate. He is conducting a hotel and a prosperous mercantile establishment.

Mr. Twyman saw much of the hurry and bustle and excitement incident to "these troublous times of war" while in Florida. He says that he was forcibly reminded of the stirring days of '61-5. He contemplates a return trip to Fitzgerald and Lake City this fall.

A large timber wolf, measuring 6 feet from tip to tip, was killed two miles from Lamasco on the 28th ultimo, says the Telephone. His fangs, which were very long, indicated old age. Mr. Geo. Adams, who reports the information, says that the pest was shot and killed while devouring a sheep which, evidently, had been borne down but a short time by the wolf.

The Hopkinsville Kid team went down to Cadiz Saturday to play the Cadiz team a return game. The Cadiz team, about which the Telephone of last week boasted so loudly, was beaten by a score of 30 to 12. The boys returned last night, naturally feeling very much elated over their victory.
