

SOUTHERLAND.

Sketch of the Little Eagle's Gallant Commander.

Referred to as "The Hero of Cienfuegos," by a Chicago War Atlas.

The following brief sketch of Lieut. W. H. H. Southerland is from the War Atlas of the Chicago Times-Herald:

Lieutenant Southerland, who figured prominently in the affair at Cienfuegos, when the vessel which he commands was fired upon by a Spanish cruiser, is one of the fortunate younger officers of the navy who has received a command of his own, so long as he retains which he is colloquially addressed by the complimentary term of Captain. His vessel is the swift auxiliary cruiser Eagle, formerly a private yacht, but engaged actively in the blockade of Cuba. This acceptable billet was given to Lieutenant Southerland in testimony of the high regard in which he has held by the Navy Department, where he has been on duty for several years with the exception of the regular periods at sea.

A fact greatly in his favor is that he is one of the few officers of the navy who are literally risen from the ranks. In 1868, when a lad, he enlisted as an apprentice, exhibiting such zeal and attitude for the service that he was given an appointment to Annapolis. He graduated at the head of his class, and after passing through the lower grades of midshipman, ensign, and lieutenant, junior grade, was commissioned a full lieutenant on February 9, 1884. His little vessel, the Eagle, smelled some of the first powder of the war, in the skirmish off Cienfuegos, Cuba, with some Spanish gunboats and batteries. She was hit once by a shell.

The sketch is accompanied by an excellent portrait of Lieut. Southerland.

RAIN OR SHELLS.

From the Battleship Oregon Alone 1,776 Were Fired July 3.

Playa del Este, Guantanamo Bay, July 15.—Some idea of the awful rain of the shells poured into the doomed Spanish squadron on the morning of July 3 by the pursuing American warships may be gained from the number of shots fired from the battleship Oregon. This number also bears out the statement of the Spanish officers that it was the fire from the secondary batteries that drove their men from their guns and forced the ships to beach.

From the time when Private O'Shea of the battleship Oregon fired the first shot from her forward six-pounder until the Cristobal Colon turned toward the shore the Oregon fired 1,776 shells. Of these 1,670 were fired from her six-pounders. The big thirteen-inch guns were fired thirty-four times, the eight-inch guns twenty-eight times and the six-inch twenty-four times. The one-pounders were fired twenty times.

The destruction caused by some of the shots was fearful. One eight-inch shell which penetrated the turret of the Almirante Oquendo exploded and killed every person inside, blowing some to pieces.

No Flowers Allowed.

"Flowers can play no part in a military funeral, the rules of army or naval burials forbidding them," explained an army officer to a reporter. "While I was down at Chickamauga recently it was rumored that one of the soldiers in camp there had died. Indeed, it was so printed in a local paper. The result was that on the following day a large quantity of flowers was sent by sympathetic ladies and others with a request that they should be placed on the coffin of the dead soldier. Now, the fact was that no soldier had died, and the officers had the flowers sent to their quarters. If there were a death in the camp the flowers could not be used, for they are not military in any sense. The only thing allowed on the coffin of a soldier or sailor is a flag. That has been decided to be decoration enough, and among military men I have never heard the slightest objection to the custom, which has always prevailed." —Washington Star.

Private Mailing Cards.

The postoffice department has made a new and important ruling by which persons or firms may have their own private mailing cards printed using thereon a one-cent postage stamp. The requirement made by Uncle Sam are that such shall not be larger than the postal card now in use, 3½x5 inches; that the address side of the card shall bear these words, "Private mailing cards—Authorized by act of Congress, May 19, 1898." This side of the card shall contain nothing else save the address. On the other side the message may either be in writing or print, and advertisement in colors can be used. The act will not necessarily work a discontinuance of card, though less of them will be used hereafter. The concession, for such it is in a sense will be appreciated by business men generally who have long wanted to print their own private mailing cards. It will also prove a saving to the government.
