Missed By Susan B. Anthony.

The Atlanta Constitution comments upon an editorial in a Western daily on the life of Susan B. Anthony. The editorial refers to the element of tragedy in the fact that Miss Anthony has missed wifehood and motherhood, the crowning glories of woman's life. The Atlanta Constitution considers this clause, and says:

It is undeniable that Miss Anthony has missed wifehood and motherhood, and in summing up a woman's life it is only fair that we should count things she has missed along with the things she has gained. She has gained the love and reverence of millions of people now living and of "millions yet to be," but she has never known the unspeakable bliss of nursing a family of children through the measles, whooping cough and mumps. She has lived a useful and perfect unselfish life, but she doesn't know a thing in the world about the serene happiness that lies in being housekeeper, cook, chambermaid, nurse, seamstress, hostess and a half a dozen other things every day in the year, till nervous prostration puts an end to the complicated business. She has stood on a thousand platforms and listened to the applause of vast audiences, but she doesn't know the glory and honor there is in picking up a bucket of hot suds and climbing a step ladder to wash the doors and windows. All joy and rapture of house-cleaning on the beautiful month of May are a sealed book to her. She has made the life of woman-kind broader, deeper and higher than woman ever dreamed it could be, but she has no conception of the breadth, depth and height of satisfaction to be found in nursing a baby through the "three months, colic." She has made the world over, but she is ignorant of the abandon of joy a woman feels when she makes over an old dress for the third time, and then sees John start off on his summer fishing trip. She has been free and independent always, and the women who are happier for her work will see that she never lacks any good thing, but, alas! she has never known the ecstasy of asking John for 10 cents to pay street car fare, and she has never experienced the bliss of hearing him growl about the price of her Easter bonnet, and groan over the monthly grocery bill. Here the "element of tragedy" looms up very large indeed. There is no use in talking about it, Miss Anthony missed a lot of things. It is said that on her last birthday she received 3,000 letters congratulatory of the things she has gained in her eighty years of life. But there are wives and mothers who could cheerfully and heartily write her 3,000 more letters congratulatory of the things that she has missed.

Admiral Sampson's Parentage

Admiral Sampson is of the humbler parentage. His father was a ditch digger at Palmyra, N. Y., a man of intelligence, good character and deep religious convictions. Admiral Sampson earned the money which paid his expenses to Annapolis by assisting his father digging ditches, grubbing stumps and in other similar employment. Three of his classmates—Admirals Cromwell, Higginson and Rodgers—are now in Washington. Admiral Watson, who was one class ahead of him with Schley, and other men who were in the academy at the same time, all testify that Sampson was about the greenest "jay" that ever appeared at the academy, but at the same time he attracted immediate attention because of his handsome appearance and intellectual ability. His pink and white complexion gave him the nick-name of "Lily," which stuck to him through his entire course, and his gawky, awkward manners were in striking contrast to his handsome head and face. Sampson had enjoyed no advantages outside of the district school and was barely able to pass his entrance examination, but his mental abilities were demonstrated during the first term, when he shot from the bottom to number four in his class. At the end of the first year he stood number one, a place that he kept without the slightest difficulty until his graduation.

Twice Proven.

From The Vindicator, Rutherfordton, N. C. The editor of the Vindicator has had occasion to test the efficacy of Chamberlain's Pain Balm twice with the most remarkable results in each case. First, with rheumatism in the shoulder with which he suffered excruciating pain for ten days, which was relieved with two applications of Pain Balm, rubbing the parts afflicted and realizing instant benefit and entire relief in a short time. Second, in rheumatism in thigh joint, almost prostrating him with severe pain, which was relieved by two applications, rubbing with the liniment on retiring at night and getting up free from pain. For sale by M. Cravens.

Trusts in a Rush.

By means of the completed organization of the American Can Company representing a complete monopolistic combine of the tin-can manufacturing concerns of the United States, and of the Standard Milling Company, less comprehensive in scope, an additional $100,000,000 of trust capitalization is to be noted as a significant development of the times.

It must be acknowledged that the certainty of another four years of McKinleyism is greatly stimulating the Trust Barons in their monopoly mission. It is but a few days ago, almost coincident with the second inauguration of the Trust President of the United States, that the Steel Trust presided by Pierpont Morgan was incorporated with a capital of $1,000,000,000. The gigantic railway combine, based on the "community of ownership" idea, is also a recent development. No time is being lost by the 200 trust magnates of America who hope finally to own all that is worth owning in this country.

Of course, there will be many other trust formations in the not remote future, covering whatever fields are still open to the application of the trust idea. The certain passage of $180,000,000 ship-subsidy grab by the Fifty-seventh Congress will no doubt result in at least one new shipping combine. It's a great time for the trusts—and during the next four years the people will learn just what it means to have a Trust President at the head of the American Government. They should not fail to profit by the lesson if they propose to remain a free and self-governing people.—St. Louis Republic.

Wild Pigeons

After a complete disappearance for many years, and after the belief of their extermination had grown to certainty, wild pigeons have made their re-appearance in great numbers on the Pacific coast. Mrs. Fannie R. Porter, of San Luis Obispo, Cal., writes her mother, Mrs. Olivia Rogers, of this place:

Great droves of wild pigeons have made their appearance here. They come by thousands and I hear are doing much damage to growing wheat. It doesn't take them long to destroy a wheat-field and farmers are considerably exercised. One of my boys killed eighty-four across the creek from where I live a few evenings ago. They are fat, plump and tender, are delicious to eat and sell at $1.25 per dozen. I do not think they are exactly the same pigeons as the wild ones I knew back in Kentucky, as they are of a blue coloring like a dove. But they are certainly wild pigeons, and thousands of them.

It has been fifteen or twenty years since wild pigeons were last seen in this country. The birds suddenly and completely disappeared from their usual haunts, and it was currently reported that millions of them had been overtaken in a storm somewhere off the southern or western coast, in passing from main-land to islands, and all drowned in the ocean. Not one was ever seen afterwards, and it is said that the Smithsonian Institute has for several years offered a standing reward for a live wild pigeon. The re-appearing will excite much interest among ornithologists everywhere. Where they have spent the years of their exile from home is a question that will probably remain forever unanswered.—E. Town News.

Strikes a Rich Find.

"I was troubled for several years with chronic indigestion and nervous debility," writes F. J. Green, of Lancaster, N. H., "No remedy helped me until I began using Electric Bitters, which did me more good than all the medicines I ever used. They have also kept my wife in excellent health for many years. She says Electric Bitters are just splendid for female troubles; that they are a grand tonic and invigorator for weak, run down women. No other medicine can take its place in our family." Try them. Only 50c. Satisfaction guaranteed by T. E. Paull.

Mrs. Nation's Crusade.

Mrs. Carrie Nation, as her name would indicate, has succeeded in making herself more than a state affair. Her attempt to cure lawlessness by lawlessness, has aroused discussion everywhere. She has already reached a degree of eminence which has excited the attention of cartoonists, and hatchet brigades are being organized in various cities in her honor. Kansas has a constitutional amendment as well as a statute prohibiting the sale of liquor, but, as is well known, prohibition is not enforced in communities where the local sentiment is against it. Mrs. Nation acts upon the theory that the saloon is an outlaw in Kansas and that saloon keepers cannot invoke the protection of the law when they themselves disregard it. While no defence can be made of lawless methods in enforcing law, those who condemn Mrs. Nation must, in order to be consistent, also condemn the violation of the liquor laws. The Kansas crusade has already served a useful purpose in that it has brought out the fact that prohibition is a dead letter in that state, and now that public attention has been directed toward the subject, it is probable that the law will either be enforced or the question resubmitted. A law that is not enforced breeds contempt for law.

Russell Sage's Way to Get Rich.

In a recent number of the Saturday Evening Post, Mr. Russell Sage gives his views on saving. Very few people admire Mr. Sage; he is one of the men who is noteworthy almost solely for the money he is worth. But some of the advice he gives is worth reading. He says:

"No matter how fast a man may make money, he owes it to society as well as to himself to be economical. 'Any young man who will live up to the following set of rules will get more genuine happiness out of life than his neighbor who violates them. 'Out of every dollar earned save 25 cents. Save 75 cents if you can, but never less than 25. 'Get up at a regular hour every morning and work until the things to do are before you are finished. Don't drop what you have in hand because it is 5 o'clock. 'Be honest; always have the courage to tell the truth. 'Don't depend on others. Even if you have a rich father, strike out for yourself. 'Cultivate independence at the very outset. 'Learn the value of the money. Realize that it stands, when honestly made, as the monument to your value as a citizen. 'Be jealous of your civil rights. Take a wholesome interest in public affairs, but do not let politics or anything else interfere with the rigid administration of your private duties. The state is made up of individuals. 'Be clean and decent. Don't do anything that you would be ashamed to discuss with your mother. 'Don't gamble. 'Be circumspect in your movements. 'In connection with amusements, I have never been able to understand why the young men of to-day deem the theatre an absolute essential in seeking diversion. An evening with a good book is, or ought to be, more satisfying to the young man of brains than evening in a hall where a lot of make-believe characters are strutting up and down the stage like children. When the human race reaches its highest mental development there will probably be no theatres."

Has an Income of $15,000 a Month.

Special dispatches from the heart of the Beaumont (Texas) oil fields tell sensational stories of sudden wealth. One case which will be of interest throughout the country is that of Roger Q. Mills, of Corsicana, Tex., ex-United States Senator, and for many years a member of Congress from that State.

When Senator Mills retired to private life a few years ago he was a poor man. All that he owned was a farm adjoining the town of Corsicana. This piece of property was encumbered with a large mortgage. About this time the first oil strike in the Corsicana district was made by Capt. Lucas. As a result of the discovery land values in that section began to soar skyward. Senator Mills held his farm and entered into an arrangement with practical oil men for boring a number of wells on the place. The field was gradually developed, until Senator Mills' farm is now in the very heart of the Corsicana oil district. His income from these wells soon aggregated several hundred dollars per day. The number of wells on the farm has been largely increased in the last year, and it is said that his net income from the sale of the oil now exceeds $15,000 a month.—Kansas City Star Chicago Inter-Ocean.

An Hon-est Medicine for Lagrip.

Geo. W. Watt, of South Gardner, Me., says: "I have had the worst cough, cold, chills and grip and have taken lots of trash of no account but profit to the vendor. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is the only thing that has done any good whatever. I have used one bottle of it and the chills, cold and grip have left me. I congratulate the manufacturers of an honest medicine. Sold by Cravens.

What is a Gentleman.

The question has been variously answered. Admiral Sampson's view is that it requires certain specific advantages of early education and training to make a gentleman. If that is so, then gentleness is an acquired art, not a natural gift. This is not a great advance on the old English social doctrine that gentlemen are born, not. But in this democratic age and country neither high birth nor liberal education is essential to the making of a true gentleman.

When Gunner Morgan, in spite of the unfavorable indorsement of his letter to the Admiral Sampson, called on the latter and expressed his regret that the correspondence should have been so published as to annoy the Admiral, he went so far to show himself a gentleman in the true sense of the term. It was a gentle deed, justifying Steele's observation on the "Tactician" that "the appellation of gentleman is never to be affixed to a man's circumstances, but to his behavior in them." Old Chaucer's curiously spelled opinion.

That he is gentle that doth gentil dedis still holds good in the high court of common sense. We speak of men behaving like gentlemen, but the phrase is unhappy. A man can not behave like a gentleman unless he is one—for affectations or insincerity is itself bad manners. "Nothing can constitute good breeding that has not good nature for its foundation," says Bulwer.

Thackeray's definition of a gentleman is one to which thousands of men measure up who never saw the inside of a college or even a high school and have no distinction either of birth or wealth. "To be a gentleman," says the author of "Vanity Fair," is to be honest, to be gentle, to be generous, to be brave, to be wise, and possessing all these qualities, to exercise them in the most graceful outward manner." The great scientist Huxley puts it a little differently and makes a just distinction when he says: "Thoughtfulness for others, generosity, modesty and self-respect are the qualities which make a real gentleman or lady, as distinguished from the veneered article which commonly goes by that name."

Judged by these high standards it is quite profitable that there are as many real gentlemen among the gunners as among the commissioned officers of Uncle Sam's navy.—New York World.

Hot Times in 1950.

Perturbing as it may appear at first sight, there is logically a grain of comfort to be found in the announcement of Professor Fulton of Edinburgh University that the D-11 is located on the planet Saturn and that his Satanic Majesty is billed for projection to the planet Earth some time in the year 1950.

It is always well for a man to know just where his enemy is, and at what time he may be expected to put in an appearance with the light of battle in his eye. The old proverb, "Forewarned is forearmed," voiced this simple truth, which still holds good. It has long been feared that the D-11 would some day be turned loose on the terrestrial ball. Not a few persons have believed, indeed, that he has already visited us more than once in disguise—wherefore we have our Mephistophelian myth and others of that ilk. Professor Fulton's announcement simplifies the matter greatly.

The occasion seems to call for Nikola Tesla. If we can believe all we hear of this astonishing scientist, he has outwitted the Devil in the line of prophetic Nikola must lay plans for a hot electric reception of old Nick in 1950. Fill him full of ohms and volts and blasting blue blazes, Nikola, the minute he sets foot off Saturn. Now that we're on his trail, let's fight the Devil with fire.—St. Louis Republic.

Working 24 Hours a Day.

There's no rest for those tireless little workers—Dr. King's New Life Pills. Millions are always busy, curing Torpid Liver, Jaundice, Biliousness, Fever and Ague. A Great Newspaper.

The Sunday edition of The St. Louis Republic is a marvel of modern newspaper enterprise. The organization of its new service is world-wide, complete in every department; in fact, superior to that of any other newspaper.

The magazine section is illustrated in daintily tinted colors and splendid half-tone pictures. This section contains more high-class literary matter than any of the monthly magazines. The fashions illustrated in natural colors are especially valuable to the ladies.

The colored comic section is a genuine laugh-maker. The funny cartoons are by the best artists. The humorous stories are high class, by authors of national reputation. Sheet music, a high-class, popular song, is furnished free every Sunday in The Republic.

The price of The Sunday Republic by mail one year is $2.00. For sale by all news dealers.

President McKinley's proposed trans-continental trip the latter part of April will be one not only of value to him as a recreation from official cares, but in the opportunity he will have of studying the people and the resources of the country through which he will pass. He will visit New Orleans and be present at the inauguration of the largest floating dock in the world. Thence he will pass nearly a thousand miles through Texas, which is six times the area of Ohio, and the seventh State in point of population. On its extreme western border, at El Paso, he will meet President Diaz of Mexico and shake hands with him across the border. Thence he will proceed to Los Angeles and up to the coast to San Francisco, whence he will go to Oregon and visit the cities of Portland, Tacoma and Seattle. His route home has not been scheduled, but he will probably return by the Northern Pacific, and in the circle thus described he will take in all the distinctive varieties of scenery, development and population which make up the great national empire, of which he is Chief Magistrate.—Courier-Journal.
