TRIBUTE TO MCKINLEY.

Bishop Andrews' Funeral Address at Washington City over McKinley.

"A Man of Inscrutable Personal and Political Integrity Was He."

BELIEVED IN AND LIVED FOR GOD.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17.—Bishop Andrews delivered the funeral oration over the body of William McKinley in the Capitol today. He said:

"Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord, who of his abundant mercy hath begotten us again unto a lively hope of the resurrection of Christ from the dead, to an inheritance uncorruptible, undefiled and that fadeth not away, reserved in heaven for us who are now by the power of God through faith unto salvation, ready to be revealed in the last time.

"The services for the dead are fitly and almost of necessity services of religion and immortal hope. In the presence of the shroud and the coffin and the narrow home questions concerning intellectual quality, concerning public station, concerning great achievements, sink into comparative insignificance, and questions concerning character and man's relation to the Lord and giver of life, even to the life eternal, emerge to our view and impress themselves upon us.

"Character abides. We bring nothing into this world; we can carry nothing out. We ourselves depart with all the accumulations of tendency and habit and quality which the years have given to us. We ask, therefore, even at the grave of the illustrious, not altogether that great achievement they had performed and how they had commended themselves to the memory and affection or respect of the world, but chiefly of what sort they were; what the interior nature of the man was; what were his affinities. Were they with the good, the truth, the noble? What his relation to the infinite Lord of the universe, and to the compassionate Saviour of mankind; what his fitness for that great hereafter to which he has passed.

"And such great questions come to us with moment, even in the hour when we gather around the bier of those whom we profoundly respect and eulogize, and whom we tenderly love. In the years to come, the days and months that lie immediately before us will give full utterance as to the high statesmanship and great achievements of the illustrious man whom we mourn today. We shall not touch them today. The nation already has broken out in its grief and poured its tears, and is still pouring them, over the loss of a beloved man. It is well. But we ask this morning of what sort this man is, so that we may perhaps, knowing the moral and spiritual life that is past, be able to shape the far-withdrawing future; I think we must all concede that nature and training and, reverently be it said, the inspiration of the Almighty, conspired to conform a man admirable in his moral temper and aims.

WAS EMINENTLY GIFTED.
"We, none of us, can doubt, I think, that even by nature he was eminently gifted. The kindly, calm and equitable temperament; the kindly and generous heart; the love of justice and right, and the tendency toward faith and loyalty to unseen powers and authorities; these things must have been with him from his childhood, from his infancy, but upon them supervened the training for which he was always tenderly thankful, and of which even this great nation, from sea to sea, continually has taken note.

"It was a humble home in which he was born. Narrow conditions were around him, but faith in God had lifted that lowly roof according to the statement of some great writer, up to the very heavens, and permitted its inmates to behold the things eternal, immortal and divine; and he came under that training.

"It is a beautiful thing that to the end of his life he bent reverently before that mother whose example and teaching and prayer had so fashioned his mind and all his aims. The school came but briefly, and then came to him the church with a ministrations power. He accepted of the truth which it taught. He believed in God and in Jesus Christ, through God was revealed. He accepted the divine law of the Scripture; he based his hope on Jesus Christ, the appointed and only redeemer of men; and the church beginning its operation upon his character at an early period of his life, continued even to its close to mold him. He waited attentively upon its ministrations.

BEAUTIFUL CHRISTIAN LIFE.

"He gladly partook with his brethren of the symbols of mysterious passion and redeeming love of the Lord Jesus Christ. He was helpful in all of those beneficiaries and activities; and from the church to the close of his life, he received inspiration that lifted him above much of the trouble and weakness incident to our human nature, and blessings be to God, may we say, in the last and final hour, they enabled him confidently, tenderly to say, 'It is His will, not ours, that will be done.'

"Such influences gave to us William McKinley. And what was he? A man of inscrutable personal and political integrity.

"No stain was upon his escutcheon; no syllable of suspicion that I ever heard was whispered against his character. He walked in perfect and noble self control. Beyond that this man had somehow wrought in him—I suppose upon the foundations of a very happily constructed nature—a great and generous love for his fellowmen. He believed in men. He had himself been brought up among the common people. He knew their labors, struggles, needs. He loved them; but I think beyond that it was to the church and its teachings concerning the fatherhood of God and universal brotherhood that he was indebted for that habit of kindness, for that generosity of spirit, that was wrought into his very substance and became him so that though he was of all men most courteous, no one ever supposed, but that courtesy was from the heart. It was spontaneous, unaffected, kindly, attractive, in a most eminent degree.

"When he was in the narrower circle of those to whom he was personally attached, I think he was also in the greatness of his comprehensive love toward the race of which he was part. If any man had been lifted up to take into his purview and desire to help all classes and conditions of men, all nationalities beside his own, it was this man.

"Shall I speak a word next of that which I will hardly advert to? The tenderness of that domestic love which has so often been commented upon? I pass it with only that word. I take it that no words can set forth fully the unflinching kindness and carefulness and unbearing love which belonged to this great man.

"And he was a man who believed in right, who had a profound conviction that the courses of this world must be ordered in accordance with everlasting righteousness, or this world's highest point of good will never be reached; that no nation can expect such in life except as it conforms to the eternal law of the infinite Lord and pass itself in individual and collective activity according to that divine will. It was deeply ingrained in him that righteousness was the perfection of man and of any people. Simplicity belonged to him. I need not dwell upon it, and I close the statement of these qualities by saying that underlying all and over-reaching all and penetrating all there was a profound loyalty to guard the great king of the universe, the author of all good, the eternal hope of all that trust in him.

"And now, may I say further that it seemed to me that to whatever we may attribute all the illustriousness of this man, all the greatness of his achievements, whatever of that we may attribute to his intellectual character and quality, whatever of it we may attribute to the patient and thorough study which he gave to the various questions thrust upon him for attention, for all his successes as a politician, as a statesman, as a man of this great country, those successes were largely due to the moral qualities of which I have spoken. They drew to him the hearts of men everywhere, and particularly of those who best knew him. They called to his side helpers in every exigency of his career, so that when his future at one time was likely to have been imperiled and utterly ruined by his financial conditions, they who had resources, for the sake of helping a man who had in him such qualities, came to his side and put him on the high road of additional and larger successes. His high qualities drew to him the good will of his associates in political life in an eminent degree. They believed in him, felt his kindness, confided in his honesty and in his honor. His qualities even associated with him in kindly relations those who were his political opponents. They made it possible for him to enter that land with which he was one of the soldiers of the Union; had been, in some sort, at war, and to draw closer the ties that was to bind all the parts in one firm and indissoluble union.

"If there is a personal immortality before him let us also rejoice that there is an immortality and memory in the hearts of a large and ever-growing people, who through the ages to come, the generations that are yet to be, will look back upon the life, upon its nobility and purity and service to humanity and thank God for it. The years draw on when his name shall be counted among the illustrious of the earth. William of Orange is not dead. Cromwell is not dead. Washington lives in the hearts and lives of his countrymen. Lincoln, with his infinite sorrow, lives to teach us and lead us on. And McKinley shall summon all statesmen and all his countrymen to purer living, nobler aims, sweeter and immortal blessedness."

State Free From Smallpox.

For the first time in four years Kentucky is rid of smallpox. Dr. J. N. McCormack, Secretary of the State Board of Health, who was at the Galt House last night said that there was only one case in the entire State and that there was no danger of its spreading. He said the State had not been so free of the disease in four years, and he was of the opinion that another outbreak was unlikely, so thoroughly had the State been vaccinated. At one time last winter the smallpox situation in certain sections of the State was alarming, and it was feared that whole cities and counties would have to be quarantined to prevent a spread. It became necessary to quarantine one county for a short time, but the various County Boards of Health ordered a thorough vaccination and the disease was eradicated.—Courier Journal.

THE TRUST.

I heard the poor man thus complain Of poverty and want; I saw his sad and weary wife, His children pale and gaunt. He'd heard the tariff question And free coinage discussed, But what enslaves the poor man most Is working for the trust.

I heard the widow's plaintive sigh, Of hunger and distress While toiling for her daily bread And by the rich oppressed. She could maintain her children once, But now 'tis true she must Give a part of her hard earnings To help maintain the trust.

I met the feeble man of age, Bowed 'neath the weight of years, Said he: "I'm growing tired of life, It's poverty and cares, But ere long hope that I may reach The mansions of the just Where the oppressor ne'er can come To rob me with the trust.

Upon the vile extortioner There will remain a curse— It seems that in these latter days They're waxing worse and worse, And when they get to their own place, To satiate their lust They will proceed at once to form A giant sulphur trust.

Trial of Czolgosz.

Buffalo, N. Y., Sept. 17.—Crowds flocked to the County Court today long before Judge Emery assumed the bench, expecting that Leon F. Czolgosz would be arraigned to plead to the indictment charging murder in the first degree in shooting President McKinley. They waited in vain, as nothing was done during the morning session of court.

District Attorney Penney to day issued to Leon Lewis and Robert C. Titus, former Supreme Court Justices, formal notices of the assignments of Judge Emery yesterday, as counsel to defend the murderer. The notice was served personally upon ex-Judge Lewis at his office, but at Judge Titus' office it was stated that he was in Milwaukee.

Albert Moot, President of the Erie Bar Association, called upon Judge Lewis to-day, and urged him to accept the assignment as counsel to defend Czolgosz. Mr. Moot also sent to Judge Titus a lengthy telegram urging him to accept. At noon to-day Judge Lewis said:

"I will determine at 2 o'clock this afternoon whether or not to accept the assignment. I will have a meeting with the prisoner in the jail at that hour, and will then determine my course in the matter. The decision of Judge Titus will not necessarily govern me in reaching a determination."

Justice Lewis, for the prisoner, has entered a plea of not guilty, reserving the right to withdraw that plea. Czolgosz again refused to plead. The trial of the case has been set for Monday next.
