How Uncle Smith Made a Believer of "Old Gent."

Smith Wooldridge, of Russell Springs, Ky., a man about 83 years of age, a grizzled and battle scarred veteran of the Civil war, wears the blue ribbon, unquestioned, for truth telling in these parts since the death of Sam Christman and the departure of Robert Tyree, his venerable age and his Santa Clause whiskers give him a kind of supremacy over the would be aspirants in that he can tell old times. His latest is an account of how he tamed a vicious cow, owned by his father, when he (Smith) was a mere boy. No one could milk or handle this cow except Smith. At one time the cattle broke into Judge Green's corn. Smith and a colored man, slave at that time owned ed by Smith's father, were sent to drive them out.

All the cattle were easily gotten across the river except "Old Gent." She was in another part of the field. Presently, here she came and plunged into the river, while the negro scaled the nearest sycamore. Smith stood his grounds and boldly followed her into the water, and took her by the tail. When she reached swimming water he begun to climb her tail and landed on her back. The cow fought furiously, but the gallant Smith was not to be outdone. He caught her by the horns and put her to the bottom, where the water was thirty feet deep. Then she was allowed to come to the top to breathe. This was repeated some twenty-five times. The cow, now being thoroughly subdued and completely exhausted, was allowed to reach the bank. She emerged from the water, drew a few deep breaths, shook the water from her dripping hide, and set off for the house, displaying all the docility of the well trained saddle mare. The daring Smith, perched on her back, rode quietly to the house to the astonishment of the family.

From this time on she was what her name implies, "Old Gent." After this Smith's invalid mother and little sister could handle the cow with perfect safety. This ordeal greatly enhanced the value of the cow, it not only rendering her harmless but doubled her utility in that she played the role of saddle horse as well as milk cow.

N. A. O. Meeting.
The annual meeting of the National Association of Amateur Oarsmen will be held at the New York Athletic Club on July 10th. At this session the date and place for the 1914 national regatta will be arranged. According to an official of the national body, Philadelphia will probably get the big event, although several western cities are after it.

Philadelphia has not had the event for several years, and since the Quakers' course on the Schuylkill is one of the best in the country the chances are the National Association of Amateur Oarsmen will vote favorably for Philadelphia. Baltimore and Detroit also are after the date.
