Why is it that one of the get of J. S. Brown sold in the fall of 1899 for $280 and other horses bred by other stallions sold for less than $100? Simply because the get of J. S. Brown have the size, style and shape. DR. G. W. CONNER.

NETTLEROTH-McKEE.—Dr. Alexander Nettleroth and Miss Eugenia McKee were married Saturday, April 28th, in Louisville. The bridegroom is a young physician. The bride is a daughter of the late Col. Samuel McKee, formerly of Mt. Sterling, but who resided in Louisville the latter part of his life. She has visited her cousin, Mrs. Alex Conner, frequently and is popular in local society, being a handsome, stylish and accomplished young lady, vivacious and possessing a sweet and well-trained musical voice, with which she frequently delighted the company at social gatherings and also at church.

AN APPEAL TO PATRIOTIC SENTIMENT.—There lies in the soil of Bath county a young soldier whose grave, though neatly kept by loving hands, has no mark to show who lies there and that he died under the Stars and Stripes in the service of his country. He was among the first to volunteer his services when the Maine went down. With a bright future he let go to defend the flag. Just 22 years old, he gave his life for his country. Now, are the people of Bath Co. because his father is a poor man, not able to have his son's grave suitably marked, to let it remain unmarked? I trust not. Is there not some good man that loves his flag and his country that will head a movement to raise a monument fund to put a soldier's monument to the grave of Chesley J. Flood, who died in Camp Thomas, Ga., Sept. 4th, 1898? D. WILLIAMSON, Secy.

The very finest. The ne plus ultra. The creme de la creme. That's HARPERS Whiskey in three languages. Sold by J. W. Lane, Owingsville, Ky.

REPUBLICAN CONVENTION CALL.—The Republicans of Bath county are called to meet at the Court-house in the town of Owingsville, Ky., on the 14th day of May, 1900, (County Court day) at 1 o'clock p. m. for the purpose of selecting delegates to attend the Appellate Court district convention which will meet in the town of Louisa, Ky., on the 5th day of June, 1900, for the purpose of nominating a candidate to be voted for at the coming November election.

J. A. BARNES, Chairman. R. GUDGELL, Secy.

WM. FARIS' DEATH.—Wm. Faris, whose health had long been on the decline, went some weeks ago to the Crab Orchard Springs sanitarium for treatment. His father learned by wire Saturday that Willie was critically ill and started Sunday morning to go to see Willie. However, Willie died at 11:30 o'clock Sunday morning before his father arrived at his bedside. The body was brought back Monday, a large delegation of friends meeting it at Preston and escorting it here. Elder Tinsley conducted funeral services at M. D. Faris' residence at 10 o'clock a. m. Tuesday and the interment took place at the Owingsville Cemetery, the Knights of Pythias, of which order deceased was a member, conducting the funeral rites.

J. William Faris was the only son of Mike D. Faris and his first wife (nee Emmons). He was born in this county Dec. 22, 1868. He was twice married, his first wife being Miss Lucy Collins, daughter of the late Jack Collins, of Arkansas City, Kansas, and a grand daughter of Miss P. Collins, of Wyoming. She died shortly after their marriage. His second wife was Miss Mottie, daughter of W. Scott Moody, of Hillsboro, Fleming Co. She survives him. Willie had no children. He was delicate from childhood and perhaps never knew what good health was by actual experience, but from early manhood until his latter years had an active life, riding as deputy sheriff during his father's two terms in the sheriff's office and assisting him in his other business. He was sociable, generous, nice young man and was widely popular with all elements of the people. His many personal friends lament his decease and sympathize deeply with the grief of the widow, father and sister in their loss.

REPUBLICAN MASS MEETING.—Pursuant to a call of the State and District Chairmen the Republicans of Bath county held a mass meeting in the Court-house in Owingsville, Saturday, April 28, 1900, for the purpose of appointing delegates to the convention to be held in Ashland, Ky., May 2, 1900, for the purpose of nominating a Republican candidate for Congress in the Ninth District, and the State and District conventions to be held in Louisville May 17th next for the purpose of appointing delegates to the National convention to be held in Philadelphia June 19th next. On motion of R. Gudgell, the following resolutions were unanimously adopted:—

Resolved, by this Republican county mass meeting, That the following named persons are appointed as delegates from Bath county to attend the Republican Congressional District convention to be held at Ashland on May 2d, 1900, and the State Republican convention to be held at Louisville, Ky., on May 29, 1900, to-wit: Byron Harper, Ed Barnes, C. Whitcomb, Hon. James A. Barnes, Felix F. Warren, R. L. Sharpe, John McAllister, Foster Stephens, Od Rogers, Ben Piersall, J. N. Byron, C. Gudgell, H. H. Lewis, J. W. Snedegar, Saml. T. Howard, Wm. Crouch, Henry Aramsmith, Henry Willis, Jas. K. Jackson, and any other Republican or voter of Bath county who will support the nominees of the said conventions at the next November election who may choose to attend said conventions are constituted delegates.

Resolved, That the said delegates at the Congressional convention are instructed to cast the solid vote of Bath county for Sam J. Pugh as candidate for Congress.

Jackson, Owingsville No. 1, R. Gudgell, Owingsville No. 2, Stanton Hamilton.

Owingsville No. 3, Robert Foley. The committee organized Saturday, April 28th, by electing James A. Barnes Chairman, and Reuben Gudgell Secretary.

EXPANSION NOT ALWAYS GROWTH.—He drew a twist of "long green" tobacco and bit off a wad big enough to stop a rat-hole. Then he drew a plug of navy and nipped off a bit. He called the latter process "salting his fodder." After a few manches and dextrous twists of the tongue he settled the mixed quid in his cheek, and then he felt the inspiration of statesmanship upon him.

"Thinkers thing of expansion," he began, "is a good thing provided it's the right sort of expansion. I look at the thing this way: National expansion should be like the growth of cattle from calves upward, natural, healthy growth to maturity, and then put on the fat. If we must make a bigger frame to pack the flesh and fat around on there is Canada. To make her a part of the United States if she is willing would be natural, healthy growth because the people of Canada, by and by, will be as good as the people of ourselves; they would not get the nation any trouble nor be any expense to it. But if Dave Culbertson, of Texas, is right and we are done expanded with the How-are-you-Islands, the Pillspeens and Porter Reekers, with their niggers and other kinds of people who ain't white people and won't ketch up with white people in civilization in ten thousand years, why, I'm afraid it's a sort of expansion that ain't growth and is like the expansion of a little knobby-headed mountain bull I once knowed. D'ye ever hear the story? No? Well, here she goes.

"This bull was raised up in the mountains, and from climbin' cliffs to find peavine in summer and browse in the winter it got so it could mighty nigh climb a tree. A cattle trader getherin' up a bunch of cattle brought the bull for a lynch or nuthin' and fetched it along down into the Bluegrass. The drover stopped one night with a bluegrass farmer, and the little bull was put in a lot with a high fence around it, separatin' it from a clover field. That night the bull climed the fence and got into the clover. The next day they found him, and he was a sight to see. He had expanded, if a nader's grown any, but it was nearly all wind. Anybody could see he was in a power of misery and was unhealthy as he could be. His hide was tighter'n the head of a drum.

"The drover, the farmer and his work hands talked about what could be done to relieve the bull of his misery. The farmer 'bowed if somethin' holler like a tube could be used the gas would escape and the bull would soon get all right. But nothin' suitable could be found around the house. One of the work hands axed 'How'd the dinner horn do?' and 'ever' feller said 'That's the thing!' The gas was tapped, and roooot! too! too! went the dinner horn. The bull was the worst surprised animal you ever seen. He hopped to his feet as spry as a deer, let out a beller that jarred the winder lights in the house two hundred yards away, and lit out a-kickin' and a-runnin' with his tail over his back, and the horn a-tootin' ever jump like the steam whistle of a thrashin' machine engine. It was awful the way that bull beller and rippin' around, scared and mad and a-sufferin' all at the same time. There was a big pawnd in the field and the bull run in it and drowned himself before he could be got out.

"Now, fellers, I'm afear'd our sudden expansion is like the expansion of that clovered bull over night and may prove to be the swellin' from gas instid of natural growth."

FROM CALIFORNIA.—Monterey, Cal., April 22, 1900.—Ed. Owingsville Outlook, Owingsville, Ky.—Kind Friend: I will attempt to write you a few lines today. Thinking perhaps some of my old Ky. friends would love to hear from me, and knowing that my paper is read by most all my old friends and acquaintances, I will scribble these few lines.

Well, to begin with, I left a happy home expecting to see part of the U. S. and have a rough, tough time, and to some extent I have had it. I left home Jan. 20, 1900, and went to Louisville, Ky., and stayed there with my brother three days. Then left on the steamer John K. Speed. I will remember the boat, for I was on it eleven days, then landed at Vicksburg, Miss., almost tired to death. Then I went on to Bernice, La., where I stayed nearly three months working at a saw-mill and as a sypno on the Arkansas Southern R. R. Our foreman was a good man to work for, so I enjoyed my stay in Louisiana. Then I pulled for California, where I am now.

In going through Texas I saw plenty of prairie dogs and jack rabbits. I stopped at Tucson, Arizona, and while there was amusing to watch the Mexicans catching dogs. When a dog is out on the street without his master he is almost sure to go to the slaughter house, for the Mexicans know how to throw a lasso.

Then I came on to Yuma and saw more Indians than a few. I visited the old fort that is now an Indian school, then I crossed the desert, Western Arizona and Eastern California are a sandy desert; it's kind, blowing most of the day, and one does not dare put his head out of the car window or he will get more sand in his eyes than is comfortable.

When I arrived at Los Angeles I was very tired, but I took a good look at the place, for it was a beautiful city. About five miles west of Los Angeles oranges grow plentifully. As we went along I could see oranges rotting under the trees as apples do in father's orchard. Then the flowers! oh! so beautiful. They made me think of mother, for she loves flowers so. They were as lovely as any picture I ever saw. One can see more pretty flowers in California in one day than he can see in a year in Ky. But since I have been away from home I have seen no girls that can compare with the girls of good old Ky. in beauty and intelligence.

LONGING.—I've been getting lonesome each day since from my sweetheart I went away. I just mope about the place, wishing I could see her face; looking right in her eyes. And the look of glad surprise when I kiss her. Wish I could put my arms around her; "Would make me happy through and through. To hear her whisper 'I love you.'"

Yes, she lives in old Kentucky. Where the girls are bright and gay. And I had to be very plucky when from her I was away. "What's her age," did you say? I can't tell you to a day. But she is my little queen, Age about sweet sixteen.

Her eyes are blue and full of glee; Yes, I can see them yet.— The eyes of my little pet. She is the beauty of the East, So let me rest in peace, I will tell you more next time I about that girl of mine.

Then there is mother, oh! so true, Always watching for some good to do. She is loving, she is kind, She is the same dear mother all the time.

She can make my weary heart glad; When I was tired, sick and sad I would go to mother dear, She was always ready my heart to cheer.

I have worked but little since I have been in California, but part of the time I was at work I was splitting some of the large red wood timber up a canyon where one has to look nearly straight up to see out. While California is a very beautiful place it has some of the fieres here will light on one's ear or nose and all the blowing and shaking will not move them, but when you get mad and hit at it is off and gone and you almost knock your nose off. The fieres are very large. There are plenty of fieres here that will weigh a quarter of a pound.

Well, I think I will have written enough for this time. Will close. As ever, your best wishing friend, PLYN SWETNAM.
