The Sun a Foreigner.

uset" Cox's most successful sally at his opponents in congress was his resolutions against free sunshine, made when there was a fight on against lowering the duty on coal:

"Resolved, That all windows, skylights, inside and outside shutters, curtains and blinds shall be permanently closed, as also all openings; holes, chinks, clefts and fissures through which the light and heat of the sun have been allowed to enter houses, to the prejudice and injury of meritorious miners and dealers in gas coal, to protect domestic industry."

"For the sun is a foreigner," explained Mr. Cox. "He comes from abroad, and we must shut out the light of the sun in order to gratify these Pennsylvania gentlemen who have a monopoly of this article of coal."

Isaac and the Angel.

Old Isaac was a devout Christian, It was his custom when his work was done to retire to his cabin and devote himself to worship until bedtime. His earnest and frequent announcements that he was always ready to meet his "Lawd" had been so often heard that some boys decided to test Isane's faith. One night, while he was under full headway: "O Lawd, we know dy long suf'rin' fur dis beni'ted sinner, but we feel, O Lawd, dat in dy love we will be spahed dy vangins and raf. We are always reddy, Lawd, at dy biddin' to cum and meet dy angel Gabr'el. Send him, O Lawd, wid his shinin' trumpit, his robes ob glory and his crown ob life, and take dy poh sahvant into dy vineyard"-

"Isaac! Isaac!" came in deep sepulchral tones down the chimney. "Amen!" softly said Isaac, closing his prayer abruptly and rising, with fear and trembling. "Isaac! Isaac!" came the still dread-

When Helicon hall, Upton Sinclair's Utopian colony, burned down, among those injured was Mrs. Grace Mac-Gowan Cooke, the well known author. A youthful reporter on one of the big New York dailies, eager to get his story in the first edition, wrote hurriedly that "Grace MacGowan, the cook, suffered from serious burns." A Little Printer's Ink Makes Millions Think—Think—Think?

More truth than poetry. A little Printer's Ink prints a little advertisement in a little "magazine" that circulates at a little price and goes into a million little homes, chiefly in the little cities and towns and country places.

The millions of people in these homes are caused by the Printer's Ink to think that they can get big bargains for their money by sending it away by mail, ordering the things advertised by the little pinch of Printer's Ink.

Sometimes when they receive the stuff they order by mail they have another Think coming. They think, "What fools we mortals be," and apply the Think to themselves. And sometimes some of them think something like this:

"Wonder why Mister Man, our local dealer in many things we need, doesn't advertise these things in our local paper? Maybe if he did we wouldn't be tempted to send to the big city for these same things. If we were sure we could buy them at home for about the same price and have a chance to see the goods before taking, we think we'd prefer to buy them at home."

Now, Mister Man, what do you think-think-think?
