FREE TURNPIKES.

An Order Made by the Court of Claims Providing for Them.

The Court of Claims has been in session this week and almost the entire time has been occupied in allowing accounts. Yesterday the question of making the turnpikes of the county free of toll was under consideration, and an order was passed fixing the allowance per mile to be made to turnpikes in future, and providing that all pikes hereafter constructed shall be free of toll. Also that any non-dividend-bearing road now in existence may be declared free by the stockholders, and that upon the surrender of its charter the county will assume charge of and keep the same in repair.

The magistrates composing the court were entertained at dinner on Monday by County Clerk N. B. Smith, on Tuesday by Jailer Minus Williams, on Wednesday by Sheriff R. D. Armstrong and on Thursday by Coroner W. S. Dehoney.

What Lula Saw.

The following is from the pen of little Miss Gracia Walton Tilford, the ten-year-old daughter of Mr. Robert W. Tilford, of this city, and appeared in the Children's Department of the Louisville Times, on Saturday. The little lady will some day become an authoress of considerable ability if her genius increases with her years. She is also a musical prodigy, being able to play any tune she hears in a few minutes after upon the piano or banjo:

"Lula," said Henry, "let's go into the garden and play."

"All right," said Lula; "let's play tea party."

"Very well," said Henry, "come on and help take the things out."

So the children went out. They took with them such things as a table, two chairs, some cups, saucers, plates and other things. Henry took these things and Lula followed with bread and butter, cake, lemonade and tea, which mamma had given them. Then they began to play. Lula was a lady and wore mamma's old green silk skirt and yellow party slippers, and had a red fan and a wreath of yellow flowers on her head. Henry was a gentleman and had papa's coat and hat on and he had a cane, too. Just as they were getting through with their tea party mamma called Henry to go down town for her.

Before I go any farther I will tell you how the children looked. Lula had golden hair, fair complexion, white teeth and beautiful brown eyes. Henry had brown, curly hair and brown eyes. He had tan skin, red lips and white teeth.

Well, to go on with my story. Henry started down town and Lula was left alone with the flowers for company, and very good company they were, too. Lula sat down on the grass and gazed at the flowers and the flowers seemed to stare at her. All at once out of the violet there sprang a little lady. She was draped in purple and yellow, with a girdle that looked like dewdrops. And then, wonderful to tell, the johnny-jump-up opened wide and out hopped a little man, all dressed in purple and white. Then the Lily maiden came out white and fair and the Rose girl came out all clothed in red. Then the Daisy girl, dressed in white and yellow, and the Snowdrop maiden dressed in white and green; next the Poppy man, in dark red, and the Hyacinth girl in pink; the Narcissus lady in white and yellow, and all the rest came in their beautiful colors.

"When shall we begin to dance?" said a large lily.

"Oh, let's begin right now," said a pretty little bluebell.

"All right," said a large poppy man, who was king and had a beautiful rose girl leaning on his arm, for she was the queen. All at once from goodness knows where there came a little piano.

Two little lily girls took their seats at the piano and then began gay times. The poppy man and the rose lady took their seats on the throne and then all the others began to dance. The violet maiden and the johnny-jump-up man danced together, and the daisy girl and the lily man, and the tulip and the pansy, and all the rest got their partners.

Then they went to where the children had been planning tea party and began to eat. On the table were ice cream and cake, made of butterflies, eggs, fig milk and rose pollen. They had currents and berries for fruit, and at the last there were cups of coffee handed around. Then they all went to dancing again. Just as they were going to begin to dance someone shook Lula by the shoulders and Henry's voice said:

"Lula, wake up. I have been down town and got some cakes."

Lula woke and then she knew that it was all a dream. Lula often looked around and wondered if the flower fairies would not come back again, but they never did.

Nervous Prostration.

A large manufacturer, whose affairs were very much embarrassed and who was overworked and broken down with nervous exhaustion, went to a celebrated specialist. He was told that the only thing needed was to be relieved of care and worry, and have a change of thought. This doctor was more considerate of his patient's health than of his financial circumstances. He ought to have advised him to use Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine, the best remedy for nervous prostration, sleeplessness, dizziness, headache, ill effects of spirits, tobacco, coffee, opium, &c. Thousands testify to cures. Books and trial bottles free at J. W. Gayle's.

The Midland Changes Time.

The following changes are noted in the Midland time table, to take effect Sunday, the 18th:

No. 3 will leave at 4 p. m., ten minutes earlier than at present. There will be a regular Sunday train from Georgetown and Cincinnati at 11:35, and one from Frankfort to Georgetown and Cincinnati at 2:15 p. m. It is likely the 4 p. m. train will not connect at Georgetown with the Q. & C. train for Cincinnati. No. 7, leaving here at 1 o'clock, noon, will carry passengers for Cincinnati, arriving there at 6 p. m.

The excursion for Cincinnati will leave at 7 a. m. to-morrow as advertised.
